Franco Has Heart Attack

MADRID, Spain (AP) — Generalissimo Francisco Franco, Spain's ruler since the country was torn by the 1936-39 civil war, suffered "an acute coronary crisis" Tuesday, setting off rumors that a transfer of power to Prince Juan Carlos de Borbon was imminent.

A government announcement said the 82-year-old leader was recovering from a heart attack but gave no details.

The office of Premier Carlos Arias Navarro said reports abroad that Franco was dead were untrue.

In Washington, ABC News' State Department correspondent John Scali reported that Franco was dead. But the press officer at the Spanish embassy, Luis Escovar, said that at the moment Scali's report went on the air Franco was holding "a normal meeting" with the president of the Spanish government at El Pardo Palace outside Madrid.

One top level State Department official said U.S. sources in Spain confirmed the reports and he accepted this as confirmation of Franco's death. But another official with access to the same sources said it was advisable to wait for an official announcement in Madrid.

The seriousness of Franco's illness was underlined by two visits from Arias and a gathering of Franco's family at El Pardo. Included was Dr. Cristobal Martinez-Bordiu, Franco's son-in-law and a heart specialist.

Dr. Christiaan Barnard, the South African heart transplant pioneer, also was at the palace, but he left later for Johannesburg. He has been traveling through Europe.

Arias met with Franco for 95 minutes and then returned to his office. Franco summoned him again 40 minutes later to a meeting that lasted 45 minutes. Informed sources said Franco and the premier had discussed the possibility of a transfer of power.

A high diplomatic source described Franco's illness as grave and said that his recovery was expected to be slow. A highly reliable source said that a transfer of authority to his handpicked successor was not expected "for the moment."

Prince Juan Carlos remained in his own palace a few miles from El Pardo, a spokesman said.

Spanish law says that in the event of Franco's death, the Cortes (parliament) would have eight days to proclaim Juan Carlos king of Spain.

Doctors rushed to El Pardo Palace Monday night after Franco, weakened by a bout of flu, reportedly suffered inflamation of heart valves — endocarditis.

A government source denied reports the general was in an oxygen tent, had undergone a tracheotomy, had been incapacitated by the heart ailment or was dead. The source confirmed, however, that Franco's condition had been complicated by endocarditis.

The 37-year-old Juan Carlos, named by Franco six years ago to succeed as chief of state and Spain's first king since 1931, went through a normal work day. He met with the Spanish premier immediately after Arias' visit to Franco.

The prince also lunched with the president of the Spanish parliament, Alejandro Rodriguez de Valcarcel, who would play a key role in any transition of power.

Juan Carlos took over from Franco for 40 days in the summer of 1974 after Franco's near-fatal attack of phlebitis in his right leg. But Franco recovered after being hospitalized.

Political observers suggested a second transfer of power to the prince would be expected to be permanent.

Franco was first reported ill Friday from a mild attack of flu that forced him to leave cabinet meeting early. Doctors were reported to have detected a fluctuation in his heart beat then. The general was said to have improved over the weekend, walked around his palace and watched a soccer game on television.

The palace then said Franco was canceling military audiences scheduled for Tuesday. With the heart complication reported Tuesday, civilian audiences due Wednesday were dropped and doctors advised Franco to make no appointments for at least one week, informants said.

New Chief Defends Policemen

By GORDON WINTERS
Star Staff Writer

Lincoln policemen are "intelligent, mature young men trying their darndest to do a good job for the community," Police Chief George Hansen said Tuesday.

"It's high time responsible citizens . . . started talking from a positive position," Hansen told Rotarians at their regular meeting.

Last week at a police lineup Hansen told his men that he planned to use the Rotary Club engagement as a departure from the type of talks he has been giving since becoming chief three weeks ago.

'Out Of My Corner'

"If they say that I came out of my corner and started fighting for the department . . . they'll be right," Hansen told his men.

During his talk and in answering questions from the audience Hansen said that:

—Lincoln police have the "worst facility for this size department that I've ever seen."

—attacked critics who had argued that a briefing before a drug raid in which Sherdell Lewis was killed should not have included discussion on how Lewis had a gun and dogs.

—said blaming some police actions on a lack of training is a "copout."

—said he deplored recent statements from extremists on law enforcement.

Hansen said that the past six months have been "very traumatic" to police personnel.

Factors producing this trauma, he said, were the retirement of Joseph Carroll, Lincoln's police chief for the past 30 years, "two unfortunate shootings," the county attorney's investigations into those shootings, efforts to call a grand jury investigation into the Lewis shooting and the establishment of a police review board.

"If you don't think this has an impact on a department that works with people, you're mistaken," Hansen said.

Responding to critics who have argued that police psychologically prepared themselves to feel endangered before even going on the drug raid in which Lewis was killed by discussing Lewis' Doberman Pinschers and a report that he kept a gun by his chair, Hansen said:

"If I had information that a man had guns and a dog and didn't tell my men I'd be remiss in my duties and ought to be fired."

Safety Of All

Hansen added, however, that such a briefing should stress showing concern for the safety of both citizens and police.

Reports that police have been riding four to a car and harassing citizens who live in the neighborhood where Lewis was killed are untrue, Hansen said.

He said there were only normal patrols in areas "where trouble was expected." When trouble did break out, he said, the areas were saturated with patrol cars.

'Where There's Trouble'

Hansen also said that he plans to assign officers "where there is reason for them to be, where there is trouble."

Hansen said not all controversial police actions can be blamed on a lack of training.

"There isn't a police department in the country that doesn't need additional training and want additional training," he said. ". . . But you still have to keep men out on the streets."

In answer to a question from the audience, Hansen criticized police facilities located in the County-City Building.

"It's the most insecure place I've ever seen. I don't know how I could be more blunt," he said.

2 Kinds Of Letters

Hansen said he gets two types of correspondence from critics of the department. One type, he said, contends that police have low level mentalities and less training than police dogs. Hansen was obviously referring to a recent statement from Omaha State Sen. Ernest Chambers

Another type of correspondence is from people who claim that police have let gangs of blacks terrorize innocent white citizens.

"I deplore statements from the extremists on both sides," Hansen said.

He Was Just Wavin'

Lincoln firemen thought they were enroute to rescue a window washer when they went to the First National Bank Building at 12th & M Tuesday morning.

Instead, they found a window washer whose waving to a friend on the street below had been misinterpreted, by an office worker on the 20th floor where the man was working, as a distress signal.

Adams: FBI Man Knew Of Threat

WASHINGTON (AP) — A former assistant director of the FBI apparently was aware that Lee Harvey Oswald left a threatening note at the agency's Dallas office shortly before President John F. Kennedy was assassinated, a deputy associate FBI director said Tuesday.

The note has been destroyed and the official, James B. Adams said FBI employes presented conflicting information about the note's contents and its destruction

The note's existence was not revealed until last July.

Adams said former assistant FBI director William C. Sullivan reported learning of the note at the time of the assassination investigation from the agent who was directing the FBI office in Dallas.

But that agent, now retired, has denied any knowledge of the note, its destruction, or a visit by Oswald to the agency's office at which time the message was left, Adams said.

Adams testified under oath before the House Judiciary subcommittee on constitutional and civil rights.

He also said:

— He had no knowledge that Oswald, whom the Warren Commission said acted alone in killing Kennedy, or Jack Ruby, Oswald's assassin, were paid informants of the FBI or any other government agency.

— The only motive found for destruction of the note was a desire by the agent who received it to avoid embarrassing the bureau or himself.

— The Department of Justice decided the statute of limitations prohibited it from prosecuting any FBI employee for possible destruction or withholding of evidence. However, he said that conflicting reports the employes gave during interviews conceivably could lead to perjury charges and that FBI agents in Washington and Dallas have been disciplined in connection with their handling of assassination evidence.

He said destruction of the note violated FBI rules.

Adams said Sullivan, who was in charge of the agency's intelligence division, "said he thought it was common knowledge at FBI headquarters that a threatening message had been received from Oswald."

But two supervisers named by Sullivan as possibly knowing about the letter denied having any such information, Adams said.

Adams said Sullivan reported that the agent in charge of the Dallas office once mentioned that "he had an internal problem involving one of his agents who had received a threatening message from Oswald. But Sullivan never asked to see the message because there were "rumors galore" after the shooting, he said.

Adams said Sullivan also said the Dallas agent-in-charge "seemed disinclined to discuss the matter" except to say that it was being handled as a personal problem by an assistant to the late director of the FBI, J. Edgar Hoover.

Adams did not mention the Hoover assistant or Sullivan by name in his testimony but confirmed for reporters after the hearing that Hoover's assistant was John P. Mohr, who handled personnel and administrative matters. Similarly, he identified the assistant director as Sullivan.

Mohr, according to Adams, has denied any knowledge of the letter or any action taken on such information.

Mexican Doctor Left Out In Cold At Humboldt

By BOB GUENTHER
Star Staff Writer

A year and a half ago, Dr. Sergio O. Monarrez left his native Mexico City for the U.S., and specifically Humboldt, Neb., filled with the hope of someday becoming a medical researcher.

Today, Dr. Monarrez, the father of two, is jobless, disturbed by his treatment in Humboldt, trying to sell a home he can no longer afford and contemplating a return to his homeland.

Ironically, the one chance he has of staying in doctor-short rural Nebraska is being denied him but made available to two Vietnamese physicians also living in Humboldt.

Normally, rural areas are eager to offer a pediatrician like Dr. Monarrez aid in exchange for serving the community.

Failed English Test

The catch is that Dr. Monarrez has flunked an English proficiency exam (called the ECFMG) required of all foreign trained medical doctors before they can practice in the U.S.

It's not that Dr. Monarrez can't speak English. A 35-year-old with an M.D. from the University of Mexico City, Dr. Monarrez speaks English well but hasn't mastered it to the degree required of a doctor.

So when he came to Humboldt, he worked as a lab technician in the local hospital, studying English medical terms using an aged textbook during slow periods.

Unfortunately, the lab experience didn't give him the chance to learn English medical terminology. As a result, he failed the test, and the financially troubled Humboldt hospital laid him off.

A similar problem faced two Vietnamese physicians recruited by Humboldt.

But fortunately for the Vietnamese, federal and state officials made a year-long course available for them through the Omaha medical schools to teach them English.

Dr. Monarrez has asked to enroll in the class but was denied, basically because he is an immigrant and not a refugee like the Vietnamese.

Stan Porras, director of the State Mexican-American Commission, has asked Rep. John Y. McCollister to aid in enrolling Dr. Monarrez in the class. Porras also plans to ask the University of Nebraska Regents to intercede.

"The only salvation I can see is to get him into that class," Porras said.

In the meantime, Dr. Monarrez is hoping to find another community to sponsor him until he can pass the necessary exams.

Research Eyed

One reason he came to the U.S. is because he wants to do medical research in the future, and this country is the world leader in medical research.

But there was also a personal reason for coming to Nebraska. His wife, Frances, is a native of Pawnee City and wanted to return to the states.

"I didn't like Mexico," Mrs. Monarrez said.

As a result, Dr. Monarrez gave up his practice in Mexico City to take a chance on Humboldt.

"I didn't come here for the money; I came here for my wife," he said.

Mrs. Monarrez spoke bitterly as she explained that the community had conducted a drive to pay the Vietnamese's expenses but had done little for the Monarrez family.

Promises made them for transportation in moving, housing and a loan never materialized, she said.

"It's perfect for them (the Vietnamese)," she said. "The injustice is that nothing was done for us."

Regardless of the outcome of their current plight, Mrs. Monarrez said, "We're not staying in Humboldt."

Unless something changes, economics will force the Monarrez family to move back to Mexico.

Burbach To Fight Move For Quick Adjournment

By The Associated Press

Legislative Speaker Jules Burbach held to the belief Tuesday night that "there is absolutely no reason for the special session" of the Unicameral called by Gov. J. James Exon.

Despite that, Burbach said he would be against any move to have the Legislature adjourn sine die immediately after it convened at 3 p.m.

"I would oppose that motion just as tough as I could," Burbach said. "That motion, and I imagine it will come, will not pass."

Such a motion has been mentioned by Bellevue Sen. Frank Lewis and Lincoln Sen. Wally Barnett.

Burbach was echoed by Hastings Sen. Richard Marvel, chairman of the Appropriations Committee.

Procedures Discussed

Burbach and Marvel met with several other lawmakers Tuesday afternoon to discuss procedures for the special session, which Exon has called to ask lawmakers to trim selected current appropriations.

Marvel and Burbach said they wanted to make sure that all bills dealing with budget cuts had thorough public hearings.

"I can't tell you what the mood of the body will be, but I hope it will be deliberative," Burbach said.

Burbach said he hoped to meet with every senator prior to the session's opening "to discuss procedure, so I have an idea of what the body wants to do."

Cuts Supported

Marvel and Sen. Jerome Warner of Waverly said they would support selected budget cuts, after adequate public hearings.

"It seems to me that the governor has simply had a change of heart about how large he wants the appropriations to be," Warner said. "I thought the appropriations were too high when they were approved, but the governor did not use his line item veto to bring them down greatly."

Exon has said cutting appropriations could avoid "dramatic" increases in 1976 tax rates.

"At last he finally came around to the real question," Warner said. "Originally he said the special session was needed because of cash flow problems alone, but that is not true."

Other senators attending the Tuesday meeting included Ralph Kelly of Grand Island, Richard Lewis of Holbrook and Robert Clark of Sidney.

Three members of the fiscal staff also attended.

To Committees

Burbach said all bills would be reffered to standing committee, such as revenue and appropriations.

"The Legislature will not act as a committee of the whole," Burbach said.

Sources said the speaker was opposed to introduction of any bills other than those dealing with appropriations, but Burbach declined to comment on that.

Sen. Loran Schmit of Bellwood confirmed Tuesday he wished to introduce a bill that would allow the former John F. Kennedy College in Wahoo to become a veterans home.

10% Were Pregnant

Kansas City (AP) — Health officials report one out of 10 teenage girls in the city became pregnant last year. But because of abortions, either spontaneous or induced, only one in 14 of the city's 26,000 teenage girls gave birth to a child.

Confusion Surrounds Session

In a state of some confusion, the Legislature will convene in special session Wednesday to reconsider tax and spending policies.

Lawmakers will open the extraordinary session at 3 p.m.

Gov. J. James Exon, who summoned the senators back to Lincoln, will address the Unicameral and outline his proposals for meeting the state's cash flow problems and for heading off a sharp increase in 1976 tax rates.

Without legislative action, the governor has said, the state treasury would be unable to meet its obligations early next year and tax rates will rise dramatically.

Exon is proposing a 3% cut in funding for state agencies, earlier approved by the Legislature for fiscal 1975-76. That translates into $6.9 million.

In order to hold down 1976 tax rates, he will ask the lawmakers to temporarily waive the requirement for a 5% general reserve when the State Board of Equalization sets tax rates next month.

Senators gathered at the Statehouse Tuesday in advance of the opening session, huddling in small groups.

A number attended a late afternoon briefing by their own fiscal staff.

But the future course of the session seemed unpredictable.

Senators must stay in session at least seven days if they wish to enact any laws. But public hearings on alternative fiscal proposals could keep them in Lincoln much longer than that.

Franco Has Heart Attack

MADRID, Spain (AP) — Generalissimo Francisco Franco, Spain's ruler since the country was torn by the 1936-39 civil war, suffered "an acute coronary crisis" Tuesday, setting off rumors that a transfer of power to Prince Juan Carlos de Borbon was imminent.

Burbach To Fight Move For Quick Adjournment

By The Associated Press

Legislative Speaker Jules Burbach held to the belief Tuesday night that "there is absolutely no reason for the special session" of the Unicameral called by Gov. J. James Exon.

Despite that, Burbach said he would be against any move to have the Legislature adjourn sine die immediately after it convened at 3 p.m.

"I would oppose that motion just as tough as I could," Burbach said. "That motion, and I imagine it will come, will not pass."

Such a motion has been mentioned by Bellevue Sen. Frank Lewis and Lincoln Sen. Wally Barnett.

Burbach was echoed by Hastings Sen. Richard Marvel, chairman of the Appropriations Committee.

Procedures Discussed

Burbach and Marvel met with several other lawmakers Tuesday afternoon to discuss procedures for the special session, which Exon has called to ask lawmakers to trim selected current appropriations.

Marvel and Burbach said they wanted to make sure that all bills dealing with budget cuts had thorough public hearings.

"I can't tell you what the mood of the body will be, but I hope it will be deliberative," Burbach said.

Burbach said he hoped to meet with every senator prior to the session's opening "to discuss procedure, so I have an idea of what the body wants to do."

Cuts Supported

Marvel and Sen. Jerome Warner of Waverly said they would support selected budget cuts, after adequate public hearings.

"It seems to me that the governor has simply had a change of heart about how large he wants the appropriations to be," Warner said. "I thought the appropriations were too high when they were approved, but the governor did not use his line item veto to bring them down greatly."

Exon has said cutting appropriations could avoid "dramatic" increases in 1976 tax rates.

"At last he finally came around to the real question," Warner said. "Originally he said the special session was needed because of cash flow problems alone, but that is not true."

Other senators attending the Tuesday meeting included Ralph Kelly of Grand Island, Richard Lewis of Holbrook and Robert Clark of Sidney.

Three members of the fiscal staff also attended.

To Committees

Burbach said all bills would be reffered to standing committee, such as revenue and appropriations.

"The Legislature will not act as a committee of the whole," Burbach said.

Sources said the speaker was opposed to introduction of any bills other than those dealing with appropriations, but Burbach declined to comment on that.

Sen. Loran Schmit of Bellwood confirmed Tuesday he wished to introduce a bill that would allow the former John F. Kennedy College in Wahoo to become a veterans home.

10% Were Pregnant

Kansas City (AP) — Health officials report one out of 10 teenage girls in the city became pregnant last year. But because of abortions, either spontaneous or induced, only one in 14 of the city's 26,000 teenage girls gave birth to a child.

Confusion Surrounds Session

In a state of some confusion, the Legislature will convene in special session Wednesday to reconsider tax and spending policies.

Lawmakers will open the extraordinary session at 3 p.m.

Gov. J. James Exon, who summoned the senators back to Lincoln, will address the Unicameral and outline his proposals for meeting the state's cash flow problems and for heading off a sharp increase in 1976 tax rates.

Without legislative action, the governor has said, the state treasury would be unable to meet its obligations early next year and tax rates will rise dramatically.

Exon is proposing a 3% cut in funding for state agencies earlier approved by the Legislature for fiscal 1975-76. That translates into $6.9 million.

In order to hold down 1976 tax rates, he will ask the lawmakers to temporarily waive the requirement for a 5% general reserve when the State Board of Equalization sets tax rates next month.

Senators gathered at the Statehouse Tuesday in advance of the opening session, huddling in small groups.

A number attended a late afternoon briefing by their own fiscal staff.

But the future course of the session seemed unpredictable.

Senators must stay in session at least seven days if they wish to enact any laws. But public hearings on alternative fiscal proposals could keep them in Lincoln much longer than that.

CIA Men Opened, Read 215,820 Letters

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Central Intelligence Agency opened and read more than 215,000 letters to and from the Soviet Union over 20 years despite advice the operation was illegal and worthless, former CIA officials testified Tuesday.

They told the Senate intelligence committee that they filed reports with top CIA officials in 1961 and 1969 saying the program was of little value but the clandestine mail openings continued until 1973.

One witness, Howard J. Osborne, former director of security for the CIA, also said that he was misled by CIA director Richard Helms and other top agency officials about the nature of a mail opening project at the San Francisco post office.

Osborne said he had been led to believe agents were merely photographing the outsides of envelopes coming from "a country in the Far East."

He said he later learned that many of the letters actually were opened and their contents read and photographed.

In a deposition read into the record, Osborne also said he warned his CIA superiors to close down the full mail-opening project.

"This thing is illegal as hell and we ought to knock it off right now in the light of the Watergate climate," Osborne said.

He said agency officials recognized that disclosure would be a tremendous embarrassment to the agency, especially during Watergate.

"In light of some of the disclosures during Watergate it came to the attention of CIA officials that the government shouldn't do things that were illegal," Osborne testified.

Chairman Frank Church, D-Idaho, made public CIA documents showing that from 1953 through 1983 CIA agents opened and photographed the contents of 215,820 letters sent to and from the Soviet Union.

Of these, 57,846 were sent to the FBI, 31,436 were sent to the Soviet division of the CIA, and 57,804 were sent to other CIA departments.

Osborne said that his connection with the operation was to provide the manpower and assistance that kept it going.

"They built the Cadillac and they drove it," he said of his CIA superiors. "I maintained it. I greased it and I changed the oil. I had no authority to say where it was going."

In response to a question, Osborne said: "The maintenance was very good. The product was worthless as far as my opinion went."

Thomas Abernathy said that in February 1961, as a member of the CIA Inspector General's office, he prepared a study showing that no tangible operational benefits have accrued from the Soviet mail opening hroject.

John Glennon conducted a similar study in 1969, which reached an identical conclusion.

"We assumed everybody realized it was illegal," Glennon testified when asked why his report hadn't dwelt on that point.

Gordon Stewart, who was the chief inspector general in 1969, said he understood that Helms, now U.S. ambassador to Iran, knew the mail opening project was illegal.

Helms was sitting in the front room of the hearing om audience as Stewart testified. He is scheduled to testify on the matter Wednesday.

Church said the testimony presents the clearest example which can be drawn "that the CIA lives outside the law and although all others must obey the law the CIA sits above it."

"You can't run a free society that way," Church said.

Church also said CIA director William E. Colby is "way off base" in contending that investigations of alleged CIA wrongdoing are repetitive and are destroying the country's ability to gather intelligence.

"I hope we won't let a smokescreen obscure the importance of the investigation," Church told reporters.

Chairman Mao Summons Kissinger For Long Talk

PEKING (AP) — Communist party Chairman Mao Tse-tung summoned Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger to his home Tuesday for a talk that was seen as a sign he is pleased with Kissinger's visit to China.

The secretary spent one hour and 40 minutes with the 81-year-old Chinese leader, an unusually long time for a meeting with Mao. Before his talk with Kissinger, Mao greeted other members of the American delegation and Mrs. Kissinger.

The chairman was described as frail, reflecting his nearly 82 years, but not infirm. The impression was that his mind is active and alert, with no indication of senility.

Both Chinese and American spokesman declined to give details of the conversation. The Chinese side said the two "had a conversation in a friendly atmosphere" and covered "a wide range of questions."

A Kissinger spokesman said only that "the secretary found the meeting very useful."

The surprise invitation to meet Mao came while Kissinger was conferring with Deputy Premier Teng Hsiao-ping.

A major object of Kissinger in three days of talks has been to assure the Chinese that the policy of detente with the Soviet Union is not a plot against China and that the United States has not been fooled into complacency by the Soviet Union.

Another key matter has been to complete arrangements for President Ford's journey to China late next month. The Chinese statement issued after the talk with Kissinger quoted Mao as sending his regards to Ford, an obvious sign that the trip is on and ending any anxiety on that point.

The lateness of the meeting with Mao, from 6:30 p.m. to 8:10 p m. Peking time, forced Kissinger to miss a reception in his honor given by the American Liaison Mission in Peking. He attended a dinner at the home of the head of the liaison office, George Bush, but canceled a background briefing with American reporters, apparently to avoid questions about his meeting with Mao.

Butz Says It's 'A Good Deal'

CHICAGO (AP) — Agriculture Secretary Earl Butz on Tuesday characterized the long-term grain agreement with the Soviet Union as a good deal for all concerned — farmers, consumers, the Japanese and the free enterprise system.

The agreement announced Monday "will tend to even out grain purchases" and help level off widely fluctuating farm prices, Butz said at a news conference. "I think this is a good deal."

The pact commits Russia to buying a minimum of six million metric tons of corn and wheat annually for five years beginning next October. In addition, the Soviet Union now is free to buy up to seven million more tons of American grain between now and Sept. 30, 1976.

In return, the agreement provides for the United States to purchase up to 10 million metric tons of oil a year from the Soviets. A metric ton contains 2,205 pounds.

Butz said the pact will have practically no inflationary impact on U.S. food prices and probably will help keep them down.

He said that if there were no such agreement, American farmers, faced with fluctuating export demands, would find it difficult to produce at a steady and maximum rate. This instability, Butz said, would inevitably present consumers with higher food prices.

He indicated at the news conference that he sees no conflict between this philosophy and the government's role in the grain deal.

Leaders of major farm organizations have called the agreement "government dictatorship" and "an apparent trend toward government domination of international trade in agricultural commodities."

The agreement "sets parameters for one customer who has been an erratic customer," the agriculture secretary said. "This is primarily to protect our free market to our regular customers . . . Japan in particular."

"This is a move in the direction of maintaining a free market," he said. "I oppose firmly (a wider) international grain agreement."

In other grain-related developments Tuesday:

— Asst. Agriculture Secretary Richard E. Bell told reporters in Washington that Russia will probably need to import about 30 million tons of grain from all sources in 1975-76.

— Cook Industries Inc. of Memphis, one of the nation's biggest grain exporters, said it is ready to sell more grain to Russia if the Russians want to buy it.

So far this year, Cook and two other major grain exporters have sold 9.8 million metric tons of wheat and corn to the Soviet Union.

Case Wants Deal Treated As A Treaty

Washington (UPI) — Sen. Clifford P. Case, R-N.J., urged Tuesday that the U.S.-Soviet grain agreement be submitted to the Senate for ratification as a treaty because of its major international importance.

Case, ranking Republican on the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, said in a statement, "The nature, term and size of the agreement make it a national commitment beyond the proper competence of the President acting alone.

"Accordingly, it should be submitted to the Senate for ratification as a treaty."

Senate Okays Compromise To Limit Winter Gas Price

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate approved a compromise Tuesday to limit the price that natural gas producers may charge for the scarce fuel this winter.

The ceiling, which was approved by a 42-37 vote, would vary from state to state.

It would apply only to gas sold under emergency conditions this winter, and for the first time would extend federal price controls to natural gas sold in the same state where it is produced.

The compromise amendment, by Sens. Ernest F. Hollings, D-S.C., and John H. Glenn, D-Ohio, marked another step in Congress' efforts to write an emergncy bill to avert a predicted serious shortage of gas, especially in 14 states, this winter.

Attempts to win rush approval of the emergency bill have been slowed by Republican insistence that the legislation also include provisions gradually removing all federal controls from the price of natural gas.

All sides have agreed to take a final Senate vote on the bill, apparently with the provisions repealing price controls, by Friday afternoon. But leaders in the House, which has yet to consider the measure, predict the final version sent to President Ford will deal only with the short-term emergency and not with long-range price controls.

Under terms of the Glenn-Hollings amendment adopted Tuesday, gas-short interstate pipelines would be allowed to buy small quantities of gas temporarily at the highest price paid in each producing state in June and July of this year.

Sponsors of the amendment say this would mean a field price ranging from about $1.30 per thousand cubic feet (mcf) to about $2.

By contrast, the gas that is supplied to most American homes and factories now sells in the field for an average of about 32 cents per mcf. The price of this gas, known as "interstate' gas, is held down by federal controls, which do not apply now to the "intrastate" gas that is sold in the state where it is produced.

Senators from gas-producing states opposed the price ceiling on grounds it would involve the federal government in the price of intrastate gas for the first time.

These senators and most Republicans sought to avoid all price ceilings on emergency sales this winter — a move that Hollings and his backers say would have resulted in a $3 or $4 price for gas.

The immediate consumer impact of the higher gas prices was sharply reduced by the Senate with approval of two amendments on Monday.

One amendment requires industries and other large users to bear the full cost increase arising from emergency gas sales this winter.

The other postpones until next April 4, the end of the emergency period, any long-range plan for total removal of price controls from natural gs.

Judge Orders Ford To Provide Deposition For Fromme Defense

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — A federal court judge on Tuesday ordered President Ford to give a video-taped deposition as a defense witness for Lynette "Squeaky" Fromme, who is charged with attempting to assassinate the President.

U.S. District Court Judge Thomas McBride said Ford could be questioned by Miss Fromme's court-appointed co-counsel, John Virga, "at the White House or any other place that is convenient for the President."

In Washington, White House spokesman Ron Nessen said Ford would have no comment on MacBride's order "because the matter is being handled by the Justice Department."

Asst. U.S. Atty. Donald Heller, who is assisting in the prosecution of the case here, said he anticipated that arrangements for taking the deposition would be made within a week.

At a day-long hearing before MacBride on Tuesday, Miss Fromme petitioned for a subpoena ordering Ford to appear personally at her trial. But MacBride turned town that petition.

MacBride earlier ruled that Miss Fromme, a disciple of convicted mass murderer Charles Manson, could act as her own attorney along with Virga.

She was arrested Sept. 5 after pointing a loaded .45-caliber automatic at Ford as he walked near the California Capitol on a trip to Sacramento. The gun did not go off.

Before the hearing, Virga said, "One of the prosecution's main points is that the gun clicked. Our contention is that it never happened. President Ford was one of the people who was in the best position to say . . . his testimony could be very significant on the issue of whether or not she actually intended to kill him."

"I think if you put a gun in my face, I would remember, and I think I would remember much more than the guys next to me," Virga said.

U.S. Atty. Dwayne Keyes argued that Ford's testimony would not be necessary because there were other witnesses to the assassination attempt.

Keyes read from an affidavit Ford filed with the FBI in which the President said, "I have no recollection of hearing the woman say anything or hearing the gun click."

Keyes said Ford could add nothing to that statement and accused Miss Fromme of seeking publicity by petitioning to have Ford as a witness.

But Virga responded that any defendant has a constitutional right to call any witness considered necessary to the defense. He said it would be valuable for him to personally question Ford and said that putting the President's testimony on video tape would allow jurors to hear his words and see his expressions.

Now They Can Drink In Iowa Side's Bar

LINEVILLE, Iowa (AP) — Folks in Lineville don't have to cross the street to Missouri to have a drink anymore. A tavern finally opened on the Iowa side.

"We did get tired of seeing our money go to the other side of the street," says Ruth Owens, a member of the Lineville City Council.

The community sits on the Iowa-Missouri state line with Lineville in Iowa and South Lineville in Missouri.

For years, the 385 people on the Iowa side had been running to the 52 people on the Missouri side to buy such illegal things as whisky and fireworks.

The tavern business was built on the south side of the state line in Missouri because that state had more liberal liquor laws. But in the summer of 1974, things began to change.

First, the lone tavern collapsed.

"It just fell flat down, all of her," said Harold Craig. "The way it was leaning, everybody thought it was going to fall to the south, but instead it just fell straight in."

Craig, 50, and Jim Perkins, 43, a retired Air Force veteran, opened the Little Road Side Tavern on the Iowa side.

Then the Iowa Legislature lowered the legal drinking age to 18. Now the traffic on U.S. Highway 65 is coming from the Missouri side, where 18- to 20-year-olds cannot buy beer or liquor legally.

"They're coming over to our side of the street for the first time," says Councilwoman Owens, who hopes Lineville can do something about its pothole streets with the tax revenue it gets from the new tavern.

Keyes said Ford could add nothing to that statement and accused Miss Fromme of seeking publicity by petitioning to have Ford as a witness.

But Virga responded that any defendant has a constitutional right to call any witness considered necessary to the defense. He said it would be valuable for him to personally question Ford and said that putting the President's testimony on video tape would allow jurors to hear his words and see his expressions.

Now They Can Drink In Iowa Side's Bar

LINEVILLE, Iowa (AP) — Folks in Lineville don't have to cross the street to Missouri to have a drink anymore. A tavern finally opened on the Iowa side.

"We did get tired of seeing our money go to the other side of the street," says Ruth Owens, a member of the Lineville City Council.

The community sits on the Iowa-Missouri state line with Lineville in Iowa and South Lineville in Missouri.

For years, the 385 people on the Iowa side had been running to the 52 people on the Missouri side to buy such illegal things as whisky and fireworks.

The tavern business was built on the south side of the state line in Missouri because that state had more liberal liquor laws. But in the summer of 1974, things began to change.

First, the lone tavern collapsed.

"It just fell flat down, all of her," said Harold Craig. "The way it was leaning, everybody thought it was going to fall to the south, but instead it just fell straight in."

Craig, 50, and Jim Perkins, 43, a retired Air Force veteran, opened the Little Road Side Tavern on the Iowa side.

Then the Iowa Legislature lowered the legal drinking age to 18. Now the traffic on U.S. Highway 65 is coming from the Missouri side, where 18- to 20-year-olds cannot buy beer or liquor legally.

"They're coming over to our side of the street for the first time," says Councilwoman Owens, who hopes Lineville can do something about its pothole streets with the tax revenue its gets from the new tavern.

Prince Of Spain May Have Lost Favor With Liberals

By JULIE FLINT

MADRID, Spain (AP) — Prince Juan Carlos de Borbon, the man marked to lead Spain as king after Gen. Francisco Franco, may have lost favor with liberals by his close public association with the government during a furor over the execution of convicted terrorists, diplomats and opposition politicians say.

The 37-year-old prince stood at Franco's side on Oct. 1 as the generalissimo spoke to a cheering throng gathered to demonstrate approval of the executions of five men convicted of killing policemen.

There had been speculation in the days before that Juan Carlos would not show up for the occasion but informants said Franco, the prince and others went directly to the ceremony from a reception marking the 39th anniversary of Franco's rise to power. These sources indicated the prince had little choice.

Last week, Juan Carlos began flying around the country meeting the people in an effort to remove whatever stain may have been left by the executions. He went to three villages, stayed an hour or less in each but had nothing to say of any significance, according to reports of his trips.

A spokesman said the three trips were the first of a stepped-up schedule of public appearances for the prince.

The newspaper Nuevo Diario publishd a front-page editorial praising the prince as "the king of a modern state needs for democracy and responsible liberty."

But western diplomats said privately they believed Juan Carlos' close identification with Franco had been very damaging. One high-ranking diplomat predicted that the prince would last no more than two months after Franco. Until recently, the diplomat said, he gave him six months.

Opposition politicians hoping for a voice in a post-Franco Spain say they now are increasingly disenchanted with the liberal-minded prince, a political shadow in the six years since being named Franco's heir designate and future king.

"After Juan Carlos stood in as acting head of state during Franco's illness last year, we were prepared to give him six months to demonstrate good faith toward a program of liberalization," said a member of the opposition Democratic Junta.

"Now we think it would be a waste of time."

Franco handed power over to Juan Carlos for 40 days in the summer of 1974 and during that period, the government ran smoothly. Opponents of the regime, guerrillas included, did nothing to complicate things.

Privately, Juan Carlos has attempted to gain some distance from Franco by declaring that he can do nothing while Franco lives. "I know I am it," he once told an interviewer. "It would be foolish for me to do or say anything now."

The prince's public speeches have hinted at a desire for basic change. He has vowed to be "king of all Spaniards," presumably moderates and leftists too. He has taken pains to keep in close contact with the army, especially young officers with a desire for democracy.

Behind his caution is an awareness that Franco can, at any time, revoke his designation and appoint another successor, perhaps Juan Carlos' first cousin, Alfonso de Borbon y Sampierre, married to Franco's granddaughter.

Juan Carlos' father, the 62-year-old Count of Barcelona, also lays claim to the throne vacant since his father, the late Alfonso XIII, abdicated in 1931. The count, a liberal who broke with Franco 28 years ago and chose exile in Portugal, is accepted by some Spanish leftists but only if he follows his pledge to establish democracy in Spain.

Juan Carlos was born in Rome on Jan. 5, 1938, during the forced exile of his grandfather, King Alfonso.

At the end of World War II, his father moved the family to Portugal where the young prince grew up.

In August 1948, the count met with Franco on a yacht in the Bay of Biscay and agreed to send his son to be educated in Spain.

Three months later, at age 10, the young prince arrived in Spain for the first time. His education, however, was disrupted by a quarrel between Franco and his father which forced him to return to Portugal for a year in 1949, and the death of his younger brother Alfonso, who accidentally shot himself in 1956, at age 14.

After completing his secondary education, Juan Carlos enrolled for a two-year law course at Salamanca University. This enraged the leaders of Opus Dei, the then politically powerful lay Roman Catholic organization, who sent a delegation to visit him and persuade him that Salamanca was a hotbed of liberalism, even radicalism.

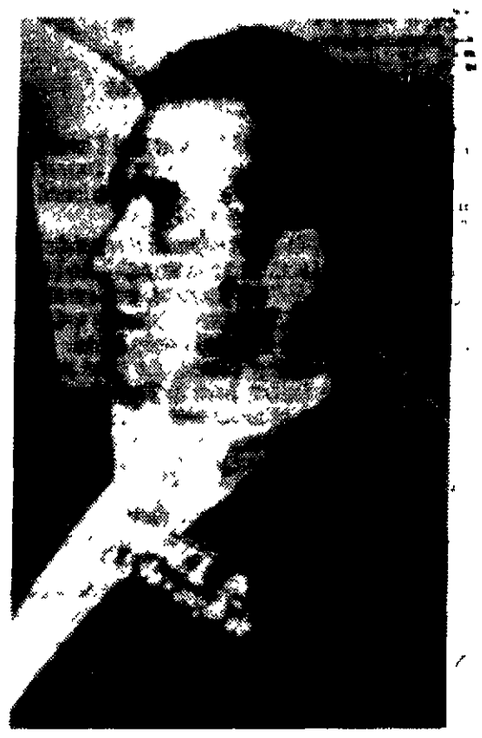
Juan Carlos agreed to turn himself over to Opus Dei tutors and in so doing enraged his own tutor, who resigned in umbrage. The prince then sought out a compromise — education with Augustinian friars and professors from Madrid University.

In the summer of 1961, the tall, bold prince met Princess Sophia of Greece on an Aegean cruise organized by Sophia's mother, Queen Frederika. In May 1962, they married in Athens and now have two girls, Elena and Sofia, and a son and heir, Felipe.

To develop a feel for the details of government, Juan Carlos worked in every government ministry and began to travel abroad, bolstered by a knowledge of English, French, Portuguese and Italian.

On July 22, 1969, Franco named Juan Carlos as future king. The prince, who had once said publicly he would not accept a throne his father wanted, was eminently obedient to the demands made upon him chiefly taking a load of protocol off Franco's shoulders.

He declared that "the monarchy can and must be an effective instrument as a political system," but was largely excluded from political life until Franco fell seriously ill in 1974.



JUAN CARLOS . . . to be king.

Import Barriers Nixed

Washington — The International Trade Commission, in its first ruling under the revised "escape clause" provision of the sweeping 1974 trade law, ruled Tuesday against new import barriers as a means of relief for the domestic industry making birch plywood door skins.

Sadat To Ask Aid

New York — Egypt's President Anwar Sadat is expected to ask for between $5 billion and $7 billion in arms aid when he visits the United States, according to government sources. His shopping list is said to include F16 fighters, sophisticated radar for Mig 23s, air to air missiles and surface to air missiles.

Ford Program Blasted

Washington — Budget Director James T. Lynn ran into severe criticism from Republicans as well as Democrats when he went before the Senate Budget Committee to explain the Ford administration's program to tie a spending reduction to a tax cut. The criticism from the members of President Ford's own party was led by Sen. Henry Bellmon of Oklahoma, the committee's ranking Republican, and Sen. Robert Dole of Kansas, a former chairman of the Republican National Committee.

Ford Sinus Clearing

Washington — President Ford showed signs of substantial recovery from a sinus infection and a head cold that has confined him to the White House for the last few days. However, his wife, Betty, began displaying cold symptoms. Ron Nessen, Ford's spokesman, said that the President would probably follow a light work schedule for the balance of the week.

Hospital Dedicated

Jerusalem — Some 3,000 persons gathered on the sun-bleached summit of Mount Scopus Tuesday morning for the dedication of a new $40-million Hadassah University hospital designed to serve both the Arab and Jewish residents of east Jersualem.

Wine Causes Death

Hong Kong — More than a dozen people have died and scores have been hospitalized here in recent months as a result of drinking adulterated Chinese wines, the first such outbreak in almost 20 years.

Guarantees Considered

Washington — The Senate Banking Committee has voted 7 to 6 to consider legislation that would provide $6 billion in loan guarantees to New York City. The measure, however, would require the state to levy $420 million in new taxes and place the city's fiscal management under a three-member federal board headed by Treasury Secretary William E. Simon. Supporters said that without the stringent measures, the bill would stand no chance of getting out of committee.

Board Suggests Cuts

New York — New York City officials have disclosed, with ill-disguised resentment, that the state Emergency Financial Control Board has recommended severe cuts in city construction projects still under way.

Postal Service Halted

Ottawa — A strike of postal workers brought Canadian mail services to a complete halt. The strike may last for three months.

Deduction For Gasoline Tax Still Allowed

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House Ways and Means Committee reversed itself Tuesday and voted to let some 20 million taxpayers continue to take a federal itemized tax deduction for state and local taxes they pay on gasoline.

Congressional tax experts said repeal of this nonbusiness tax deduction would have hiked taxes on American motorists by $4.08 billion over the coming six years and reduced gasoline consumption by 60,000 barrels of oil daily.

By voice vote, reversing its 17 to 6 decision of Oct. 8, the committee agreed to knock out of its wide-ranging tax revision package a proposed repeal of the deduction for state and local taxes paid on gasoline and other motor fuel, starting Jan. 1

An AFL-CIO spokesman has said that for a $15,000-a-year working family that drives 20,000 miles each year elimination of the deduction would have been the equivalent to increasing the price of gasoline by approximately 1.5 cents per gallon.

An itemizer can deduct state and local taxes paid for purchase of gasoline, diesel fuel and other motor fuels. The item varies from state to state.

Paperworkers To Strike Mill For Wage Hike

SAINT JOHN, New Brunswick (AP) — The Canadian Paperworkers Union said its workers will strike the MacMillan Rothesay Ltd. newsprint mill here Thursday to back demands for a new labor contract.

MacMillan Rothesay is a unit of MacMillan Bloedel Ldt. of Vancouver.

The union said it plans to strike seven other pulp, paper and linerboard mills in New Brunswick, Nova Scotia and Newfoundland within the next two weeks.

The CPU has 500 members at the MacMillan Rothesay mill, which produced 370 tons of newsprint a day.

Subway Collision Toll Is 26

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Fifty engineers and 300 technicians worked overnight to clear the wreckage of two subway trains and learn the cause of the Monday crash that left 26 persons dead and 55 injured.

Service returned to normal on the subway, known as the Metro, Tuesday morning.

A special commission named by Mayor Octavio Senties Gomez to determine the reason for the accident was expected to report its findings Wednesday. The mayor said it appeared the accident resulted from "a combination of technical and human failures."

The Collective Transportation System, the government agency that runs the subway, said the experts spent 19 hours moving the tracks and collecting evidence.

A spokesman for the federal attorney's office said Carlos Fernandez Sanchez, engineer of the train that crashed into a stopped train, was being questioned.

Red Cross officials reported Monday that Fernandez Sanchez told them he jumped from his cabin when he saw he could not stop his train in time to avoid the collision.

Subway spokesmen said the French-designed Metro is considered "the best in the world." The trains roll on silent rubber wheels through stations adorned with colored tile, sculptures of national heroes and relics from Aztec ruins. Each day it carries nearly two million passengers who pay only 8 cents to ride the three lines.

Iowa College Chiefs Say Enrollments Up

Des Moines (UPI) — The Association of Iowa College Presidents announced that enrollments at Iowa's higher education facilities increased by 7.6% this fall.

About 122,050 students were enrolled at Iowa's colleges and universities this term, which is an increase of 8,678 students, officials said.

Curried Chicken Croquettes

¼ cup butter
¼ cup flour
½ tsp. salt
⅛ tsp. pepper
¾ cup milk
1 cup 3-MINUTE BRAND OATS
2 cups cooked chicken
1 egg, beaten
1½ cup dry bread crumbs
Oil for deep fat frying

Sauce
10½ oz. can cream of mushroom soup
1 cup light cream
1 Tbsp. lemon juice
½ tsp. curry powder

Melt butter in saucepan. Stir in flour, salt and pepper. Slowly add milk, stirring constantly. Cook over medium heat until mixture has thickened. Remove from heat and stir in oats and chicken. Cool thoroughly. Shape into eight croquettes. Roll each croquette in flour, then dip in egg and finally into bread crumbs. Heat frying oil to 375° F. Fry the croquettes until they are golden brown, (about 2½ to 3 minutes). Turn the croquettes during frying. Drain on paper towels to remove excess oil.

Combine all of the ingredients for the sauce. Heat to boiling. Remove from heat and serve over the hot croquettes.

The more you eat, the more you save! Start now.

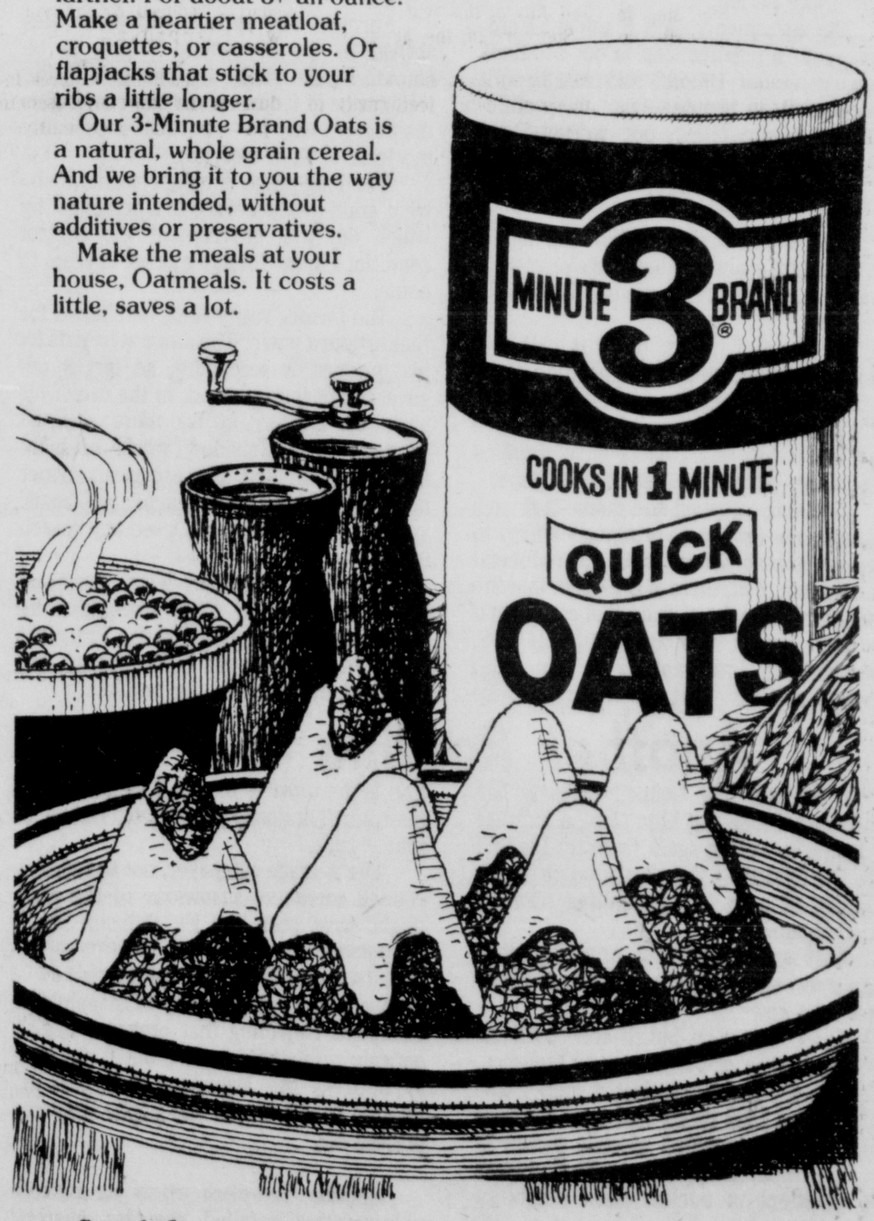
Our oatmeal is more than a good, warm breakfast. If you add a cup when you're cooking or baking, food goes a little farther. For about 3¢ an ounce! Make a heartier meatloaf, croquettes, or casseroles. Or flapjacks that stick to your ribs a little longer.

Our 3-Minute Brand Oats is a natural, whole grain cereal. And we bring it to you the way nature intended, without additives or preservatives.

Make the meals at your house, Oatmeals. It costs a little, saves a lot.



Curried Chicken Croquettes

¼ cup butter
⅛ cup flour
½ tsp. salt
⅛ tsp. pepper
¾ cup milk
1 cup 3-MINUTE BRAND OATS
2 cups cooked chicken
1 egg, beaten
1½ cup dry bread crumbs
Oil for deep fat frying

Sauce
10½ oz. can cream of mushroom soup
1 cup light cream
1 Tbsp. lemon juice
½ tsp. curry powder

Melt butter in saucepan. Stir in flour, salt and pepper. Slowly add milk, stirring constantly. Cook over medium heat until mixture has thickened. Remove from heat and stir in oats and chicken. Cool thoroughly. Shape into eight croquettes. Roll each croquette in flour, then dip in egg and finally into bread crumbs. Heat frying oil to 375° F. Fry the croquettes until they are golden brown, (about 2½ to 3 minutes). Turn the croquettes during frying. Drain on paper towels to remove excess oil.

Combine all of the ingredients for the sauce. Heat to boiling. Remove from heat and serve over the hot croquettes.

The more you eat, the more you save! Start now.

Many Nebraskans A Pride To Their Native State

Among Our Famous Ones

Lincoln, Neb.

It makes me proud to know that I have lived in Nebraska most of my days. A nephew living in Denver visited me and I told him about Arbor Day. He had never heard of it, and wanted to know if it was a national holiday.

We in Nebraska can be proud of our state for Arbor Day and for the many great men and women born here. There was the great sculptor, Gutzon Borglum, who carved the faces of our presidents on Mt. Rushmore. There are writers and movie stars and the man who designed Coney Island.

There is Johnny Carson, the great comedian. There are writers Willa Cather, born in Red Cloud, and Bess Streeter Aldrich, author of many best sellers. Joe Feeney, Lawrence Welk's Irish tenor, was born in Grand Island. There was Mari Sandoz, who wrote "Old Jules," called "the Burbank of the Sandhills."

J. Sterling Morton was the first secretary of state for Nebraska. His home in Nebraska City was left as a shrine for the state. His orchards had all kinds of fruit, the best-tasting apples to be found any place. He brought his young bride from the East to the raw state of Nebraska. How they must have loved it here.

Down On Courts

Blair

We have a problem in Flair and Washington County with a purported "wheeling and dealing" county court and prosecutor. The problem is consistent with that expressed by President Ford, Attorney General Levi and millions of Americans who want a return to "equal justice" and an end to "permissive courts, prosecutors and criminal lawyers."

What can be done to effect such a change in Nebraska? I have tried our Nebraska attorney general and our state court administrator. I received a little double talk and the fast brush off. Are courts as now constituted above the law?

The Missouri Plan is fine for the selection of replacements for judges who resign or who die. But the selection of judges who choose to remain in their job should be made by the voters on a competitive basis, like once prevailed in this state.

Let's Help Our Own

Sutton, Neb.

America for years has helped all over the world. Now we have one of our own — New York City — in need of help. There are aged and young there, men and women.

How much better this year to give to one of our own in need instead of sending it away where we never know what it is used for.

It is time we Americans start helping Americans, for they have helped build this great nation.

Let's send our pennies, dimes and dollars to the mayor of New York City. Let us as Americans join hands and help our own.

He Doesn't Like Cats

Lincoln, Neb.

Why do people always try to shift the blame for their own inadequacies? In regard to the letter, "Thoughtless Act," in the Oct. 16 Star, if the owner of the "large beautiful Persian" would just have kept his cat home where it belonged, it would not have been hit by a car.

After having had to remove our children's sand box after it became the neighborhood cat toilet, and having several times put my hand into cat #%@?!!! in my flower garden, I can muster up no sympathy whatsoever for someone whose wandering cat was hit by a car.

A Call For Fairness

Lincoln, Neb.

The people who are concerned about the death of Sherdell Lewis will not settle down until something is done. We are not going to let Ron Lahners or anybody else run over us. We will fight for what we think is right.

Lincoln is a nice town in which to live and bring up a child. You can send your child to a store or a show and be pretty sure he will return. Very rarely do we hear about a stabbing, killing or kidnapping in Lincoln. We don't want it to start happening and we don't want to have to start carrying guns and knives to protect ourselves as well as our children.

I was born and raised here and plan to raise my daughter here. This is a pretty safe town. Let's keep it that way.

We want things to be fair in what is decided about the shooting of Sherdell Lewis. If nothing is done, I am very much afraid many more innocent people will be hurt.

The New Stationery

Lincoln, Neb.

After reading The Star's article regarding the new stationery for the mayor's office, I thought: "What Lincoln needs is a mayor who thinks like a man, or at least thinks like a businesswoman."

The mayor says that the old stationery "was stifling to me." That is really a reason for spending $200 to $300 for a public relations consulting firm to design the new logo. That is what I call a rip-off.

I could have gotten it drawn and a cut made for less than $100. I recently had a drawing and cut made of nine drawings and 41 block letters for less than $200.

The mayor also quoted 100 years. I hope that the order was not enough for 100 years.

Of course, $200 to $300 is no big thing when tax money is being spent. As for our mayor, we probably have gone from bad to worse.

Grain Deal Bothers Many

The moratorium on grain sales to Russia has ended. The International Longshoremen's Assocation will drop its embargo on loading grain bound for the Soviet Union. The U.S. and the U.S.S.R. have concluded a five-year agreement under which the Soviets are supposed to buy a minimum of six million metric tons of wheat and corn a year and a parallel agreement under which the Soviets will offer this country 200,000 barrels of oil a day over a like period.

The agreements, says President Ford, represent "a positive step in our relations with the Soviet Union" and will benefit "the American people — our many grain-farming communities, our workers, our farmers and our consumers. . ."

Is everybody happy?

No.

The first reaction to the new agreement from grain producer spokesmen is wary and in many cases downright negative.

In the first place, there is still considerable disgust over the imposition of the moratorium during the negotiating period. It's claimed that American farmers have lost out while the Soviets have shopped elsewhere during the last 30 to 45 days.

Secondly, beyond the doubt that such agreements (hailed as bringing stability to foreign grain markets for U.S. producers) can be enforced, there is the belief that the maximum amount of grain that can be sold to the Soviets without additional U.S. government intervention is not high enough and also that the minimum base amount (six million metric tons per year) is not high enough. Some spokesmen said it should have been pegged at around 10-13 million metric tons. For example, this year, the Soviets have already bought almost ten million metric tons and are expected to buy around seven million more and sales would have easily exceeded that had it not been for the moratorium. The surplus over domestic demand can easily meet foreign requests in such amounts.

Farmers also expect, with new sales abroad in the immediate future, to be blamed by the public for increases in the retail price of food — no matter how unfair the charges may be — but that is probably the least of their worries.

The long-range problem seems to be what grain producers see as a precedent by which the U.S. government will control conditions in the foreign market in years to come.

The farmer really can't be blamed for feeling like a pawn. The amount he gets for his produce is secondary, so far as the government is concerned, to the use of his grain as a lever in far more complex dealings in the shadow world of international diplomacy. The American farmer now finds himself on the same chess board as the oil sheiks and can't see any reason for it.

After all, President Ford promised him free access to world markets if he would produce. He did, and the President isn't living up to his end of the bargain, and that is at the heart of the problem.

Another Routine 4-3

A Lincoln City Council majority has withstood a lobbying blitz along a number of fronts by voting again to reject Lincoln Electric System (LES) participation in the building of a nuclear generating plant at Ft. Calhoun.

That is not surprising. Anything other than a second 4-3 negative vote would have been real news.

Based partly on hunch and partly on the experience of other nuclear facilities, the majority decision reflected council distrust of the LES thesis that over the long haul nuclear-generated electric power is the most economical. Mixed with that were the questions of nuclear plant reliability and safety.

The LES administrative board and staff, the Lincoln system's would-be partners in the Ft. Calhoun venture, spokesmen for the local business community and council allies in the minority all worked hard in recent days to force a change in the council vote. Still, nothing really new or pertinent was added to the lobbying effort.

Again, we think the majority decision was a courageous one; an action which was on the borderline of winging it. If there was no real proof offered that nuclear generation is the most economical, neither could the council majority point to any real proof that it isn't.

The average ratepayer, not to mention council members suspicious of the pact, might have seen the Ft. Calhoun No. 2 proponents tip their hand, however, when the two major participants nixed a proposal for a dollar ceiling on Lincoln's investment. Rejecting that proposal was an entirely reasonable action, but it did tend to buttress the argument that cost estimates aren't worth the paper they are printed on.

Another last-ditch effort by nuclear proponents also failed: the plan whereby Lincoln's 13% ownership would be scaled down to 10%. Logically, it should have failed. The council majority previously having stood on principle, it would have been ridiculous to accept a plan which suggests that 10% of a bad deal is all that much better than 13% of a bad deal.

It would be unwise and unfair to condemn the council majority for its action just as it would be to offer praise. No instant judgment can be rendered on a decision which has such long-term implications.

Nixon Pardon Remains In The Fore

NEW YORK — The political shrewdness of Gerald Ford's decision to pardon Richard Nixon last year now begins to be apparent. When Special Prosecutor Henry S. Ruth blasted the pardon as "atrocious" on "Face the Nation," he seemed to be speaking of ancient history. His remarks did not even make the major front pages.

No matter how much they might have deplored the pardon at the time, or how much they might have wished to see Nixon held accountable for his possible crimes, many Americans no doubt feel that the pardon closed the matter, if unsatisfactorily. Why rake it up again? Why not let old wounds heal as best they can?

Well, there are excellent reasons why the Nixon pardon, and the prosecution it almost surely prevented, should not be allowed to slide out of public consciousness. Those reasons have less to do with Nixon than they do with Gerald R. Ford.

The right way to keep the matter open is for the Democrats to make a campaign issue out of Ford's services to Nixon. Ruth's statement and the final report of the special prosecutor's office provide a firm basis for questioning both the timing and the sweeping terms of the pardon.

It is to the point, moreover, that Ford strongly implied at his confirmation hearings for the vice presidency that he would not issue such a pardon for the man who had appointed him vice president, and whose resignation would make him president. Had he not implied such a promise, his nomination might have encountered real trouble; so at the very least he seems guilty of misleading if not literally untrue statements.

There is ample evidence that Americans are more than fed up with that kind of deception — the statement that is not technically a lie but that is a long way from the truth. And on a closely related subject, the Democrats might be able to raise an even more serious question about Ford's veracity.

That question is put forthrightly in the Washington Monthly for October, 1975, in an article by Marjorie Boyd entitled "Did Ford Commit Perjury?" This blunt inquiry is directed at Ford's statements to both the Senate Rules Committee and the House Judiciary Committee (which conducted the vice presidential confirmation hearings) that he was not acting on White House instructions when he helped stop the first congressional investigation into Watergate. The inquiry was to have been conducted by Chairman Wright Patman of the House Banking Committee, but Ford and other Republicans led a successful drive to deny the committee subpoena power — which effectively killed its planned investigation.

The Boyd article points out what has received too little public attention — that the famous White House tape of a Sept. 15, 1972, conversation between Nixon, H. R. Haldeman and John Dean contains Nixon's specific instructions to Haldeman to have Ford — then the House Republican leader — "get at this (the Patman investigation) and screw this thing up while he can." And, said Nixon, "he's got to know that (these instructions) come from the top" — so they were to be conveyed by John Ehrlichman.

WRIGHT PATMAN
. . . Ford himself a block to proposed inquiry

What makes this conversation so damaging to Ford is that it came in the context of John Dean's complaint that the minority leader was not then doing anything to halt the Patman investigation. But the House records show that in the next two weeks, after the White House conversation of Sept. 15, Ford DID take the lead in heading off Patman's inquiry.

In the confirmation hearings, Ford insisted that he had done so on his own initiative, and only because he believed the investigation would jeopardize the legal rights of Watergate defendants. One way to find out whether he was telling the truth would be to audit the White House tapes for the weeks following Sept. 15, none of which have yet been made public.

The trouble with that is that the tapes are in custody of Philip Buchen, Ford's old friend and White House legal advisor. And it should not be forgotten that Ford has made strenuous efforts to have the tapes declared the property of Richard Nixon, and placed in his custody at San Clemente. When Ford explained the Nixon pardon to a House judiciary subcommittee, moreover, he rather obviously ducked the question whether he would be willing to give the subcommittee all tape recordings of conversations between himself and Nixon.

For their part, the Democrats will be ducking both opportunity and duty if they don't hammer away at Ford on these issues — opportunity, because his major asset is the "nice guy" image he has successfully projected; duty, because the full story of his relationship with the man who made him president, the man he then pardoned, is vital to the question of his fitness for office.

HARRY SCHWARTZ

Shift Likely In Aging Red Leadership

NEW YORK — Chou En-Lai is "very ill and I think he's dying," Henry Kissinger told some Canadian friends in Ottawa the other day when he thought he was speaking privately, but was actually being recorded by an enterprising newspaper reporter.

He might have added that the latest Peking Review picture of Mao Tse-Tung greeting a foreign visitor makes that Chinese leader look very old indeed, inevitably raising questions about his hold on life. And among professional Kremlinologists there is rising suspicion that Leonid I. Brezhnev's mysterious and chronic ailment is really cancer which is making relentless progress despite everything Soviet doctors can do.

What all this adds up to is the growing likelihood that in the next year or so both China and the Soviet Union may have new leaders. By the time the next American president is inaugurated in January, 1976, Mao Tse-tung, Chou En-lai and Leonid I. Brezhnev may all have passed into history, while even the long survival of 70-year-old Teng Hsiao-Ping, the Chinese deputy premier who now seems to be running current policy implementation in Peking, is actuarially far from certain. The prospect now seems almost certain that in the second half of the 1970's leaders from long-denied younger generations will take the helm in both of the two major communist powers.

There are of course many candidates for the high posts Mao, Chou, Brezhnev and others of their age group are going to vacate. But the details of the Moscow and Peking power struggles are sufficiently well hidden so that nobody in the West can really do much more than guess about who will rule the Soviet Union and China after the present incumbents.

CHOU EN-LAI
. . . . looking old, along with Mao, Brezhnev . . .

What Westerners can do is to identify the key issues which arise as the prospect of major succession crises in Moscow and Peking becomes ever more real.

Few Westerners can claim that they picked Stalin as Lenin's successor before the latter's death, or Khrushchev as the man who would succeed Stalin. But in retrospect it is plain that in both cases Western analysts did understand and enunciate the key issues dividing the rivals for each succession, issues that — along with personal factors and change — helped decide the final outcome.

In China now the key question is even more fundamental than merely that of identifying the next likely beneficiary of a future Chinese cult of personality. The central issue is whether this huge and populous land can remain whole when the immense prestige of Mao and Chou is no longer available to buttress the cause of national unity.

For much of this century before Mao's victory in 1949, China was merely a geographical expression and the reality was a country divided into the hostile fiefdoms of rival war lords. The near breakdown of Chinese central government rule at the height of the great proletarian cultural revolution in the late 1960's was a sobering reminder that similar tensions and possibilities still exist. Moreover, China's powerful northern neighbor has every incentive to encourage division and disunity among the Chinese.

But even if China remains united after Mao, it is already evident that there will be bitter debate about continuing his major line of foreign policy. Today China "leans toward" the United States and regards the Soviet Union as the main enemy. But in the 1950's China's public foreign policy was one of seeming intimate alliance with the Soviet Union and bitter enmity toward the United States. It would be surprising if there were no influential figures in Peking who did not find a reversion to the earlier policy attractive.

There has already been Western speculation that the recent sharp Peking criticism of the United States, nominally inspired by alleged Washington support for Tibetan separatists, reflects the growing strength of Chinese leaders who question the value of the dividends received so far from the Peking-Washington connection.

In Moscow, the hidden great issue is that of detente. Brezhnev's policy has been based upon the assumption that in the current historical epoch there will be no great, sudden cataclysm in the capitalist world. Therefore, the Soviet Union must cooperate with the West for its own good, while hoping at most to make only marginal gains — as in Portugal and Vietnam — toward the great goal of world communism.

But there are skeptics in Moscow who see this as a craven old man's misreading of current events. These skeptics argue that now is the time of the long-awaited crisis of capitalism.

In this view, the combination of world recession, massive American disorientation born of Vietnam and Watergate, and the trend toward the left in countries as different as Britain, Italy and Sweden has created unprecedented opportunities for a Soviet "forward policy" aimed at fulfilling Moscow's "historic international obligation."

An experienced diplomat once remarked that no nation has permanent friends or permanent enemies, only permanent interests. But there is no guarantee that one generation will view those "permanent interests" with the same eyes that its predecessors did. That is why the next one, two or three years in which the historic shift of generations takes place in Moscow and Peking is likely to be particularly worrisome and full of surprises, some of them probably far from pleasant.

Mixed with that were the questions of nuclear plant reliability and safety.

The LES administrative board and staff, the Lincoln system's would-be partners in the Ft. Calhoun venture, spokesmen for the local business community and council allies in the minority all worked hard in recent days to force a change in the council vote. Still, nothing really new or pertinent was added to the lobbying effort.

Again, we think the majority decision was a courageous one; an action which was on the borderline of winging it. If there was no real proof offered that nuclear generation is the most economical, neither could the council majority point to any real proof that it isn't.

The average ratepayer, not to mention council members suspicious of the pact, might have seen the Ft. Calhoun No. 2 proponents tip their hand, however, when the two major participants nixed a proposal for a dollar ceiling on Lincoln's investment. Rejecting that proposal was an entirely reasonable action, but it did tend to buttress the argument that cost estimates aren't worth the paper they are printed on.

Another last-ditch effort by nuclear proponents also failed: the plan whereby Lincoln's 13% ownership would be scaled down to 10%. Logically, it should have failed. The council majority previously having stood on principle, it would have been ridiculous to accept a plan which suggests that 10% of a bad deal is all that much better than 13% of a bad deal.

It would be unwise and unfair to condemn the council majority for its action just as it would be to offer praise. No instant judgment can be rendered on a decision which has such long-term implications.

Nixon Pardon Remains In The Fore

NEW YORK — The political shrewdness of Gerald Ford's decision to pardon Richard Nixon last year now begins to be apparent. When Special Prosecutor Henry S. Ruth blasted the pardon as "atrocious" on "Face the Nation," he seemed to be speaking of ancient history. His remarks did not even make the major front pages.

No matter how much they might have deplored the pardon at the time, or how much they might have wished to see Nixon held accountable for his possible crimes, many Americans no doubt feel that the pardon closed the matter, if unsatisfactorily. Why rake it up again? Why not let old wounds heal as best they can?

Well, there are excellent reasons why the Nixon pardon, and the prosecution it almost surely prevented, should not be allowed to slide out of public consciousness. Those reasons have less to do with Nixon than they do with Gerald R. Ford.

The right way to keep the matter open is for the Democrats to make a campaign issue out of Ford's services to Nixon. Ruth's statement and the final report of the special prosecutor's office provide a firm basis for questioning both the timing and the sweeping terms of the pardon.

It is to the point, moreover, that Ford strongly implied at his confirmation hearings for the vice presidency that he would not issue such a pardon for the man who had appointed him vice president, and whose resignation would make him president. Had he not implied such a promise, his nomination might have encountered real trouble; so at the very least he seems guilty of misleading if not literally untrue statements.

There is ample evidence that Americans are more than fed up with that kind of deception — the statement that is not technically a lie but that is a long way from the truth. And on a closely related subject, the Democrats might be able to raise an even more serious question about Ford's veracity.

That question is put forthrightly in the Washington Monthly for October, 1975, in an article by Marjorie Boyd entitled "Did Ford Commit Perjury?" This blunt inquiry is directed at Ford's statements to both the Senate Rules Committee and the House Judiciary Committee (which conducted the vice presidential confirmation hearings) that he was not acting on White House instructions when he helped stop the first congressional investigation into Watergate. The inquiry was to have been conducted by Chairman Wright Patman of the House Banking Committee, but Ford and other Republicans led a successful drive to deny the committee subpoena power — which effectively killed its planned investigation.

The Boyd article points out what has received too little public attention — that the famous White House tape of a Sept. 15, 1972, conversation between Nixon, H. R. Haldeman and John Dean contains Nixon's specific instructions to Haldeman to have Ford — then the House Republican leader — "get at this (the Patman investigation) and screw this thing up while he can." And, said Nixon, "he's got to know that (these instructions) come from the top" — so they were to be conveyed by John Ehrlichman.

WRIGHT PATMAN
. . . Ford himself a block to proposed inquiry

What makes this conversation so damaging to Ford is that it came in the context of John Dean's complaint that the minority leader was not then doing anything to halt the Patman investigation. But the House records show that in the next two weeks, after the White House conversation of Sept. 15, Ford DID take the lead in heading off Patman's inquiry.

In the confirmation hearings, Ford insisted that he had done so on his own initiative, and only because he believed the investigation would jeopardize the legal rights of Watergate defendants. One way to find out whether he was telling the truth would be to audit the White House tapes for the weeks following Sept. 15, none of which have yet been made public.

The trouble with that is that the tapes are in custody of Philip Buchen, Ford's old friend and White House legal advisor. And it should not be forgotten that Ford has made strenuous efforts to have the tapes declared the property of Richard Nixon, and placed in his custody at San Clemente. When Ford explained the Nixon pardon to a House judiciary subcommittee, moreover, he rather obviously ducked the question whether he would be willing to give the subcommittee all tape recordings of conversations between himself and Nixon.

For their part, the Democrats will be ducking both opportunity and duty if they don't hammer away at Ford on these issues — opportunity, because his major asset is the "nice guy" image he has successfully projected; duty, because the full story of his relationship with the man who made him president, the man he then pardoned, is vital to the question of his fitness for office.

HARRY SCHWARTZ

Shift Likely In Aging Red Leadership

NEW YORK — Chou En-Lai is "very ill and I think he's dying," Henry Kissinger told some Canadian friends in Ottawa the other day when he thought he was speaking privately, but was actually being recorded by an enterprising newspaper reporter.

He might have added that the latest Peking Review picture of Mao Tse-Tung greeting a foreign visitor makes that Chinese leader look very old indeed, inevitably raising questions about his hold on life. And among professional Kremlinologists there is rising suspicion that Leonid I. Brezhnev's mysterious and chronic ailment is really cancer which is making relentless progress despite everything Soviet doctors can do.

What all this adds up to is the growing likelihood that in the next year or so both China and the Soviet Union may have new leaders. By the time the next American president is inaugurated in January, 1976, Mao Tse-tung, Chou En-lai and Leonid I. Brezhnev may all have passed into history, while even the long survival of 70-year-old Teng Hsiao-Ping, the Chinese deputy premier who now seems to be running current policy implementation in Peking, is actuarially far from certain. The prospect now seems almost certain that in the second half of the 1970's leaders from long-denied younger generations will take the helm in both of the two major communist powers.

There are of course many candidates for the high posts Mao, Chou, Brezhnev and others of their age group are going to vacate. But the details of the Moscow and Peking power struggles are sufficiently well hidden so that nobody in the West can really do much more than guess about who will rule the Soviet Union and China after the present incumbents.

CHOU EN-LAI
. . . . looking old, along with Mao, Brezhnev . . .

What Westerners can do is to identify the key issues which arise as the prospect of major succession crises in Moscow and Peking becomes ever more real.

Few Westerners can claim that they picked Stalin as Lenin's successor before the latter's death, or Khrushchev as the man who would succeed Stalin. But in retrospect it is plain that in both cases Western analysts did understand and enunciate the key issues dividing the rivals for each succession, issues that — along with personal factors and change — helped decide the final outcome.

In China now the key question is even more fundamental than merely that of identifying the next likely beneficiary of a future Chinese cult of personality. The central issue is whether this huge and populous land can remain whole when the immense prestige of Mao and Chou is no longer available to buttress the cause of national unity.

For much of this century before Mao's victory in 1949, China was merely a geographical expression and the reality was a country divided into the hostile fiefdoms of rival war lords. The near breakdown of Chinese central government rule at the height of the great proletarian cultural revolution in the late 1960's was a sobering reminder that similar tensions and possibilities still exist. Moreover, China's powerful northern neighbor has every incentive to encourage division and disunity among the Chinese.

But even if China remains united after Mao, it is already evident that there will be bitter debate about continuing his major line of foreign policy. Today China "leans toward" the United States and regards the Soviet Union as the main enemy. But in the 1950's China's public foreign policy was one of seeming intimate alliance with the Soviet Union and bitter enmity toward the United States. It would be surprising if there were no influential figures in Peking who did not find a reversion to the earlier policy attractive.

There has already been Western speculation that the recent sharp Peking criticism of the United States, nominally inspired by alleged Washington support for Tibetan separatists, reflects the growing strength of Chinese leaders who question the value of the dividends received so far from the Peking-Washington connection.

In Moscow, the hidden great issue is that of detente. Brezhnev's policy has been based upon the assumption that in the current historical epoch there will be no great, sudden cataclysm in the capitalist world. Therefore, the Soviet Union must cooperate with the West for its own good, while hoping at most to make only marginal gains — as in Portugal and Vietnam — toward the great goal of world communism.

But there are skeptics in Moscow who see this as a craven old man's misreading of current events. These skeptics argue that now is the time of the long-awaited crisis of capitalism.

In this view, the combination of world recession, massive American disorientation born of Vietnam and Watergate, and the trend toward the left in countries as different as Britain, Italy and Sweden has created unprecedented opportunities for a Soviet "forward policy" aimed at fulfilling Moscow's "historic international obligation."

An experienced diplomat once remarked that no nation has permanent friends or permanent enemies, only permanent interests. But there is no guarantee that one generation will view those "permanent interests" with the same eyes that its predecessors did. That is why the next one, two or three years in which the historic shift of generations takes place in Moscow and Peking is likely to be particularly worrisome and full of surprises, some of them probably far from pleasant.

Equality Report Published

By United Press International

The Nebraska Commission on the Status of Women announced Tuesday the publication of a report entitled "sex equality in education."

Shirley Wilkes, commission chairperson, said the report is a result of a statewide survey conducted by the commission's education committee in which 400 surveys were sent to school superintendents asking for their opinion.

Included in the survey were questions on curriculum, instructional materials, library and media centers, staffing, guidance and counseling, extra curricular activities and sports and school environment.

Mrs. Jean O'Hara, executive director, said the commission realizes schools do not, and should not, have to handle the whole job of correcting social inequity.

On the other hand, she said, "schools do not have an impact on the development of students' self images and self expectations as well as their attitudes towards others. It is for this reasons that the commission asked for information, to help assess how well the schools in Nebraska serve both boys and girls."

Some of the information learned from the survey indicated 40% of those responding said most courses included content by and about women and 66% indicated some schools had some course titles which employed the generic term "man" or male pronoun.

Mrs. O'Hara said the information was gathered in an attempt to help schools meet the terms of the women's educational equity act.

Other results of the survey showed:

—62% of the schools appeared to have difficulty reviewing their textbooks and adopting procedures for selection of instructional materials.

—73% did not have procedures for selected materials.

—23% felt their media centers included materials which portrayed women favorably in nontraditional roles as frequently as they are portrayed in traditional female occupations, such as nurses and homemakers.

—6% of all schools have a fairly equal balance of female and male staff members, even though female teachers predominated while male administrators predominated.

—18% reported non-sexist approach to guidance and counseling.

—4% indicated equal opportunities in the area of extracurricular activities and sports.

—84% of the schools said they had not had their adult or faculty advisors participate in workshops on sexism or had not developed skills to counteract sexist practices and attitudes.

Aide To Mayor Sees Change In Government

By J.L. SCHMIDT
Star Staff Writer

"You're going to see a real change in the attitude of a lot of people in city government."

That prediction from Mike Merwick, administrative assistant to Lincoln Mayor Helen Boosalis, set the mood for the third session of "The Pieces of a City," an eight-session community education series.

Merwick said that "the wide open look of the County-City Building is indicative of the changing attitude of the people who man those offices."

"Citizen input is the key in today's government, if that government is to effectively administer to the people who elected it," Merwick added.

That change is "beginning to surface" in areas such as the police department, which is under the direction of a new chief who has "some very different and exciting ideas about the duties of his officers," Merwick said.

Separate Jail Staff

A separate corrections staff will probably be implemented in the near future in an attempt to "take the officers out of the jail," he added.

"These men were trained to deal with the public and to apprehend criminals, not to tend to prisoners in a jail facility. Likewise, a man so-trained shouldn't be directing traffic," Merwick commented, suggesting that a separate traffic detail may also be established.

Merwick noted that the new chief, George Hansen, had expressed concern about the jail facilities in saying that it wasn't what he had expected of a city this size.

"We'll probably see a new atmosphere for the prisoners in the near future, one which stresses not only creature comfort but expanded activity," he said.

Tie Up 'Loose Ends'

A county-city implementation coordinator is also due to be hired to "bring loose ends together" in the areas of specific service covered by the various offices of government, Merwick explained.

A major effort to "keep the downtown alive" is the Centrum parking facility designated for the block bounded by O and N, 11th and 12th Sts., Merwick said, and "it is being promoted by the city for that purpose."

He added that the development of at least one new downtown business concept (in the old Sear's building) is directly related to the establishment of the Centrum.

Nancy Usnick, the acting director of the Department of Community Development, told the gathering that the major emphasis of her office is to "find people with a lot of similar frustrations" and organize them into a neighborhood organization for the purposes of solving them.

This solution is based on the theory that "such frustrations with government are usually a result of where you live, hence the neighborhood approach," she said.

"It may be something as simple as getting the snow cleared off your street, but if you've got just one phone number to call, maybe things would be easier," she explained.

Stop 'Revolving Door'

Robert Clark, human services coordinator for the city, spoke of the progress on establishing a community detoxification center designed to "reduce the number of revolving door alcoholics that come through the criminal justice system every year."

Clark said that he operates under the basic assumption that "We should provide programs and services through the use of adequate personnel and programs first, then worry about the facility to operate in."

He noted that the governmental bodies need a "coordinated philosophy of treatment" in several areas, including alcoholism, drug abuse and mental health.

Specific problems with the placing of foster children, child development for pre-schoolers and youth development of school-agers were also mentioned.

'Formative Years'

"We need to work more closely with delinquency prevention and the molding of children in their formative pre-school years," Clark said.

On the other end of the spectrum, Clark said, "We need to work more on enhancing the life of a senior citizen through his at home atmosphere." This would mean that "we should put funds into transportation of these people to the places and services they need to see before we spend any more money on building care facilities like rest homes."

Next week's "Pieces of a City" session deals with the theatre arts and is titled "Onstage." The panel discussion and demonstration areas will be held at the Lincoln Community Playhouse, 2500 S. 56th, at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday.

Harris Endorsed By Ally Of Meany

WASHINGTON (AP) — George Hardy, a close ally of AFL-CIO President George Meany, has endorsed Fred R. Harris for the 1976 Democratic presidential nomination, an aide to Hardy said Tuesday.

Hardy, president of the Service Employes International Union, is the first member of the 35-member AFL-CIO Executive Committee to endorse a 1976 presidential candidate.

In endorsing Harris, considered the most outspokenly liberal of the nine announced Democratic presidential contenders, Hardy said the former Oklahoma senator is "for the working people" and cited a number of pro-labor votes in Congress.

Hardy's 600,000 member union is considered especially strong in California, which holds the final presidential primary next June 8 and has the largest single delegation to the Democratic National Convention.

The endorsement is a boost to Harris, who has been running a low-budget campaign that has shown considerable support at a series of candidate seminars but who has virtually no support from party leaders or top labor officials.

"I think it gives Harris the credibility he needs to make a very good run," an aide to Hardy said.

In bowing out of the pre-convention campaign last year, Meany gave a green light to individiual unions to endorse candidates and mount efforts to elect convention delegates.

Lincoln-Lancaster County Ambulance Review Slated

A task force of the Lincoln-Lancaster County Emergency Medical Services (EMS) Council will review ambulance service county-wide.

The review will be undertaken in light of some controversy about ambulance service in Lincoln.

Two private firms, Eastern Ambulance Co. and Shurtleff Ambulance Co., have unsuccessfully sought subsidies from the City Council. They say they need money to expand service, hire better trained personnel and buy improved equipment.

Fire Chief Dallas Johnson has told the City Council his department could provide emergency medical service since firemen are trained to give emergency care and are often first to arrive at accident scenes.

The ambulance companies contend they would be forced out of business if the city gets into emergency medical services.

EMS Chairman Dr. Steven Carveth said the task force co-chairmen, Dr. Jay Upright and Dr. Robert Gillespie, are open to suggestions on the review.

Voters Approve School Bond At North Platte

Lincoln Star Special

North Platte — Voters here Tuesday approved a $9.99 million bond issue to finance new school construction and remodeling.

The vote according, to Lincoln County Clerk Virgil Burke, was 3,410 in favor, 2,234 against. Fewer than 50% of the school district's 11,706 registered voters cast ballots.

The bond will finance construction of a new junior high and a new elementary school plus major additions at five other elementary schools. Adams Junior High will be combined with the senior high building for an expanded senior high, and six elementary buildings 50 or more years old will be razed.

Supt. Jack Elliott said the bond issue is probably the largest ever passed in Nebraska outside Omaha and Lincoln.

Filmmaker Files $11-Million Suit

Los Angeles (AP) — An $11-million damage suit has been filed against Paramount Pictures Corp. by filmmaker Elaine May who contends the company reneged on a loan agreement affecting her movie, "Mickey and Nickey."

In a Superior Court suite, Miss May said: "Paramount wilfully failed to provide the monies necessary for completion of the picture."

In addition to damages, Miss May asked the court to order Paramount to honor an oral agreement with her, to provide the necessary funds to complete the film and to forbid the studio from claiming exclusive distributorship of the film.

PETER . . . too many promotions.

Psychologist Dr. Peter Explains His Principle

By LIANE GUENTHER
Star Staff Writer

Dr. Laurence J. Peter figures his principle must work. He hasn't had a promotion since his book came out.

The well-known psychologist, author and educator cited all kinds of examples that led him to his theory that "for every job that exists in the world, there is somebody, somewhere who can't do it."

It's better known as the Peter Principle.

And he apologized because a lot of people apparently thought his best selling book by the same name was "a book about sex."

He said one customer even asked a book store clerk for "Dr. Principle's Peter."

One-Way Glass

Probably his favorite example of blundering is the 20-story, all-glass building in Arlington, Va. All the bathrooms were constructed of one-way glass — the kind that looks like a mirror on one side — to match the rest of the decor.

Trouble is, the builders put the glass in backwards.

"Then you have your new library here on this campus . . ." he quipped Tuesday to his Nebraska Union audience.

Briefly explaining his theory, Dr. Peter said the competent employe is promoted until he's no longer competent at what he's doing. And there he stays. The person that promoted the employe to that level of incompetence doesn't want to admit the mistake either because that would be like admitting his own incompetence.

It gets very confusing.

Crankshaft Garage

Take the case of Will Handy, attendant at the Bon Voyage Garage in Crankshaft.

(He always talks about fictitious people "to protect the guilty.")

Will has a handy attendant, a good mechanic and even better master mechanic. But when he was promoted to station manager, his shop flopped.

"There's no shortage of examples," Dr. Peter stated.

"But why should the ability to lead depend on the ability to follow? That's like saying the ability to float depends on the ability to sink.

"Look around you."

Beneath the whimsy and satire, he has a serious message.

Up, Over Ladder

He said he has seen many men climb the ladder of success only to jump to their deaths.

Therefore, he advises people to "act a bit crazy" so "your boss won't promote you because he won't want you up there in the executive suite with him."

For the professional bureaucrats, these tidbits of wisdom from the self-proclaimed incompetency expert:

"When in charge, ponder.

"When confronted, delegate.

"When in doubt, mumble."

For himself, he has adopted the modest ambition of saving mankind. His next, and probably his last, book will be "The Peter Plan — How To Save the Planet."

Changes Improve Lincoln Symphony

By RICHARD GRACE

A Lincoln Symphony audience sat in reflective awe Tuesday evening at the initial concert of the 50th season for the organization. Under the new leadership of Dr. Robert Anders Emile and with some noticeable personnel changes, the orchestra received a spontaneous standing ovation at the conclusion of the Dvorak Eighth Symphony.

One can hardly believe the changes in the orchestral sound in the space of five short months. Probably the greatest alteration was heard in the string section, which has made great strides in improving its usual intonation problems.

But this is noting only some of the many improvements. The tonal balance between sections, the great variety in dynamic contrasts and a sense of pride generated by both players and conductor Emile was completely apparent to all.

The featured soloist of the evening was cellist Lawrence Foster, who was more than a capable replacement for hospitalized Lynn Harrel. Harrel did not cancel the engagement until last Thursday, and the 19-year-old in London at the time kindly consented to perform the Lalo Concerto in D minor. The Lalo work is not an exciting piece in its own right, but it is an excellent vehicle for the cellist with frequent virtuoso passages. Foster quickly displayed his artistic ability on this mellow instrument and was warmly received by an appreciative audience.

But the conductor and orchestra were in the limelight. Performing the Verdi overture to the opera "Nabucco" and the Dvorak Symphony No. 8 in G major, the orchestra presented a rhythmic crispness and musical awareness that makes one wonder how good the ensemble can get after the players become more aware of Emile's procedures and goals.

Also announced in this evening's program was a new series, "Musica Nova," which will begin on the Nov. 25 concert from 7:15 to 7:45. This first mini-concert of contemporary composers will feature composer Gene O'Brien, a music graduate of the University of Nebraska.

Sheriff Has No Suspect In Slaying Of Worker

Omaha (UPI) — Douglas County sheriff's officers said Tuesday they had no suspects in a shooting which led to the death of a 33-year-old construction worker.

A sheriff's Department spokesman said it appeared that someone drove up beside Hendrick T. Dohmen Jr. on Oct. 12 and shot him with a small caliber weapon.

Dohmen died in an Omaha hospital Sunday night where he had remained in critical condition.

Dohmen's car was found in a West Omaha creek bed, and authorities originally thought he had lost control of the vehicle. However, x-rays revealed a small caliber bullet wound in the left side of the head.

Dohmen, deputies said, had two addresses, one in rural Creston, Iowa, and the other in Omaha.

Deputies said a similar incident occurred recently in Fremont and investigation was underway to determine if the two were connected.

Tank Retriever Car Collide; Kill Two Germans

Kitzingen, West Germany (AP) — Two Germans were killed when their small car collided with a U.S. Army tank retriever participating in the American Reforger training exercise.

According to Army count, the double fatality brings the death toll in the training exercise to 11. The unofficial toll, including accidents reported by West German police, is 13.

The Reforger exercise involves 10,000 U.S. soldiers flown to West Germany from bases in the United States.

Next Mexican President Wooing Business Sector

MEXICO CITY (AP) — The man chosen to be Mexico's next president says his government will make peace with private business in order to spur the sagging national economy.

He also says Mexico will provide foreign investment incentives, reduce its commercial deficit with the United States and seek with other Third World nations to get better prices for natural resources.

Jose Lopez Portillo (pronounced poor teel you) has been speaking conciliatory tones since the governing Institutional Revolutionary Party (PRI) nominated him as its candidate for president in the election next July.

PRI presidential candidates have not lost a race yet, so Lopez Portillo virtually is assured of taking office for a six-year term in December, 1976.

He will inherit a government faced by a hostile business sector which claims the country is headed for fullscale socialism.

When he was finance minister, a job he quit after being nominated last month, Lopez Portillo showed irritation when a group of wealthy businessmen said economic activity belonged to private enterprise in a democratic society.

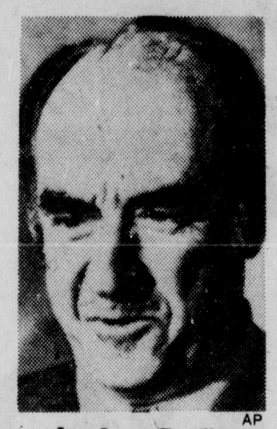
He compared the viewpoint with "Nazi-fascism" and said the government of President Luis Echeverria believed in a mixed economy in which government and private enterprise work together.

More recently, Lopez Portillo told foreign correspondents that he agreed with the current government in blaming capitalists for Mexico's $3 billion public debt and retarded economic growth.

Mexico's gross national product, the sum of its goods and services, has been increasing annually at rates of 7 per cent, but has dropped to 5 per cent this year.

Lopez Portillo said reduced private investments brought about the recession.

"I have fixed the goal of reaching 8 per cent annual growth," he told the foreign newsmen. "It appears difficult in these times of recession and inflation, but it is feasible."



AP

Jose Lopez Portillo

He said the government could not turn the economy around without the help of the private sector.

"We are going to urge them (businessmen) through legal means to increase their industrial investment," he said.

Echeverria's government this year began requiring private banks to deposit up to 80 per cent of all new accounts in the government-owned central bank, the Banco de Mexico. The money is earmarked for agriculture investment.

Lopez Portillo said he would try to reduce the commercial deficit with the United States, estimated at $2 billion annually, by increasing production of grains, petrochemicals, and bottled gas — all items imported from the United States.

The candidate said Mexican laws requiring 51 per cent domestic ownership of new international subsidiaries should not inhibit foreign investment.

"We need the markets, the technology and the capital from abroad, but they (foreign investors) will have to adjust themselves to these rules that are aimed only at accepting Mexicans as partners, not as employes or as servants," he said.

These were Lopez Portillo's first public statements since his nomination. Otherwise, little is known about his political and economic thinking.

Some political observers say it will be mid-1977 before he will have established his government and revealed the direction he will lead Mexico.

Under the Mexican political system it is difficult to predict what Lopez Portillo will do during his six years in office.

Mexican presidents although loyal to the PRI, govern with nearly dictatorial power. Lopez Portillo as finance minister was less an innovator than he was an administrator of President Echeverria's policies.

Lopez Portillo himself said last month: "The Mexican people vote for a party because, while not everyone can know a man, everyone knows the party."

Lopez Portillo is 55-years-old, which will make him one of the oldest presidents in recent Mexican history. He is married to a concert pianist and has three children — a son and two teenage daughters.

He is a lawyer whose political specialty has been planning and financing public works. He became finance secretary in May 1973. Before that he was director of the Federal Electric Commission and had jobs in the presidency and the Ministry of National Patrimony.

Echeverria and Lopez Portillo have been friends most of their lives, even attending schools together.

Lopez Portillo recently told a political rally:

"I am of middle class origin, the son of a modest soldier, public employe and intellectual I was educated in the schools of the revolution. I knew shortages and the need to maintain appearances. My mother miraculously stretched the salary from my father's two jobs. I belong to a generation which, when it had to demonstrate in the streets, was in favor of expropriation of the oil industry. Thus one understands my revolutionary calling."

Republic Steel, Armco Report Sharp Losses

NEW YORK (AP) — The nation's third and fourth-ranked steel companies reported sharp earnings declines in the third quarter Tuesday, citing drops in demand and surging cost pressure.

Armco Steel Corp., the No. 3 producer, said the quarter's profits totaled $29.2 million or 93 cents a share, down from $66.5 million or $2.21 a share last year.

Sales were $783.6 million, down last year's $837.7 million.

"It now appears that domestic steel shipments this year will be at a 12-year low," said William Verity, Armco board chairman. "The impact of such a no-profit situation in our steel business depresses our outlook for additional job creating investment in steel."

Republic Steel Corp., meanwhile, said third quarter earnings were $8.2 million or 51 cents a share, compared with $62.6 million or $3.87 a share a year ago.

Sales declined to $561.6 million from $738.4 million the comparable period in 1974.

Recycling Urged For Aging People

By GERRY SWITZER
Star Staff Writer

The aging person should be recycled.

A four-member panel speaking at the Y Womenspeak on the University of Nebraska-Lincoln campus Tuesday agreed that the concepts of the aging person must be changed.

Instead of these individuals being placed in nursing homes because they have no other place to go, they should be recycled for useful services, according to Martha W. Kniffin of Information Services for the Elderly.

She said involvement is essential for the older person — particularly the widow.

Widowhood, she said, presents its own special problems in that "in a couples society, if you're not a couple, you're out."

Involvement Plugged

"Involvement is the answer — the sooner they become involved in something outside themselves, the better," Mrs. Kniffin emphasized.

She said she had widowed friends, who are still memorializing special days they spent with their husbands seven years or more after the spouse's death.

"Widows have to make a new life for themselves," she said.

The financial plight of the elderly is also a very serious problem.

Start Now

Esther Hamon, retired teacher, told the group, "You really don't have a lot to look forward to unless you start working on it today."

In citing some of the many financial problems older persons face, Miss Hamon said that many men and women are fired before they reach pension stage, leaving them with no pension income at age 65.

Although Medicare is very helpful, she said, one can't rely on it to pay medical bills because it pays only 80% of a hospital bill.

Panel moderator Ann Hopkins, a counselor with the Information Services for the Elderly, noted that Medicare actually pays only 45% of all medical costs since dental and vision costs and numerous other services are not covered under the plan.

Barbara Harriett, another counselor with Information Services for the Elderly, noted that because of minority group family lifestyles, minority group women have added financial problems.

No Benefits

She said most of them have no Social Security benefits because their jobs primarily consisted of housework or helping a husband in sharecropping work, etc.

Even those who had jobs and are eligible for pensions receive very little because their earnings were not large enough to build a substantial pension fund.

She also noted that the average life expectancy for Americans is 71 while the life expectancy for blacks is 56, Indians, 47, and Hispanic, 44.

All agreed that mandatory retirement age is "ridiculous," noting that some individuals should be retired at 35 while others are not ready at 70.

Scrapping Jobs

They also pointed to the problem of businesses and industries eliminating a position held by a person who has reached a substantial salary level and replacing that person with a young, inexperienced person who can be hired for less money.

"But it saves money," Miss Hamon said, noting that this seems to be the main concern of school districts rather than the welfare of the children.

The trend is toward earlier retirement — at 55 —, the panel members noted, adding that there is no reason why there can't be sufficient jobs to go around.

"We should mix retirement in with the rest of our lives," Mrs. Hopkins said. This would give people an opportunity at an earlier age to travel, do research and other things usually left for retirement years, she added.

Cranberries Are Ibimi

New York (UPI) — How about some ibimi sauce with your Thanksgiving turkey? Or atoqua sauce or even pakimintzen? It's bound to be on almost every table, because these three are American Indian names for the cranberry. Ibimi, which was the leni-lenape's word, meant bitter berry. Wisconsin's Algonquans called cranberries atoqua. The third name was that of a New Jersey Delaware chief, who distributed cranberries at tribal peace feasts and who became known as cranberry eater.

2 Wallace Pals Have Birch Ties

BONN, West Germany (AP) — Alabama Gov. George C. Wallace said Tuesday he was not concerned that two of his traveling companions were associated with the right-wing John Birch Society. He declared they were personal friends and not foreign policy advisers.

Emerging from a briefing at the U.S. Embassy in Bonn, Wallace was asked whether the pair's John Birch ties could hurt his presidential hopes.

"Listen," the partially paralyzed governor retorted, "I have some personal friends with me and they are not my advisers politically, on foreign policy or anything else. I don't know what society they belong to . . . I don't pick out personal friends because they belong to an organization. Now if it was dedicated to the overthrow of the government of the United States, I wouldn't associate with them.

"But I don't care if it hurts or helps because I am not going to say to a personal friend of mine of long standing: 'You belong to a certain church or society and, therefore, I'm not going to associate with you.' So if anyone wants to make anything out of that, they can take it and throw it over their left shoulder."

The friends referred to were Dwight Coffman, a retired wood products manufacturer from Washington Court House, Ohio, and Hilaire du Berrier, originally of Flasher, N.D., and now publisher of a news letter in Monte Carlo.

Asked about his political affiliations, Coffman told a newsman, "So what. I'm not a member of the Communist party . . . but I happen to be a John Birch member." Du Berrier has written articles for a Birch magazine and has acknowledged that he has many friends in the society.

Coffman previously had been described by a member of Wallace's campaign staff as the governor's foreign policy adviser.

Asked whether he endorsed the principles of the ultraconservative society, Wallace replied: "That's not the issue on this trip. You're getting off into an extraneous matter. I'm not even sure what they all endorse. I don't endorse everything the Democratic party stands for of which I am a member . . ."

Girl, 8, Confronts Rocky With Poverty

DENVER (AP) — Francie O'Donnell, 8, confronted Vice President Nelson A. Rockefeller on Tuesday about plans he and the government have to help poor people like her.

Francie, wearing a bright red dress, stood on a chair and spoke clearly into a microphone.

"Us poor people are so poor, we're not getting a job. We need money for food. We need good health and care together with clothes and a house."

The vice president listened intently. The little girl said her father was paying "$90 bucks a month" to a Denver landlord who is "mean to us. So we are mean back to her."

Rockefeller, seated about 30 feet away on a platform along with cabinet officials, smiled and said, "I don't think anyone could be mean to you."

The little girl, who told reporters that her mother had died of cancer last April and her father, Rory, is on welfare, was one of about 700 persons who attended the first of six domestic policy forums to be held across the country.

Another welfare recipient, Beatrice Villaneuva of Denver, told the vice president, "I think this country is insane. How can a family of four survive on $300 a month?"

Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare F. David Mathews, a member of the panel, was sympathetic to the woman's complaints, but said there were no easy solutions to problems created by programs as complex as the welfare system.

House OKs Politics For Federal Workers

WASHINGTON (AP) — Legislation to permit nonmilitary federal employes to run for office and take part in political campaigns of others was passed by the House Tuesday, 288 to 119.

The measure, which now goes to the Senate, would sweepingly modify the 36-year-old Hatch Act, which restricts 2.8 million federal employes to a minimum of political activities. It also contains provisions designed to protect them from pressures by superiors and others to contribute funds or to work in election campaigns.

The Ford administration opposes the measure and Republicans said President Ford may veto it if it is passed by the Senate. The Civil Service Commission also came out against it, while government employe labor unions were divided, with major AFL-CIO units in favor.

The House Republican Policy Committee said the bill would "encourage the participation of federal employes in political machines . . . subject activities and pay . . . to the demands of union bosses."

But proponents said it would restore first-class citizenship to government workers and that the Hatch Act represented overreaction to political abuses of long ago.

The House did adopt an amendment requiring employes who run for office to take a 90-day unpaid leave of absence from their jobs.

The bill would allow federal employes, including those working for the semi-independent Postal Service, to seek nomination or election to any office and to take part in political campaigns.

It would not apply to member of the armed services.

Campaign activities could not be conducted during working hours or on government premises, nor while wearing any uniform or badge identifying the person as a government employe.

Millionaire Nominated GSA Head

Washington (AP) — President Ford nominated Florida millionaire Jack M. Eckerd on Tuesday to be administrator of the General Services Administration.

If confirmed by the Senate, the 62-year-old drugstore magnate will take over from Arthur F. Sampson, who resigned effective Oct. 15.

Eckerd, a Republican, ran unsuccessfully for both governor and U.S. senator from Florida in recent years. He is chairman of the board of the Jack Eckerd Corp. in Clearwater, Fla.

Aide To Mayor Sees Change In Government

By J.L. SCHMIDT
Star Staff Writer

"You're going to see a real change in the attitude of a lot of people in city government."

That prediction from Mike Merwick, administrative assistant to Lincoln Mayor Helen Boosalis, set the mood for the third session of "The Pieces of a City," an eight-session community education series.

Merwick said that "the wide open look of the County-City Building is indicative of the changing attitude of the people who man those offices."

"Citizen input is the key in today's government, if that government is to effectively administer to the people who elected it," Merwick added.

That change is "beginning to surface" in areas such as the police department, which is under the direction of a new chief who has "some very different and exciting ideas about the duties of his officers," Merwick said.

Separate Jail Staff

A separate corrections staff will probably be implemented in the near future in an attempt to "take the officers out of the jail," he added.

"These men were trained to deal with the public and to apprehend criminals, not to tend to prisoners in a jail facility. Likewise, a man so-trained shouldn't be directing traffic," Merwick commented, suggesting that a separate traffic detail may also be established.

Merwick noted that the new chief, George Hansen, had expressed concern about the jail facilities in saying that it wasn't what he had expected of a city this size.

"We'll probably see a new atmosphere for the prisoners in the near future, one which stresses not only creature comfort but expanded activity," he said.

Tie Up 'Loose Ends'

A county-city implementation coordinator is also due to be hired to "bring loose ends together" in the areas of specific service covered by the various offices of government, Merwick explained.

A major effort to "keep the downtown alive" is the Centrum parking facility designated for the block bounded by O and N, 11th and 12th Sts., Merwick said, and "it is being promoted by the city for that purpose."

He added that the development of at least one new downtown business concept (in the old Sear's building) is directly related to the establishment of the Centrum.

Nancy Usnick, the acting director of the Department of Community Development, told the gathering that the major emphasis of her office is to "find people with a lot of similar frustrations" and organize them into a neighborhood organization for the purposes of solving them.

This solution is based on the theory that "such frustrations with government are usually a result of where you live, hence the neighborhood approach," she said.

"It may be something as simple as getting the snow cleared off your street, but if you've got just one phone number to call, maybe things would be easier," she explained.

Stop 'Revolving Door'

Robert Clark, human services coordinator for the city, spoke of the progress on establishing a community detoxification center designed to "reduce the number of revolving door alcoholics that come through the criminal justice system every year."

Clark said that he operates under the basic assumption that "We should provide programs and services through the use of adequate personnel and programs first, then worry about the facility to operate in."

He noted that the governmental bodies need a "coordinated philosophy of treatment" in several areas, including alcoholism, drug abuse and mental health.

Specific problems with the placing of foster children, child development for pre-schoolers and youth development of school-agers were also mentioned.

'Formative Years'

"We need to work more closely with delinquency prevention and the molding of children in their formative pre-school years," Clark said.

On the other end of the spectrum, Clark said, "We need to work more on enhancing the life of a senior citizen through his at home atmosphere." This would mean that "we should put funds into transportation of these people to the places and services they need to see before we spend any more money on building care facilities like rest homes."

Next week's "Pieces of a City" session deals with the theatre arts and is titled "Onstage." The panel discussion and demonstration areas will be held at the Lincoln Community Playhouse, 2500 S. 56th, at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday.

PETER . . . too many promotions.

Psychologist Dr. Peter Explains His Principle

By LIANE GUENTHER
Star Staff Writer

Dr. Laurence J. Peter figures his principle must work. He hasn't had a promotion since his book came out.

The well-known psychologist, author and educator cited all kinds of examples that led him to his theory that "for every job that exists in the world, there is somebody, somewhere who can't do it."

It's better known as the Peter Principle.

And he apologized because a lot of people apparently thought his best selling book by the same name was "a book about sex."

He said one customer even asked a book store clerk for "Dr. Principle's Peter."

One-Way Glass

Probably his favorite example of blundering is the 20-story, all-glass building in Arlington, Va. All the bathrooms were constructed of one-way glass — the kind that looks like a mirror on one side — to match the rest of the decor.

Trouble is, the builders put the glass in backwards.

"Then you have your new library here on this campus . . ." he quipped Tuesday to his Nebraska Union audience.

Briefly explaining his theory, Dr. Peter said the competent employe is promoted until he's no longer competent at what he's doing. And there he stays. The person that promoted the employe to that level of incompetence doesn't want to admit the mistake either because that would be like admitting his own incompetence.

It gets very confusing.

Crankshaft Garage

Take the case of Will Handy, attendant at the Bon Voyage Garage in Crankshaft.

(He always talks about fictitious people "to protect the guilty.")

Will has a handy attendant, a good mechanic and even better master mechanic. But when he was promoted to station manager, his shop flopped.

"There's no shortage of examples," Dr. Peter stated.

"But why should the ability to lead depend on the ability to follow? That's like saying the ability to float depends on the ability to sink.

"Look around you."

Beneath the whimsy and satire, he has a serious message.

Up, Over Ladder

He said he has seen many men climb the ladder of success only to jump to their deaths.

Therefore, he advises people to "act a bit crazy" so "your boss won't promote you because he won't want you up there in the executive suite with him."

For the professional bureaucrats, these tidbits of wisdom from the self-proclaimed incompetency expert:

"When in charge, ponder.

"When confronted, delegate.

"When in doubt, mumble."

For himself, he has adopted the modest ambition of saving mankind. His next, and probably his last, book will be "The Peter Plan — How To Save the Planet."

Changes Improve Lincoln Symphony

By RICHARD GRACE

A Lincoln Symphony audience sat in reflective awe Tuesday evening at the initial concert of the 50th season for the organization. Under the new leadership of Dr. Robert Anders Emile and with some noticeable personnel changes, the orchestra received a spontaneous standing ovation at the conclusion of the Dvorak Eighth Symphony.

One can hardly believe the changes in the orchestral sound in the space of five short months. Probably the greatest alteration was heard in the string section, which has made great strides in improving its usual intonation problems.

But this is noting only some of the many improvements. The tonal balance between sections, the great variety in dynamic contrasts and a sense of pride generated by both players and conductor Emile was completely apparent to all.

The featured soloist of the evening was cellist Lawrence Foster, who was more than a capable replacement for hospitalized Lynn Harrel. Harrel did not cancel the engagement until last Thursday, and the 19-year-old in London at the time kindly consented to perform the Lalo Concerto in D minor. The Lalo work is not an exciting piece in its own right, but it is an excellent vehicle for the cellist with frequent virtuoso passages. Foster quickly displayed his artistic ability on this mellow instrument and was warmly received by an appreciative audience.

But the conductor and orchestra were in the limelight. Performing the Verdi overture to the opera "Nabucco" and the Dvorak Symphony No. 8 in G major, the orchestra presented a rhythmic crispness and musical awareness that makes one wonder how good the ensemble can get after the players become more aware of Emile's procedures and goals.

Also announced in this evening's program was a new series, "Musica Nova," which will begin on the Nov. 25 concert from 7:15 to 7:45. This first mini-concert of contemporary composers will feature composer Gene O'Brien, a music graduate of the University of Nebraska.

Harris Endorsed By Ally Of Meany

WASHINGTON (AP) — George Hardy, a close ally of AFL-CIO President George Meany, has endorsed Fred R. Harris for the 1976 Democratic presidential nomination, an aide to Hardy said Tuesday.

Hardy, president of the Service Employes International Union, is the first member of the 35-member AFL-CIO Executive Committee to endorse a 1976 presidential candidate.

In endorsing Harris, considered the most outspokenly liberal of the nine announced Democratic presidential contenders, Hardy said the former Oklahoma senator is "for the working people" and cited a number of pro-labor votes in Congress.

Hardy's 600,000 member union is considered especially strong in California, which holds the final presidential primary next June 8 and has the largest single delegation to the Democratic National Convention.

The endorsement is a boost to Harris, who has been running a low-budget campaign that has shown considerable support at a series of candidate seminars but who has virtually no support from party leaders or top labor officials.

"I think it gives Harris the credibility he needs to make a very good run," an aide to Hardy said.

In bowing out of the pre-convention campaign last year, Meany gave a green light to individual unions to endorse candidates and mount efforts to elect convention delegates.

Sheriff Has No Suspect In Slaying Of Worker

Omaha (UPI) — Douglas County sheriff's officers said Tuesday they had no suspects in a shooting which led to the death of a 33-year-old construction worker.

A sheriff's Department spokesman said it appeared that someone drove up beside Hendrick T. Dohmen Jr. on Oct. 12 and shot him with a small caliber weapon.

Dohmen died in an Omaha hospital Sunday night where he had remained in critical condition.

Dohmen's car was found in a West Omaha creek bed, and authorities originally thought he had lost control of the vehicle. However, x-rays revealed a small caliber bullet wound in the left side of the head.

Dohmen, deputies said, had two addresses, one in rural Creston, Iowa, and the other in Omaha.

Tank Retriever Car Collide; Kill Two Germans

Kitzingen, West Germany (AP) — Two Germans were killed when their small car collided with a U.S. Army tank retriever participating in the American Reforger training exercise.

According to Army count, the double fatality brings the death toll in the training exercise to 11. The unofficial toll, including accidents reported by West German police, is 13.

The Reforger exercise involves 10,000 U.S. soldiers flown to West Germany from bases in the United States.

Lincoln-Lancaster County Ambulance Review Slated

A task force of the Lincoln-Lancaster County Emergency Medical Services (EMS) Council will review ambulance service county-wide.

The review will be undertaken in light of some controversy about ambulance service in Lincoln.

Two private firms, Eastern Ambulance Co. and Shurtleff Ambulance Co., have unsuccessfully sought subsidies from the City Council. They say they need money to expand service, hire better trained personnel and buy improved equipment.

Fire Chief Dallas Johnson has told the City Council his department could provide emergency medical service since firemen are trained to give emergency care and are often first to arrive at accident scenes.

The ambulance companies contend they would be forced out of business if the city gets into emergency medical services.

EMS Chairman Dr. Steven Carveth said the task force co-chairmen, Dr. Jay Upright and Dr. Robert Gillespie, are open to suggestions on the review.

Filmmaker Files $11-Million Suit

Los Angeles (AP) — An $11-million damage suit has been filed against Paramount Pictures Corp. by filmmaker Elaine May who contends the company reneged on a loan agreement affecting her movie, "Mickey and Nickey."

In a Superior Court suite, Miss May said: "Paramount wilfully failed to provide the monies necessary for completion of the picture."

In addition to damages, Miss May asked the court to order Paramount to honor an oral agreement with her, to provide the necessary funds to complete the film and to forbid the studio from claiming exclusive distributorship of the film.

Voters Approve School Bond At North Platte

Lincoln Star Special

North Platte — Voters here Tuesday approved a $9.99 million bond issue to finance new school construction and remodeling.

The vote according, to Lincoln County Clerk Virgil Burke, was 3,410 in favor, 2,234 against. Fewer than 50% of the school district's 11,706 registered voters cast ballots.

The bond will finance construction of a new junior high and a new elementary school plus major additions at five other elementary schools. Adams Junior High will be combined with the senior high building for an expanded senior high, and six elementary buildings 50 or more years old will be razed.

Supt. Jack Elliott said the bond issue is probably the largest ever passed in Nebraska outside Omaha and Lincoln.

To Your Good Health:

Phlebitis Problem Can Be Arrested

By George C. Thosteson, M.D.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Does phlebitis ever really leave?

I was hospitalized last year for this. My feet and ankles still swell considerably and they feel achy with big red lumps.

I am 52 and overweight to the tune of 168 pounds at 5 feet, 3 inches tall. Does weight have to do with phlebitis? My doctor wants me to reduce. I am taking pills for water retention.

I just feel a mess. Hope you can enlighten me. — R.K.

I trust you understand what phlebitis is, but for the sake of other readers I'll just say that it is an inflammation of a vein or veins. The lower limbs are common sites.

I suspect that yours involves deeper veins. Inflammation of superficial veins, those nearer the surface, is not quite as serious a problem because there are a sufficient number of these veins to "transfer" the circulation burdens locally.

In deep-vein phlebitis, there is the danger of a clot forming on the wall of the veins (thrombophlebitis). If this interferes with blood flow, then circulation is sharply reduced and fluid accumulation follows.

The anticoagulants you mention taking (in a part of your letter I did not quote) is to reduce further clot formation.

Now to your question: The "itis" (inflammation) part of the problem can be arrested, but the thrombus (clot) portion cannot be undone.

You also mention elevating your feet at night when the swelling seems worse. You are wise to do this. The swelling late in the day is an indication of vein obstruction. Support hose might help you, also.

You ask if weight is a factor. Yes, and it could have been a cause in the first place. It is imperative that you lose about 30 of those 168 pounds.

This is a problem to be watched carefully, and you should return to your physician. The anticoagulant therapy may have to be reinstituted later.

With careful management this is a problem that can be lived with. But if you get careless, you could be in for some serious consequences.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I have numerous lumps, big as marbles in places, above my knees and above and below my elbows. What causes them? That can be done about them?

Some of them seem sore to the touch. I've had them a long time, but have noticed a few new ones appear now and then. — Mrs. C.C.W.

These could be fatty tumors (lipomas) or nerve tumors (neurofibromata). The latter would be rather rare.

Since the nodules are tender, removal (biopsy) should be done to determine the exact nature of the lumps.

In lipomas or fibromata, the causes are not known and their is no specific treatment.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: My husband is 25 and in good health. The problem is his gum-chewing. He chews gum from the moment he gets up to the moment he goes to bed. He goes through a few packs a day, and he only takes a break for meals.

His dentist says his teeth are fine, but is all this gum good for a person? I feel the gum must be doing something to him. What do you thing? — Mrs. M.P.

If he is healthy and if the dentist finds his teeth in good shape. I see no problem. It is a compulsion, like smoking. You might feel content that it is gum and not several packs of cigarettes. If it is sugarless gum, so much the better.

However, if it is the sugar in the gum that creates this urging to chew, then it might indicate a hypoglycemic condition. This could easily be determined by appropriate tests. It might be worth looking into at his next physical examination.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: My mother takes insulin (45 units). The injection is made about 8:30 a.m. each day. How long does this have effect, about how many hours before it wears off? — A.M.B.

The effect is gradual and reaches a peak in from six to eight hours. Hence, low sugar levels can occur late in the afternoon. A second, usually smaller dose is often required before the evening meal to prevent an unwanted rise during the night. However, insulin therapy varies from patient to patient, and a process of adjustment is usually required before a stable program is worked out.

HEALTH TIP

FROM THE NEBRASKA MEDICAL ASSOCIATION

What is wrong with vitamins? Laxatives? Aspirins? Sleeping pills?

Self-medication, except for minor and temporary conditions, can be dangerous, according to the Nebraska Medical Association.

Even such commonly used drugs as pain-relievers, antacids and laxatives should not be used often, or for long periods of time, because of the danger of overlooking serious advancing disease.

Most of the ills that afflict modern man are minor in the sense, that they do not produce profound or lasting changes in body tissues. The Nebraska Medical Association points out that we cannot always know what is or will remain a minor ailment, and often nature is an especially good friend. The body, unaided except perhaps by sleep and rest, can take care of most ailments, although medications ease distress.

The problem with excessive self-medication is that symptoms become overlooked. Basic causes of conditions may be ignored and serious disease might progress to a point of danger.

Only a physician is prepared to evaluate the results of using a drug. If symptoms or discomforts persist, see your physician.

Next Mexican President Wooing Business Sector

MEXICO CITY (AP) — The man chosen to be Mexico's next president says his government will make peace with private business in order to spur the sagging national economy.

He also says Mexico will provide foreign investment incentives, reduce its commercial deficit with the United States and seek with other Third World nations to get better prices for natural resources.

Jose Lopez Portillo (pronounced poor teel you) has been speaking conciliatory tones since the governing Institutional Revolutionary Party (PRI) nominated him as its candidate for president in the election next July.

PRI presidential candidates have not lost a race yet, so Lopez Portillo virtually is assured of taking office for a six-year term in December, 1976.

He will inherit a government faced by a hostile business sector which claims the country is headed for fullscale socialism.

When he was finance minister, a job he quit after being nominated last month, Lopez Portillo showed irritation when a group of wealthy businessmen said economic activity belonged to private enterprise in a democratic society.

He compared the viewpoint with "Nazi-fascism" and said the government of President Luis Echeverria believed in a mixed economy in which government and private enterprise work together.

More recently, Lopez Portillo told foreign correspondents that he agreed with the current government in blaming capitalists for Mexico's $3 billion public debt and retarded economic growth.

Mexico's gross national product, the sum of its goods and services, has been increasing annually at rates of 7 per cent, but has dropped to 5 per cent this year.

Lopez Portillo said reduced private investments brought about the recession.

"I have fixed the goal of reaching 8 per cent annual growth," he told the foreign newsmen. "It appears difficult in these times of recession and inflation, but it is feasible."

AP

Jose Lopez Portillo

He said the government could not turn the economy around without the help of the private sector.

"We are going to urge them (businessmen) through legal means to increase their industrial investment," he said.

Echeverria's government this year began requiring private banks to deposit up to 80 per cent of all new accounts in the government-owned central bank, the Banco de Mexico. The money is earmarked for agriculture investment.

Lopez Portillo said he would try to reduce the commercial deficit with the United States, estimated at $2 billion annually, by increasing production of grains, petrochemicals, and bottled gas — all items imported from the United States.

The candidate said Mexican laws requiring 51 per cent domestic ownership of new international subsidiaries should not inhibit foreign investment.

"We need the markets, the technology and the capital from abroad, but they (foreign investors) will have to adjust themselves to these rules that are aimed only at accepting Mexicans as partners, not as employes or as servants," he said.

These were Lopez Portillo's first public statements since his nomination. Otherwise, little is known about his political and economic thinking.

Some political observers say it will be mid-1977 before he will have established his government and revealed the direction he will lead Mexico.

Under the Mexican political system it is difficult to predict what Lopez Portillo will do during his six years in office.

Mexican presidents although loyal to the PRI, govern with nearly dictatorial power. Lopez Portillo as finance minister was less an innovator than he was an administrator of President Echeverria's policies.

Lopez Portillo himself said last month: "The Mexican people vote for a party because, while not everyone can know a man, everyone knows the party."

Lopez Portillo is 55-years-old, which will make him one of the oldest presidents in recent Mexican history. He is married to a concert pianist and has three children — a son and two teenage daughters.

He is a lawyer whose political specialty has been planning and financing public works. He became finance secretary in May 1973. Before that he was director of the Federal Electric Commission and had jobs in the presidency and the Ministry of National Patrimony.

Echeverria and Lopez Portillo have been friends most of their lives, even attending schools together.

Lopez Portillo recently told a political rally:

"I am of middle class origin, the son of a modest soldier, public employe and intellectual I was educated in the schools of the revolution. I knew shortages and the need to maintain appearances. My mother miraculously stretched the salary from my father's two jobs. I belong to a generation which, when it had to demonstrate in the streets, was in favor of expropriation of the oil industry. Thus one understands my revolutionary calling."

Republic Steel, Armco Report Sharp Losses

NEW YORK (AP) — The nation's third and fourth-ranked steel companies reported sharp earnings declines in the third quarter Tuesday, citing drops in demand and surging cost pressure.

Armco Steel Corp., the No. 3 producer, said the quarter's profits totaled $29.2 million or 93 cents a share, down from $66.5 million or $2.21 a share last year.

Sales were $783.6 million, down last year's $837.7 million.

"It now appears that domestic steel shipments this year will be at a 12-year low," said William Verity, Armco board chairman. "The impact of such a no-profit situation in our steel business depresses our outlook for additional job creating investment in steel."

Republic Steel Corp., meanwhile, said third quarter earnings were $8.2 million or 51 cents a share, compared with $62.6 million or $3.87 a share a year ago.

Sales declined to $561.6 million from $738.4 million the comparable period in 1974.

Recycling Urged For Aging People

By GERRY SWITZER
Star Staff Writer

The aging person should be recycled.

A four-member panel speaking at the Y Womenspeak on the University of Nebraska-Lincoln campus Tuesday agreed that the concepts of the aging person must be changed.

Instead of these individuals being placed in nursing homes because they have no other place to go, they should be recycled for useful services, according to Martha W. Kniffin of Information Services for the Elderly.

She said involvement is essential for the older person — particularly the widow.

Widowhood, she said, presents its own special problems in that "in a couples society, if you're not a couple, you're out."

Involvement Plugged

"Involvement is the answer — the sooner they become involved in something outside themselves, the better," Mrs. Kniffin emphasized.

She said she had widowed friends, who are still memorializing special days they spent with their husbands seven years or more after the spouse's death.

"Widows have to make a new life for themselves," she said.

The financial plight of the elderly is also a very serious problem.

Start Now

Esther Hamon, retired teacher, told the group, "You really don't have a lot to look forward to unless you start working on it today."

In citing some of the many financial problems older persons face, Miss Hamon said that many men and women are fired before they reach pension stage, leaving them with no pension income at age 65.

Although Medicare is very helpful, she said, one can't rely on it to pay medical bills because it pays only 80% of a hospital bill.

Panel moderator Ann Hopkins, a counselor with the Information Services for the Elderly, noted that Medicare actually pays only 45% of all medical costs since dental and vision costs and numerous other services are not covered under the plan.

Barbara Harriett, another counselor with Information Services for the Elderly, noted that because of minority group family lifestyles, minority group women have added financial problems.

No Benefits

She said most of them have no Social Security benefits because their jobs primarily consisted of housework or helping a husband in sharecropping work, etc.

Even those who had jobs and are eligible for pensions receive very little because their earnings were not large enough to build a substantial pension fund.

She also noted that the average life expectancy for Americans is 71 while the life expectancy for blacks is 56, Indians, 47, and Hispanic, 44.

All agreed that mandatory retirement age is "ridiculous," noting that some individuals should be retired at 35 while others are not ready at 70.

Scrapping Jobs

They also pointed to the problem of businesses and industries eliminating a position held by a person who has reached a substantial salary level and replacing that person with a young, inexperienced person who can be hired for less money.

"But it saves money," Miss Hamon said, noting that this seems to be the main concern of school districts rather than the welfare of the children.

The trend is toward earlier retirement — at 55 —, the panel members noted, adding that there is no reason why there can't be sufficient jobs to go around.

"We should mix retirement in with the rest of our lives," Mrs. Hopkins said. This would give people an opportunity at an earlier age to travel, do research and other things usually left for retirement years, she added.

Cranberries Are Ibimi

New York (UPI) — How about some ibimi sauce with your Thanksgiving turkey? Or atoqua sauce or even pakimintsen? It's bound to be on almost every table, because these three are American Indian names for the cranberry. Ibimi, which was the leni-lenape's word, meant bitter berry. Wisconsin's Algonquans called cranberries atoqua. The third name was that of a New Jersey Delaware chief, who distributed cranberries at tribal peace feasts and who became known as cranberry eater.

Dad Testifies 'It's Lord's Will' Karen Die

QUINLANS . . . mother Julia, left, Joseph, and daughter Karen.

MORRISTOWN, N.J. (AP) — As his weeping family listened, Joseph T. Quinlan testified Tuesday that "it's the Lord's will" his daughter Karen Ann be allowed to die.

"Take her from the machine and the tubes connected to her and let her pass into the hands of the Lord," Quinlan told a crowded courtroom.

Quinlan was the first relative to testify at a trial on the family's request that the 21-year-old Miss Quinlan, who has been in a coma for six months, be allowed to "die with dignity."

Julia Quinlan, wife of Joseph and the mother of the couple's adopted daughter, was to testify Wednesday when the trial resumed.

Mrs. Quinlan sobbed as her husband told how he came to the decision that his daughter's life is over.

Quinlan, a supervisor for a New Jersey drug firm, said that he decided in August that there was no hope for his daughter's recovery.

He said he made up his mind to file a suit to seek permission to disconnect Karen's respirator while driving home from St. Clare's Hospital in Denville after a meeting with her doctors.

"We had done everything possible to help her and now we had no hope," the grey-haired, 50-year-old father said.

Quinlan, a Roman Catholic, said his parish priest agreed and told him he was morally right in "putting her in the Lord's hands."

He said his daughter's doctors originally agreed to remove her from the respirator that allows her to breathe but said they changed their minds for legal reasons.

Quinlan said that if the court grants him his request, "I would not take out the plug myself" but would let medical men do it. Both Miss Quinlan's doctors have testified they would refuse to disconnect the respirator, saying it is against medical tradition.

However, Quinlan said he would allow the continued use of antibiotics and intravenous feeding. "To take the intravenous tube from her body would be euthanasia (mercy killing)," Quinlan said.

"I wouldn't ask the court to pursue this matter if I thought there was a trace of hope," he said. "We're not terminating her life — this is the way the Lord works."

He said he had received numerous letters. Most supported his views, he said, adding that those who disagreed were "good people but they haven't gone through this agony."

Before he took the stand, a New York neurologist testified Miss Quinlan's condition was irreparable and said extraordinary measures should be used only for patients who have a reasonable chance of recovery.

"I and many of my collegues do not believe in saving the life that will lie as a vegetable for 10 years," said Dr. Julius Korein, an expert called by Paul W. Armstrong, attorney for Quinlan.

Korein, a neurologist at Bellevue Hospital in New York City who has done extensive research on comas and brain damage, described his findings when he examined Miss Quinlan at St. Clare's Hospital in Denville last week and after studying her medical records.

He said her brain was damaged, probably in two areas that control conscious and reflex reactions, by a lack of oxygen of her brain on the night she suddenly stopped breathing and slipped into a coma.

He said her symptoms from the time she was rushed from her apartment to the emergency ward of Newton Memorial Hospital on April 15 indicated brain damage. He estimated her brain had little or no oxygen for up to 30 minutes before being connected to the respirator.

A doctor testified at the first day of trial Monday that he could not determine what brought on the comatose state. He said traces of some drugs were found but not necessarily enough to induce coma.

Korein testified that in his opinion Miss Quinlan's condition has not improved in six months and he knew of no treatment to improve her condition.

Korein said when he examined Miss Quinlan he found her emaciated and paralyzed with hands, arms and knees drawn up to her chest with knuckles, wrists, elbows, knees and ankles tightly flexed.

She was not breathing on her own, he said, and the respirator was ventilating her lungs automatically.

Korein said that when aroused by stimuli such as touch or sound, Miss Quinlan would initiate breathing but he diagnosed the symptom as being a complex reflex action, not a conscious reaction.

Under cross-examination by Daniel R. Coburn, the court-appointed lawyer representing Miss Quinlan during the trial, Korein said Miss Quinlan does not fit any of the modern criteria for "brain death."

Coburn asked Korein if he could characterize Miss Quinlan's level of cognitive function by comparing her to a child. Korein said the best comparison would be to "an anacephalic baby" — a baby born with only a rudimentary brain.

Pilgrims Were Third To Hold Thanksgiving

Kansas City, Mo. (UPI) — The first Thanksgiving on the North American continent was celebrated in 1578 by English fishermen in Newfoundland, says Sally Hopkins, a Hallmark researcher here.

Miss Hopkins says another took place in 1607 at the Sir John Popham Colony on the Kennebec River in Maine, 14 years before the Plymouth Colony's first such celebration in 1621.

Tax Committee Gets Cold Feet

(c) Washington Star

Washington — After a brave start, the House Ways and Means Committee is backing away from its crackdown on real estate tax shelters.

The committee, nearing the final stage of drafting a tax reform bill, has voted to postpone strict new rules limiting tax benefits for investors in housing.

Experience suggests that, once lobbyists persuade Congress to delay adverse tax legislation, they can win further postponements.

Pleas From Hills, Lobbyists

The committee agreed to the postponement in response to pleas from Carla Hills, secretary of housing and urban development, and lobbyists representing housing and real estate interests. Committee members said they did not want to risk curtailing investment in the depressed housing industry, especially subsidized housing for low-income families.

In another partial reversal of earlier decisions, the committee decided to preserve one form of tax shelter for investors in livestock.

None of the decisions would gut the reform bill. Substantial additional taxes would be collected from those who now use shelters to reduce their tax payments. But the actions on housing and livestock could open the way for easing provisions of the bill in other areas.

Timber Break May Return

It also was disclosed in an obscure section of a staff report that a tentative decision had been made, with little notice, to restore a tax break for the timber industry. Rep. Al Ullman, D-Ore., the committee chairman, represents a leading timber state.

Tax legislation earlier this year had made certain "natural resource" commodities ineligible for the benefits from setting up domestic international sales corporations. These "DISCs" permit deferral of taxes on a portion of profits from exports.

Experts have been divided on the application of the earlier legislation to timber, but by some interpretations that law would deny DISC benefits to timber exporters. The tentative decision in the pending reform bill would allow the timber industry to retain DISC benefits.

Review Near Completion

The committee is going through the bill to nail down or modify decisions reached tentatively in September and early October. It intends to include in the bill an extension or expansion of this year's antirecession tax cuts. Ullman hopes to complete the review this week.

Earlier tentative decisions were tough on tax shelters, especially in real estate. A typical shelter provides large tax deductions for expenses in early stages of an investment, before it produces much income. These deductions are used by professionals, executives and businessmen to offset all or part of their taxable incomes from other sources.

The committee had voted in general to require deferral of deductions for certain "artificial" losses in real estate until the investment later produces income. Thus, the deductions could not be used to offset salaries, fees or other income, including income from other real estate properties.

In its original decision, the committee applied this "limitation on artificial losses" to commercial real estate, such as office buildings, constructed after 1975. This has not been changed.

Crackdown Deferred

For unsubsidized housing, the original decision would have phased in the new rules over three years, starting in 1976. The committee Monday deferred the crackdown so that it would not cover a project if the builders obtain permanent financing and a binding option on a site by the end of 1976 and if construction starts by the end of 1977.

For low-income housing subsidized by the government, the committee originally would have applied the new rules by stages over three years starting in 1978, thus exempting projects started by the end of 1977. The new version would exempt projects on which the builder obtains a subsidy commitment by the end of 1978 and starts construction by the end of 1980.

Tax shelter deductions would be preserved permanently for investors in projects that beat these deadlines.

The original version would have raised taxes by an estimated $250 million in 1976, $470 million in 1977 and larger amounts in later years, for a total of about $4 billion through 1981. The revision probably would reduce the tax take by about $200 million in 1977 and significant amounts for several years after that.

Master 10, Computers 0

Minneapolis (AP) — It was chess master 10, computers 0 after David Levy of London faced a dozen computerized chess programs in simultaneous matches.

Two computers earned draws with the 30-year-old Briton during an exhibition at the Sixth Annual U.S. Computer Chess Championship.

The draws with Levy were earned by "Tree Frog," a Canadian program played from a computer at Phoenix, Ariz., and "Chess 4.4," a Northwestern University program on a computer at Evanston, Ill.

The other 10 programs were either checkmated, or forced to resign.

2 Wallace Pals Have Birch Ties

BONN, West Germany (AP) — Alabama Gov. George C. Wallace said Tuesday he was not concerned that two of his traveling companions were associated with the right-wing John Birch Society. He declared they were personal friends and not foreign policy advisers.

Emerging from a briefing at the U.S. Embassy in Bonn, Wallace was asked whether the pair's John Birch ties could hurt his presidential hopes.

"Listen," the partially paralyzed governor retorted, "I have some personal friends with me and they are not my advisers politically, on foreign policy or anything else. I don't know what society they belong to . . . I don't pick out personal friends because they belong to an organization. Now if it was dedicated to the overthrow of the government of the United States, I wouldn't associate with them.

"But I don't care if it hurts or helps because I am not going to say to a personal friend of mine of long standing: 'You belong to a certain church or society and, therefore, I'm not going to associate with you.' So if anyone wants to make anything out of that, they can take it and throw it over their left shoulder."

The friends referred to were Dwight Coffman, a retired wood products manufacturer from Washington Court House, Ohio, and Hilaire du Berrier, originally of Flasher, N.D., and now publisher of a news letter in Monte Carlo.

Asked about his political affiliations, Coffman told a newsman, "So what. I'm not a member of the Communist party . . . but I happen to be a John Birch member." Du Berrier has written articles for a Birch magazine and has acknowledged that he has many friends in the society.

Coffman previously had been described by a member of Wallace's campaign staff as the governor's foreign policy adviser.

Asked whether he endorsed the principles of the ultraconservative society, Wallace replied: "That's not the issue on this trip. You're getting off into an extraneous matter. I'm not even sure what they all endorse. I don't endorse everything the Democratic party stands for of which I am a member . . ."

Girl, 8, Confronts Rocky With Poverty

DENVER (AP) — Francie O'Donnell, 8, confronted Vice President Nelson A. Rockefeller on Tuesday about plans he and the government have to help poor people like her.

Francie, wearing a bright red dress, stood on a chair and spoke clearly into a microphone.

"Us poor people are so poor, we're not getting a job. We need money for food. We need good health and care together with clothes and a house."

The vice president listened intently. The little girl said her father was paying "$90 bucks a month" to a Denver landlord who is "mean to us. So we are mean back to her."

Rockefeller, seated about 30 feet away on a platform along with cabinet officials, smiled and said, "I don't think anyone could be mean to you."

The little girl, who told reporters that her mother had died of cancer last April and her father, Rory, is on welfare, was one of about 700 persons who attended the first of six domestic policy forums to be held across the country.

Another welfare recipient, Beatrice Villaneuva of Denver, told the vice president, "I think this country is insane. How can a family of four survive on $300 a month?"

Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare F. David Mathews, a member of the panel, was sympathetic to the woman's complaints, but said there were no easy solutions to problems created by programs as complex as the welfare system.

House OKs Politics For Federal Workers

WASHINGTON (AP) — Legislation to permit nonmilitary federal employes to run for office and take part in political campaigns of others was passed by the House Tuesday, 288 to 119.

The measure, which now goes to the Senate, would sweepingly modify the 36-year-old Hatch Act, which restricts 2.8 million federal employes to a minimum of political activities. It also contains provisions designed to protect them from pressures by superiors and others to contribute funds or to work in election campaigns.

The Ford administration opposes the measure and Republicans said President Ford may veto it if it is passed by the Senate. The Civil Service Commission also came out against it, while government employe labor unions were divided, with major AFL-CIO units in favor.

The House Republican Policy Committee said the bill would "encourage the participation of federal employes in political machines . . . subject activities and pay . . . to the demands of union bosses."

But proponents said it would restore first-class citizenship to government workers and that the Hatch Act represented overreaction to political abuses of long ago.

The House did adopt an amendment requiring employes who run for office to take a 90-day unpaid leave of absence from their jobs.

The bill would allow federal employes, including those working for the semi-independent Postal Service, to seek nomination or election to any office and to take part in political campaigns.

It would not apply to member of the armed services.

Campaign activities could not be conducted during working hours or on government premises, nor while wearing any uniform or badge identifying the person as a government employe.

Millionaire Nominated GSA Head

Washington (AP) — President Ford nominated Florida millionaire Jack M. Eckerd on Tuesday to be administrator of the General Services Administration.

If confirmed by the Senate, the 62-year-old drugstore magnate will take over from Arthur F. Sampson, who resigned effective Oct. 15.

Eckerd, a Republican, ran unsuccessfully for both governor and U.S. senator from Florida in recent years. He is chairman of the board of the Jack Eckerd Corp. in Clearwater, Fla.

Bayh Opens Campaign On Farm

(c) Washington Star

Shirkieville, Ind. — Surrounded by several hundred of his neighbors and constituents, Sen. Birch Bayh officially opened his campaign for the Democratic presidential nomination Tuesday with a promise "to restore moral leadership to the White House."

Bayh made his declaration on his 340-acre farm in this central Indiana crossroads.

In a low-key talk in a tent pitched on the edge of a field of winter wheat, Bayh played the role of local boy made good at a homecoming. He mentioned his civics teachers and joked about how much his son has grown since his neighbors here have seen him.

"This is an important day in my life in a lot of ways," he said. "For one thing it's the first chance I've had to prove to some of my newer friends that there is a Shirkieville, Ind."

The Indiana Democrat also pictured himself as a somewhat reluctant policital dragon.

AP

BAYH . . . hugs Inez Skelly, his high school English teacher.

"Those of you who have known me the longest know I have never had a burning desire to be president of the United States," he said. "You know I feel closer to my God right here."

In his formal declaration Bayh stressed the "moral leadership" theme.

"I am running for the presidency to provide the kind of leadership that places the full weight of the White House behind efforts to meet the needs of our people, to once again put government to work in the hope of realizing the potential of all of our people.

"Moral leadership will not rest so long as there are hungry children, elderly citizens who cannot pay their fuel bills and families that are forced to sell their modest home to provide life-giving medical care to their loved ones. I am running for the presidency to provide the kind of leadership that demonstrates in action and deeds, the courage to make hard decisions, to face difficult choices, and to deal honestly and openly with the American people."

Bayh offered a catalogue of issues he intends to stress that are generally identical to those all Democratic candidates are relying upon — jobs, tax inequities, oil prices, monetary policy.

Bayh, 47, became the ninth declared candidate for the Democratic nomination. The others are Washington Sen. Henry M. Jackson, Texas Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, Arizona Rep. Morris Udall, former Georgia Gov. Jimmy Carter, former Okalhoma Sen. Fred Harris, former North Carolina Gov. Terry Sanford, 1972 Democratic vice presidential candidate Sargent Shriver and Pennsylvania Gov. Milton Shapp. Gov. George Wallace of Alabama is also expected to be a candidate.

House Intelligence Committee Postpones Action On Kissinger

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Select House Intelligence Committee postponed action Tuesday until Nov. 3 on Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger's refusal to turn over a memorandum critical of his decisions during the Cyprus crisis last year.

The committee originally voted 9 to 2 to subpoena the memorandum but Chairman Otis G. Pike, D-N.Y., said some members doubted the full House would back the committee over Kissinger.

Pike said the committee voted 8 to 5 to postpone action on Kissinger's refusal to comply with the subpoena until after he testifies before it Oct. 30 or Oct. 31.

The chairman said he was one of the five who wanted instead to press without delay for full House backing on the committee's right to enforce its subpoenas with contempt citations or other action.

"I thought we should proceed against Dr. Kissinger just as we would against ordinary mortals," Pike said.

Pike said he believes the memorandum by former State Department Cyrpus chief Thomas Boyatt would disclose "recommendations of things which we should have done or could have done at the time of the Cyprus coup and did not in fact do."

Kissinger has said his turning the memorandum over to the committee "would inevitably be destructive" of decision-making by removing protection of junior officers' freedom to make recommendations without fear of being publicly exposed if they are wrong.

"I think what is happening is that people who speak out, who say what they think, are being crucified by the departments in which they reside," Pike told reporters.

"Congress at the present time is so relatively weak," Pike said, "that good and honest men who state their views are punished in the bureaucracy and those who gagged or go along and keep quiet are promoted."

Pike said the four committee members who joined him in voting against the delay were Democratic Reps. Robert N. Giaimo of Connecticut, James V. Stanton of Ohio, Ronald V. Dellums of California and Philip H. Hays of Indiana.

Phlebitis Problem Can Be Arrested

By George C. Thosteson, M.D.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Does phlebitis ever really leave?

I was hospitalized last year for this. My feet and ankles still swell considerably and they feel achy with big red lumps.

I am 52 and overweight to the tune of 168 pounds at 5 feet, 3 inches tall. Does weight have to do with phlebitis? My doctor wants me to reduce. I am taking pills for water retention.

I just feel a mess. Hope you can enlighten me. — R.K.

I trust you understand what phlebitis is, but for the sake of other readers I'll just say that it is an inflammation of a vein or veins. The lower limbs are common sites.

I suspect that yours involves deeper veins. Inflammation of superficial veins, those nearer the surface, is not quite as serious a problem because there are a sufficient number of these veins to "transfer" the circulation burdens locally.

In deep-vein phlebitis, there is the danger of a clot forming on the wall of the veins (thrombophlebitis). If this interferes with blood flow, then circulation is sharply reduced and fluid accumulation follows.

The anticoagulants you mention taking (in a part of your letter I did not quote) is to reduce further clot formation.

Now to your question: The "itis" (inflammation) part of the problem can be arrested, but the thrombus (clot) portion cannot be undone.

You also mention elevating your feet at night when the swelling seems worse. You are wise to do this. The swelling late in the day is an indication of vein obstruction. Support hose might help you, also.

You ask if weight is a factor. Yes, and it could have been a cause in the first place. It is imperative that you lose about 30 of those 168 pounds.

This is a problem to be watched carefully, and you should return to your physician. The anticoagulant therapy may have to be reinstituted later.

With careful management this is a problem that can be lived with. But if you get careless, you could be in for some serious consequences.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I have numerous lumps, big as marbles in places, above my knees and above and below my elbows. What causes them? That can be done about them?

Some of them seem sore to the touch. I've had them a long time, but have noticed a few new ones appear now and then. — Mrs. C.C.W.

These could be fatty tumors (lipomas) or nerve tumors (neurofibromata). The latter would be rather rare.

Since the nodules are tender, removal (biopsy) should be done to determine the exact nature of the lumps.

In lipomas or fibromata, the causes are not known and their is no specific treatment.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: My husband is 25 and in good health. The problem is his gum-chewing. He chews gum from the moment he gets up to the moment he goes to bed. He goes through a few packs a day, and he only takes a break for meals.

His dentist says his teeth are fine, but is all this gum good for a person? I feel the gum must be doing something to him. What do you thing? — Mrs. M.P.

If he is healthy and if the dentist finds his teeth in good shape. I see no problem. It is a compulsion, like smoking. You might feel content that it is gum and not several packs of cigarettes. If it is sugarless gum, so much the better.

However, if it is the sugar in the gum that creates this urging to chew, then it might indicate a hypoglycemic condition. This could easily be determined by appropriate tests. It might be worth looking into at his next physical examination.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: My mother takes insulin (45 units). The injection is made about 8:30 a.m. each day. How long does this have effect, about how many hours before it wears off? — A.M.B.

The effect is gradual and reaches a peak in from six to eight hours. Hence, low sugar levels can occur late in the afternoon. A second, usually smaller dose is often required before the evening meal to prevent an unwanted rise during the night. However, insulin therapy varies from patient to patient, and a process of adjustment is usually required before a stable program is worked out.

HEALTH TIP

FROM THE NEBRASKA MEDICAL ASSOCIATION

What is wrong with vitamins? Laxatives? Aspirins? Sleeping pills?

Self-medication, except for minor and temporary conditions, can be dangerous, according to the Nebraska Medical Association.

Even such commonly used drugs as pain-relievers, antacids and laxatives should not be used often, or for long periods of time, because of the danger of overlooking serious advancing disease.

Most of the ills that afflict modern man are minor in the sense, that they do not produce profound or lasting changes in body tissues. The Nebraska Medical Association points out that we cannot always know what is or will remain a minor ailment, and often nature is an especially good friend. The body, unaided except perhaps by sleep and rest, can take care of most ailments, although medications ease distress.

The problem with excessive self-medication is that symptoms become overlooked. Basic causes of conditions may be ignored and serious disease might progress to a point of danger.

Only a physician is prepared to evaluate the results of using a drug. If symptoms or discomforts persist, see your physician.

Dad Testifies 'It's Lord's Will' Karen Die

MORRISTOWN, N.J. (AP) — As his weeping family listened, Joseph T. Quinlan testified Tuesday that "it's the Lord's will" his daughter Karen Ann be allowed to die.

"Take her from the machine and the tubes connected to her and let her pass into the hands of the Lord," Quinlan told a crowded courtroom.

Quinlan was the first relative to testify at a trial on the family's request that the 21-year-old Miss Quinlan, who has been in a coma for six months, be allowed to "die with dignity."

Julia Quinlan, wife of Joseph and the mother of the couple's adopted daughter, was to testify Wednesday when the trial resumed.

Mrs. Quinlan sobbed as her husband told how he came to the decision that his daughter's life is over.

Quinlan, a supervisor for a New Jersey drug firm, said that he decided in August that there was no hope for his daughter's recovery.

He said he made up his mind to file a suit to seek permission to disconnect Karen's respirator while driving home from St. Clare's Hospital in Denville after a meeting with her doctors.

"We had done everything possible to help her and now we had no hope," the grey-haired, 50-year-old father said.

Quinlan, a Roman Catholic, said his parish priest agreed and told him he was morally right in "putting her in the Lord's hands."

He said his daughter's doctors originally agreed to remove her from the respirator that allows her to breathe but said they changed their minds for legal reasons.

Qunlan said that if the court grants him his request, "I would not take out the plug myself" but would let medical men do it. Both Miss Quinlan's doctors have testified they would refuse to disconnect the respirator, saying it is against medical tradition.

QUINLANS . . . mother Julia, left, Joseph, and daughter Karen.

However, Quinlan said he would allow the continued use of antibiotics and intravenous feeding. "To take the intravenous tube from her body would be euthanasia (mercy killing)," Quinlan said.

"I wouldn't ask the court to pursue this matter if I thought there was a trace of hope," he said. "We're not terminating her life — this is the way the Lord works."

He said he had received numerous letters. Most supported his views, he said, adding that those who disagreed were "good people but they haven't gone through this agony."

Before he took the stand, a New York neurologist testified Miss Quinlan's condition was irreparable and said extraordinary measures should be used only for patients who have a reasonable chance of recovery.

"I and many of my collegues do not believe in saving the life that will lie as a vegetable for 10 years," said Dr. Julius Korein, an expert called by Paul W. Armstrong, attorney for Quinlan.

Korein, a neurologist at Bellevue Hospital in New York City who has done extensive research on comas and brain damage, described his findings when he examined Miss Quinlan at St. Clare's Hospital in Denville last week and after studying her medical records.

He said her brain was damaged, probably in two areas that control conscious and reflex reactions, by a lack of oxygen of her brain on the night she suddenly stopped breathing and slipped into a coma.

He said her symptoms from the time she was rushed from her apartment to the emergency ward of Newton Memorial Hospital on April 15 indicated brain damage. He estimated her brain had little or no oxygen for up to 30 minutes before being connected to the respirator.

A doctor testified at the first day of trial Monday that he could not determine what brought on the comatose state. He said traces of some drugs were found but not necessarily enough to induce coma.

Korein testified that in his opinion Miss Quinlan's condition has not improved in six months and he knew of no treatment to improve her condition.

Korein said when he examined Miss Quinlan he found her emaciated and paralyzed with hands, arms and knees drawn up to her chest with knuckles, wrists, elbows, knees and ankles tightly flexed.

She was not breathing on her own, he said, and the respirator was ventilating her lungs automatically.

Korein said that when aroused by stimuli such as touch or sound, Miss Quinlan would initiate breathing but he diagnosed the symptom as being a complex reflex action, not a conscious reaction.

Under cross-examination by Daniel R. Coburn, the court-appointed lawyer representing Miss Quinlan during the trial, Korein said Miss Quinlan does not fit any of the modern criteria for "brain death."

Coburn asked Korein if he could characterize Miss Quinlan's level of cognitive function by comparing her to a child. Korein said the best comparison would be to "an anacephalic baby" — a baby born with only a rudimentary brain.

Pilgrims Were Third To Hold Thanksgiving

Kansas City, Mo. (UPI) — The first Thanksgiving on the North American continent was celebrated in 1578 by English fishermen in Newfoundland, says Sally Hopkins, a Hallmark researcher here.

Miss Hopkins says another took place in 1607 at the Sir John Popham Colony on the Kennebec River in Maine, 14 years before the Plymouth Colony's first such celebration in 1621.

Tax Committee Gets Cold Feet

(c) Washington Star

Washington — After a brave start, the House Ways and Means Committee is backing away from its crackdown on real estate tax shelters.

The committee, nearing the final stage of drafting a tax reform bill, has voted to postpone strict new rules limiting tax benefits for investors in housing.

Experience suggests that, once lobbyists persuade Congress to delay adverse tax legislation, they can win further postponements.

Pleas From Hills, Lobbyists

The committee agreed to the postponement in response to pleas from Carla Hills, secretary of housing and urban development, and lobbyists representing housing and real estate interests. Committee members said they did not want to risk curtailing investment in the depressed housing industry, especially subsidized housing for low-income families.

In another partial reversal of earlier decisions, the committee decided to preserve one form of tax shelter for investors in livestock.

None of the decisions would gut the reform bill. Substantial additional taxes would be collected from those who now use shelters to reduce their tax payments. But the actions on housing and livestock could open the way for easing provisions of the bill in other areas.

Timber Break May Return

It also was disclosed in an obscure section of a staff report that a tentative decision had been made, with little notice, to restore a tax break for the timber industry. Rep. Al Ullman, D-Ore., the committee chairman, represents a leading timber state.

Tax legislation earlier this year had made certain "natural resource" commodities ineligible for the benefits from setting up domestic international sales corporations. These "DISCs" permit deferral of taxes on a portion of profits from exports.

Experts have been divided on the application of the earlier legislation to timber, but by some interpretations that law would deny DISC benefits to timber exporters. The tentative decision in the pending reform bill would allow the timber industry to retain DISC benefits.

Review Near Completion

The committee is going through the bill to nail down or modify decisions reached tentatively in September and early October. It intends to include in the bill an extension or expansion of this year's antirecession tax cuts. Ullman hopes to complete the review this week.

Earlier tentative decisions were tough on tax shelters, especially in real estate. A typical shelter provides large tax deductions for expenses in early stages of an investment, before it produces much income. These deductions are used by professionals, executives and businessmen to offset all or part of their taxable incomes from other sources.

The committee had voted in general to require deferral of deductions for certain "artificial" losses in real estate until the investment later produces income. Thus, the deductions could not be used to offset salaries, fees or other income, including income from other real estate properties.

In its original decision, the committee applied this "limitation on artificial losses" to commercial real estate, such as office buildings, constructed after 1975. This has not been changed.

Crackdown Deferred

For unsubsidized housing, the original decision would have phased in the new rules over three years, starting in 1976. The committee Monday deferred the crackdown so that it would not cover a project if the builders obtain permanent financing and a binding option on a site by the end of 1976 and if construction starts by the end of 1977.

For low-income housing subsidized by the government, the committee originally would have applied the new rules by stages over three years starting in 1978, thus exempting projects started by the end of 1977. The new version would exempt projects on which the builder obtains a subsidy commitment by the end of 1978 and starts construction by the end of 1980.

Tax shelter deductions would be preserved permanently for investors in projects that beat these deadlines.

The original version would have raised taxes by an estimated $250 million in 1976, $470 million in 1977 and larger amounts in later years, for a total of about $4 billion through 1981. The revision probably would reduce the tax take by about $200 million in 1977 and significant amounts for several years after that.

Master 10, Computers 0

Minneapolis (AP) — It was chess master 10, computers 0 after David Levy of London faced a dozen computerized chess programs in simultaneous matches.

Two computers earned draws with the 30-year-old Briton during an exhibition at the Sixth Annual U.S. Computer Chess Championship.

The draws with Levy were earned by "Tree Frog," a Canadian program played from a computer at Phoenix, Ariz., and "Chess 4.4," at Northwestern University program on a computer at Evanston, Ill.

The other 10 programs were either checkmated, or forced to resign.

Junior High Youths Baby Potted Plants

By PATTY BEUTLER
Star Staff Writer

"I've got to water this kid," a Goodrich Junior High School student announced.

But instead of leading a thirsty toddler to drink, she carried a parched airplane plant to the nearest sink.

The students in Mrs. Sally Pegg's "World of Children" class literally baby their plants. For nine weeks each class member participates in instant parenthood by mothering or fathering a green-leafed offspring.

For some the line between the biological and the botanical has become seemingly blurred.

"What's it supposed to be?" one student asked another, gesturing toward the greenery. "A kid," the second youngster replied. "No, I mean what kind of plant?" was the impatient retort.

Swedish ivy, wandering jew and cactus plants have been personified with names like "Samson," "Grover," and "Joshua John."

The students mark the progress of their plant-children with a periodic sketch of new leaves and a recording of height gain.

The excitement over successes — like several inches of new growth — is countered by disappointment over failures. "You'll have to put yours down as deceased," Mrs. Pegg told one student-parent who had little luck saving her leaf-bearing child.

The role-playing is Mrs. Pegg's way of driving home the responsibility and art of parenting to junior high kids.

"We have to teach the kids things they can go home and apply," stressed the teacher, who originated the course when she was at Robin Mickle last year.

This summer Mrs. Pegg, Marion Fickes and Joann Pool received workshop money from the Lincoln Public Schools to develop the course more fully.

Some schools already have two-week courses in babysitting, said Mrs. Pegg. "But in two weeks you can't learn anything about children," she added.

Her class starts with the basic needs of infants and branches out to the social, emotional and physical development of youngsters. Personality development will be explored by the students when they make 10-foot tall figures of people to help them understand how children relate to grownups twice their size.

Developmental differences in youngsters will be probed in a field trip to LOMR, while career education will be examined in a visit to a day-care center.

At this point in the unit, the student-parents have exchanged plants for a week. The trade arouses the student's feelings of concern for her offspring on loan, as well as develops her responsibility as a babysitter, accountable for her charge's well-being.

Some were squeamish about the exchange, while others were nonchalant. But all seemed concerned about knowing their new baby's name.

Roadside Stands Fill With Pumpkins

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer

Roadside stands are starting to fill with pumpkins and there should be plenty of the bright orange vegetables for Halloween Jack-O-Lanterns and Thanksgiving pies at about the same prices as last year.

Consumers also will find bargains on another fall favorite: apple cider. Prices are lower than last year in many areas because of an abundance of apples that has caused some farmers to complain it doesn't pay to pick the fruit.

The U.S. Department of Agriculture predicts this year's apple harvest will be almost 174 million 42-pound boxes, up 13% over 1974. The National Association of Departments of Agriculture said the average price being paid to farmers this year is $1.60 for 100 apples, compared to $3 last year.

An East Coast orchard owner said he was selling cider at $1.50 a gallon this year compared to $2 in 1974.

Getting accurate figures on the pumpkin supply is difficult because so many of them are sold within a few miles of the fields where they are grown and no statistics are recorded.

The latest available Census of Agriculture figures are from 1969 when the USDA reported 2,408 farms growing 17,393 acres of pumpkins. That represented about 1% of the total fresh vegetable and melon acreage in the country.

The USDA keeps track of pumpkins at major terminal cities not counting those roadside stands and farmers' markets. It said that almost 28 million pounds were unloaded in these cities last year.

This year's count isn't available yet, but a spot check of area agriculture officials indicated that supplies should be adequate and prices will be about the same as last year.

"There seem to be enough," said a Connecticut spokesman. "The price in the wholesale market is about $3.25 or $3.50 a bushel for the small, sugar pumpkin. That's the same as last year."

Retail prices vary. "The small roadside stands generally charge whatever the traffic will bear," said one state agriculture department official.

The small pumpkins generally are used for pies and millions of them are turned into frozen or canned fillings. The ones that wind up as Halloween decorations are usually of the variety known as Connecticut Field and run anywhere from about 15 to 25 pounds each.

One East Coast supermarket chain reported it was paying about $110 a ton for large pumpkins, a price that works out to about 5½ cents a pound. The store is selling the pumpkins for 10 cents a pound.

More than half the nation's pumpkins are grown in three states — Illinos, California and New Jersey. About 80% are sold during October.

When buying pumpkins, you should look for well-matured vegetables, without any breaks, cracks or soft patches. The pumpkin should be clean and have a rich, orange color.

Bayh Opens Campaign On Farm

(c) Washington Star

Shirkieville, Ind. — Surrounded by several hundred of his neighbors and constuents, Sen. Birch Bayh officially opened his campaign for the Democratic presidential nomination Tuesday with a promise "to restore moral leadership to the White House."

Bayh made his declaration on his 340-acre farm in this central Indiana crossroads.

In a low-key talk in a tent pitched on the edge of a field of winter wheat, Bayh played the role of local boy made good at a homecoming. He mentioned his civics teachers and joked about how much his son has grown since his neighbors here have seen him.

"This is an important day in my life in a lot of ways," he said. "For one thing it's the first chance I've had to prove to some of my newer friends that there is a Shirkieville, Ind."

The Indiana Democrat also pictured himself as a somewhat reluctant policital dragon.

AP

BAYH . . . hugs Inez Skelly, his high school English teacher.

"Those of you who have known me the longest know I have never had a burning desire to be president of the United States," he said. "You know I feel closer to my God right here."

In his formal declaration Bayh stressed the "moral leadership" theme

"I am running for the presidency to provide the kind of leadership that places the full weight of the White House behind efforts to meet the needs of our people, to once again put government to work in the hope of realizing the potential of all of our people.

"Moral leadership will not rest so long as there are hungry children, elderly citizens who cannot pay their fuel bills and families that are forced to sell their modest home to provide life-giving medical care to their loved ones. I am running for the presidency to provide the kind of leadership that demonstrates in action and deeds, the courage to make hard decisions, to face difficult choices, and to deal honestly and openly with the American people."

Bayh offered a catalogue of issues he intends to stress that are generally identical to those all Democratic candidates are relying upon — jobs, tax inequities, oil prices, monetary policy.

Bayh, 47, became the ninth declared candidate for the Democratic nomination. The others are Washington Sen. Henry M. Jackson, Texas Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, Arizona Rep. Morris Udall, former Georgia Gov. Jimmy Carter, former Okalhoma Sen. Fred Harris, former North Carolina Gov. Terry Sanford, 1972 Democratic vice presidential candidate Sargent Shriver and Pennsylvania Gov Milton Shapp. Gov George Wallace of Alabama is also expected to be a candidate.

House Intelligence Committee Postpones Action On Kissinger

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Select House Intelligence Committee postponed action Tuesday until Nov. 3 on Secretary of State Henry A Kissinger's refusal to turn over a memorandum critical of his decisions during the Cyprus crisis last year

The committee originally voted 9 to 2 to subpoena the memorandum but Chairman Otis G. Pike, D-N.Y., said some members doubted the full House would back the committee over Kissinger.

Pike said the committee voted 8 to 5 to postpone action on Kissinger's refusal to comply with the subpoena until after he testifies before it Oct. 30 or Oct. 31

The chairman said he was one of the five who wanted instead to press without delay for full House backing on the committee's right to enforce its subpoenas with contempt citations or other action

"I thought we should proceed against Dr Kissinger just as we would against ordinary mortals," Pike said

Pike said he believes the memorandum by former State Department Cyrpus chief Thomas Boyatt would disclose "recommendations of things which we should have done or could have done at the time of the Cyprus coup and did not in fact do"

Kissinger has said his turning the memorandum over to the committee "would inevitably be destructive" of decision-making by removing protection of junior officers' freedom to make recommendations without fear of being publicly exposed if they are wrong

I think what is happening is that people who speak out who say what they think, are being crucified by the departments in which they reside," Pike told reporters

"Congress at the present time is so relatively weak," Pike said, "that good and honest men who state their views are punished in the bureaucracy and those who gagged or go along and keep quiet are promoted"

Pike said the four committee members who joined him in voting against the delay were Democratic Reps. Robert N. Giaimo of Connecticut, James V. Stanton of Ohio, Ronald V. Dellums of California and Philip H Hays of Indiana.

It Just Wasn't The Family's Day

A Lincoln resident, Mrs. Bridget Phillips, has a son who, with his wife and two children, lives in North Platte. Here, Mrs. Phillips reveals "An Evening in the Life of the Kevin Phillips Family."

By BRIDGET PHILLIPS

When one person wakes up on the wrong side of the bed, the situation is less than desireable. But when fate turns against a whole family, it spells disaster.

It started out like any other day in the North Platte home of the Kevin Phillips' family recently.

Then, after dinner, things started to change.

The succession of disasters began when Mr. and Mrs. Phillips' 16-year-old son, Billy, walked down to the mailbox to pick up the evening paper. While walking back to the house, Billy began tossing the newspaper in the air and catching it.

It was on the final, fateful toss that the 38-mile-per-hour Nebraska wind took charge. Blowing toward the house, the wind caught the newspaper and crashed it through the picture window, leaving a six-inch hole and glass splinters all over everything!

Leftover meatloaf, vegetables, salad — everything — was destined for the garbage.

The mess cleaned up, Father Phillips went out to mow the lawn, but a wheel fell off the riding mower. So much for that.

Meanwhile, young Billy informed his parents that he has to go to a motor bike club meeting. Can he take the jeep? He can, he leaves, and a few minutes later the phone rings.

It's Billy. The jeep has broken down. Boy, is it broken down! The motor cables have broken and motor parts have been thrust through the radiator.

It's now up to Mom and Dad to rescue their son and they leave in the '72 Chevy immediately. A few minutes later and a few miles down the road, a young deer appears.

It's too late to avoid him! The deer crashes into the grill and headlights. Shaken, but undaunted, Mr. and Mrs. Phillips proceed to pick up Billy. They will call the Game Commission to report the accident when they return home.

Results of damages so far include one and one-half hours of lost time, one thermo window, one out-of-commission lawn mower and two cars in the hospital. This leaves the Dodge pickup . . . maybe.

Then the Phillips' daughter Linda — a student at the University of Colorado in Boulder — calls to say she is planning to come Lincoln for a Cornhusker football game. She takes the bus to North Platte and with her mother continues on to Lincoln in the pickup.

Miraculously, the two arrive in Lincoln without incident.

But going home serious mechanical problems develop a few miles out of Lincoln and the pickup has to be left for repairs.

The day was less than perfect, but thanks to a friend who loaned Mrs. Phillips and her daughter a car, the two arrived home by 9 a.m. the next day.

Nudism Isn't Much Fun For Spectators

Houston (UPI) — As spectator sports go, Jim Chase claims nudism can get boring pretty fast.

"It's like a church picnic but with no clothes," Chase said of Texas' newest and largest nudist camp.

"It's not a sexual playground. It's a bunch of naked people doing pretty normal things, just a camping trip in the nude."

The 150 members don't even notice each other's bodies, he said, because to them, clothes are unnatural and nudity is not.

"You'd be bored in five minutes if that's all you were interested in," Chase said.

The rules against public sexual contact are strict, he said.

"There is absolutely no public sexual contact," he said, "and no sexual discussions within the perceptible range of children."

Chase and his wife, Vera, both 27, opened the camp at a temporary site near Navasota, north of Houston, eight weeks ago and have kept the name of the camp and its exact location a secret to avoid the curious public and let members relax with no worry about peepers.

He said the camp is already bigger than the other four nudist resorts in Texas and is the only member-only camp.

He said a permanent camp to be opened by May 1 should offer more for members. On the present 400-acre farm, all that's available are campsites, swimming, volleyball, horseback riding, dancing, a playground and Sunday school. The permanent camp, which will be 40 miles north of downtown Houston, will offer that and heated swimming pool, indoor game rooms, tennis courts and lodges and trailers for overnight guests.

Jim and Vera, their three children and a nephew first visited a nudist camp a year ago when she was involved in a Miss Nude contest.

"We'd practiced nudity in our home for years without ever thinking about going to a camp," he said. "The atmosphere was unbelievable. There was a total lack of hassle about nudism.

"One misconception about nudist camps is that they are full of Adonis and Venus bodies," he said. "But they're just like people you see in a grocery store at any given time, except with no clothes on."

The bidding:

Opening lead - six of clubs.

The ability to enter dummy, whenever necessary, plays a large part in declarer's management of his assets. In the same way, it is frequently important for the defenders to have communication with each other's hands.

It follows that anything that can be done to interfere with the other side's means of communication is all to the good, and many hands feature this type of interference.

Consider the present deal where West leads a club. Declarer has seven ready-made tricks and his only chance for two more lies in hearts.

So declarer must arrange his play so as to lead hearts twice toward dummy to establish his eighth and ninth tricks, but at the same time must keep a sharp eye peeled on what the defenders are doing.

Thus, if South wins East's jack of clubs with the ace, he finishes behind the well-known eight ball when East wins the first heart lead with the king and returns a club. West's clubs become established before dummy's hearts, and East-West score three clubs and two hearts to defeat the contract one trick.

Declarer can avoid this outcome by permitting East to win the first trick with the jack of clubs. If East continues the suit, West's clubs drop out of the picture, because, though he may later establish them, he will then have no entry to cash them.

East cannot overcome this difficulty by shifting to a diamond at trick two. Again declarer ducks and the result is that South makes the contract because there is no way for either defender to both establish and cash his long suit.

It would seem that it takes two ducks to cook East's goose!

Gay Family Objects To Use COLOR

The Lincoln Star 18
Wednesday, Oct 22, 1975

Lifescape

DEAR ABBY: My family name is "Gay." My ancestors have been traced back to France in the early 1600s.

I am writing this in hopes that the Gay Liberation Society will see it and realize how unfair they are being in using our name for their organization.

The gay liberation group holds that they have a right to live and let live — a philosophy with which I am in complete agreement. But in so doing, they have infringed upon the rights of others.

Since the homosexuals have organized and officially adopted our name for their group, we have been harassed with crank telephone calls at all hours, and subjected to insults and ridicule.

Our name was "Gay" long before they took that name, so I think in all fairness to us Gays, they should change the name of their society to one more befitting to their crusade.

The last straw came when my father called me long distance after he saw a TV series on homosexuality, and he seriously suggested that WE change OUR name!

A PROUD GAY

DEAR PROUD: I understand your plight and am most sympathetic, but I doubt if the Gay Liberation Society will consider changing its name. Although you were Gay first, I believe there are more of THEM than there are of YOU.

DEAR ABBY: I was recently married. The wedding was beautiful and quite costly. My parents paid for everything.

They hired the finest photographer in town, who took nearly 100 pictures in color. He took abut 25 group pictures in which the mother of the groom appeared.

Later, we learned that she went to the photographer's studio and asked to see the pictures of the wedding. Then she BOUGHT the negatives of all the pictures in which she thought she looked "terrible," and she destroyed them!

Those pictures can never be replaced, Abby. What do you think of such a vain woman? And what can be done about it?

HURT BRIDE

DEAR HURT: If your parents hired the photographer, he had no business selling the negatives to anyone. The groom's mother was clearly out of line.

There is nothing you can do about it now. (P.S. One word of advice, dear. Don't taunt your husband about this. He's not responsible for his mother's deeds.)

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I were married for 30 years and raised a fine family. He was a wonderful man, and I loved him very much. After he had been gone for 10 years, I married another man.

This marriage was not a beautiful love affair, as was my first. It was a convenience for both of us. My second husband also had been married previously.

I want to be buried in my family plot when my time comes, and my present husband wants to be buried beside HIS first wife. We are agreed on that, but here's the problem: How can I be buried beside my husband with my present husband's last name — which I legally bear?

That would be dreadful.

Could I have my marker read: "Elizabeth, child of God, 1915"? Or would that be in poor taste?

PLANNING AHEAD IN CANADA

DEAR PLANNING: I think you've hit on the perfect solution.

DEAR ABBY: I have a sex problem that I have tried to handle myself, but it's not getting any better. I don't have a minister to talk to, and even if I did, I don't think I could discuss this with him.

You see, when my husband and I make love, I don't feel anything. I mean, I get aroused, but nothing happens. I'm 27 and have four children. Shouldn't I feel something?

This is my second marriage, and it was the same way with my first marriage. Does this mean I'm frigid?

I am afraid my husband will start shopping around for a replacement if I don't put a little more enthusiasm into my lovemaking. I pretend I'm getting something out of it, but I'm afraid I'm not very convincing.

Abby, please help me.

MISSING SOMETHING IN MINNEAPOLIS

DEAR MISSING: First, see your gynecologist. After a thorough examination, he will know if something physical needs correcting. If it's not physical, ask for his recommendation. Your local university has a human sexuality program that offers excellent counseling. If it's any comfort to you, your problem is far more common than you think.

DEAR ABBY: We own a dog that is always kept on a leash when he's put outside.

Our neighbor has cats that are allowed to roam freely outside and onto our property., They tease our dog, causing him to bark until we put the cats back on their own property.

We have had anonymous phone calls informing us that our dog's barking is disturbing the entire neighborhood. Abby, if those cats didn't tantlize our dog, he wouldn't bark.

What do you suggest we do? We've complained to the cat owners, but they still turn their cats loose on our property.

FUMING

DEAR FUMING: Tell the cat owners that if their cats are found on your property, you will ring up the local pound. Then follow through. One "cat-astrophe" should do it.

Junior High Youths Baby Potted Plants

By PATTY BEUTLER
Star Staff Writer

"I've got to water this kid," a Goodrich Junior High School student announced.

But instead of leading a thirsty toddler to drink, she carried a parched airplane plant to the nearest sink.

The students in Mrs. Sally Pegg's "World of Children" class literally baby their plants. For nine weeks each class member participates in instant parenthood by mothering or fathering a green-leafed offspring.

For some the line between the biological and the botanical has become seemingly blurred.

"What's it supposed to be?" one student asked another, gesturing toward the greenery. "A kid," the second youngster replied. "No, I mean what kind of plant?" was the impatient retort.

Swedish ivy, wandering jew and cactus plants have been personified with names like "Samson," "Grover," and "Joshua John."

The students mark the progress of their plant-children with a periodic sketch of new leaves and a recording of height gain.

The excitement over successes — like several inches of new growth — is countered by disappointment over failures. "You'll have to put yours down as deceased," Mrs. Pegg told one student-parent who had little luck saving her leaf-bearing child.

The role-playing is Mrs. Pegg's way of driving home the responsibility and art of parenting to junior high kids.

"We have to teach the kids things they can go home and apply," stressed the teacher, who originated the course when she was at Robin Mickle last year.

This summer Mrs. Pegg, Marion Fickes and Joann Pool received workshop money from the Lincoln Public Schools to develop the course more fully.

Some schools already have two-week courses in babysitting, said Mrs. Pegg. "But in two weeks you can't learn anything about children," she added.

Her class starts with the basic needs of infants and branches out to the social, emotional and physical development of youngsters. Personality development will be explored by the students when they make 10-foot tall figures of people to help them understand how children relate to grownups twice their size.

Developmental differences in youngsters will be probed in a field trip to LOMR, while career education will be examined in a visit to a day-care center.

At this point in the unit, the student-parents have exchanged plants for a week. The trade arouses the student's feelings of concern for her offspring on loan, as well as develops her responsibility as a babysitter, accountable for her charge's well-being.

Some were squeamish about the exchange, while others were nonchalant. But all seemed concerned about knowing their new baby's name.

Roadside Stands Fill With Pumpkins

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer

Roadside stands are starting to fill with pumpkins and there should be plenty of the bright orange vegetables for Halloween Jack-O-Lanterns and Thanksgiving pies at about the same prices as last year.

Consumers also will find bargains on another fall favorite: apple cider. Prices are lower than last year in many areas because of an abundance of apples that has caused some farmers to complain it doesn't pay to pick the fruit.

The U.S. Department of Agriculture predicts this year's apple harvest will be almost 174 million 42-pound boxes, up 13% over 1974. The National Association of Departments of Agriculture said the average price being paid to farmers this year is $1.60 for 100 apples, compared to $3 last year.

An East Coast orchard owner said he was selling cider at $1.50 a gallon this year compared to $2 in 1974.

Getting accurate figures on the pumpkin supply is difficult because so many of them are sold within a few miles of the fields where they are grown and no statistics are recorded.

The latest available Census of Agriculture figures are from 1969 when the USDA reported 2,408 farms growing 17,393 acres of pumpkins. That represented about 1% of the total fresh vegetable and melon acreage in the country.

The USDA keeps track of pumpkins at major terminal cities not counting those roadside stands and farmers' markets. It said that almost 28 million pounds were unloaded in these cities last year.

This year's count isn't available yet, but a spot check of area agriculture officials indicated that supplies should be adequate and prices will be about the same as last year.

"There seem to be enough," said a Connecticut spokesman. "The price in the wholesale market is about $3.25 or $3.50 a bushel for the small, sugar pumpkin. That's the same as last year."

Retail prices vary. "The small roadside stands generally charge whatever the traffic will bear," said one state agriculture department official.

The small pumpkins generally are used for pies and millions of them are turned into frozen or canned fillings. The ones that wind up as Halloween decorations are usually of the variety known as Connecticut Field and run anywhere from about 15 to 25 pounds each.

One East Coast supermarket chain reported it was paying about $110 a ton for large pumpkins, a price that works out to about 5½ cents a pound. The store is selling the pumpkins for 10 cents a pound.

More than half the nation's pumpkins are grown in three states — Illinos, California and New Jersey. About 80% are sold during October.

When buying pumpkins, you should look for well-matured vegetables, without any breaks, cracks or soft patches. The pumpkin should be clean and have a rich, orange color.

Doctor From Colombia Apparently Will Not Return To Osceola

Osceola (UPI) — Dr. Carlos Nossa, the Colombia, South America, physician who practiced medicine in Osceola and encountered more than a year of immigration difficulties, apparently will not return to the United States, Dr. Clarence Davis said Tusday.

Davis, who practiced with Nossa, bitterly criticized the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service's Omaha office during a telephone interview with UPI.

"I think the very, very tragic thing about this is that it was not handled in a different manner by the Immigration Service in Omaha at the time it all began," Davis said.

Disservice To U.S.

"The Immigration Service in Omaha did a tremendous disservice to the people of the State of Nebraska and the people of the United States. I personally don't feel my tax dollars should go into the payment of salaries of people of this type."

Despite assurances Nossa would be granted a visa, Davis said Nossa has not filed an application for a "waiver of excludability," which, Davis said, would allow Nossa to re-enter the United States with his family.

"I have had no definite statement from Dr. Nossa that he is not going to return," Davis said, "but the last letter from him would indicate that he will not return."

Davis, who now will practice alone in this community of nearly 1,000 in eastern Nebraska, said Nossa has requested his personal belongings from Osceola shipped to Colombia and has attempted to sell his car which is in Omaha.

'A Criminal'

If Nossa were to file an application for re-entry, Davis said, Nossa apparently feels he would be returning as "a criminal."

"From a realistic standpoint," Davis said, "this would not be so, of course."

The waiver is a pardon for the alleged false statement and violation of a working visa obtained in 1973 to fill a medical post in Mississippi. Nossa was accused of violating the visa when he left Mississippi to resettle in Osceola in July of last year, facing the threat of deportation during the past year.

Nossa, his German-born wife and their two American-born children returned to South America Sept. 20 under a plan to re-enter the United States as a spouse of a German national.

Davis, who sponsored Nossa, at least two Nebraska attorneys and Sen. Carl Curtis' office intervened earlier this month following reports from Bogota that Nossa was encountering difficulty in receiving a new visa.

On Oct. 7, Curtis' office said the problems had been ironed out and Nossa only had to file an application for re-entry.

However, Davis said Tuesday there was no evidence that the Colombia government was attempting to keep him. "I think that he was probably fed up with the whole thing," Davis said. "It's a very complex, emotional reaction."

Loneliest In World

As the only physician left in Osceola, Davis said, "I'm the most lonely person in the whole world. It makes a difference in the quality and quantity of medical care and the availability of medical coverage. It makes a difference in coverage of staffing the hospital. It makes a difference in the amount of revenues brought into the town. It makes a tremendous difference."

Davis said the Immigration Service in Omaha could have handled Nossa's case differently, such as granting him a visa as "an exceptionally talented person" with a needed skill.

"What really tees me off," Davis said, "is the fact that I filed a petition for a working visa for Dr. Nossa and that petition has never been answered, and as a U.S. taxpayer and a U.S. citizen, it really tees me off no end, and no reason was given on why they didn't answer my petition."

Nossa had about half the patient load in the Osceola hospital. Davis said he is working at full capacity. Without Nossa, he said, "It means at least 20 outpatients per day will not be seen, a decrease in the hospital population of at least 10 patients per day.

"Instead of being on call every other night, now I'm on call every night," Davis said.

When asked if any further action was contemplated, Davis replied: "The die is cast."

It Just Wasn't The Family's Day

A Lincoln resident, Mrs. Bridget Phillips, has a son who, with his wife and two children, lives in North Platte. Here, Mrs. Phillips reveals "An Evening in the Life of the Kevin Phillips Family."

By BRIDGET PHILLIPS

When one person wakes up on the wrong side of the bed, the situation is less than desireable. But when fate turns against a whole family, it spells disaster.

It started out like any other day in the North Platte home of the Kevin Phillips' family recently.

Then, after dinner, things started to change.

The succession of disasters began when Mr. and Mrs. Phillips' 16-year-old son, Billy, walked down to the mailbox to pick up the evening paper. While walking back to the house, Billy began tossing the newspaper in the air and catching it.

It was on the final, fateful toss that the 38-mile-per-hour Nebraska wind took charge. Blowing toward the house, the wind caught the newspaper and crashed it through the picture window, leaving a six-inch hole and glass splinters all over everything!

Leftover meatloaf, vegetables, salad — everything — was destined for the garbage.

The mess cleaned up, Father Phillips went out to mow the lawn, but a wheel fell off the riding mower. So much for that.

Meanwhile, young Billy informed his parents that he has to go to a motor bike club meeting. Can he take the jeep? He can, he leaves, and a few minutes later the phone rings.

It's Billy. The jeep has broken down. Boy, is it broken down! The motor cables have broken and motor parts have been thrust through the radiator.

It's now up to Mom and Dad to rescue their son and they leave in the '72 Chevy immediately. A few minutes later and a few miles down the road, a young deer appears.

It's too late to avoid him! The deer crashes into the grill and headlights. Shaken, but undaunted, Mr. and Mrs. Phillips proceed to pick up Billy. They will call the Game Commission to report the accident when they return home.

Results of damages so far include one and one-half hours of lost time, one thermo window, one out-of-commission lawn mower and two cars in the hospital. This leaves the Dodge pickup . . . maybe.

Then the Phillips' daughter Linda — a student at the University of Colorado in Boulder — calls to say she is planning to come Lincoln for a Cornhusker football game. She takes the bus to North Platte and with her mother continues on to Lincoln in the pickup.

Miraculously, the two arrive in Lincoln without incident.

But going home serious mechanical problems develop a few miles out of Lincoln and the pickup has to be left for repairs.

The day was less than perfect, but thanks to a friend who loaned Mrs. Phillips and her daughter a car, the two arrived home by 9 a.m. the next day.

Nudism Isn't Much Fun For Spectators

Houston (UPI) — As spectator sports go, Jim Chase claims nudism can get boring pretty fast.

"It's like a church picnic but with no clothes," Chase said of Texas' newest and largest nudist camp.

"It's not a sexual playground. It's a bunch of naked people doing pretty normal things, just a camping trip in the nude."

The 150 members don't even notice each other's bodies, he said, because to them, clothes are unnatural and nudity is not.

"You'd be bored in five minutes if that's all you were interested in," Chase said.

The rules against public sexual contact are strict, he said.

"There is absolutely no public sexual contact," he said, "and no sexual discussions within the perceptible range of children."

Chase and his wife, Vera, both 27, opened the camp at a temporary site near Navasota, north of Houston, eight weeks ago and have kept the name of the camp and its exact location a secret to avoid the curious public and let members relax with no worry about peepers.

He said the camp is already bigger than the other four nudist resorts in Texas and is the only member-only camp.

He said a permanent camp to be opened by May 1 should offer more for members. On the present 400-acre farm, all that's available are campsites, swimming, volleyball, horseback riding, dancing, a playground and Sunday school. The permanent camp, which will be 40 miles north of downtown Houston, will offer that and heated swimming pool, indoor game rooms, tennis courts and lodges and trailers for overnight guests.

Jim and Vera, their three children and a nephew first visited a nudist camp a year ago when she was involved in a Miss Nude contest.

"We'd practiced nudity in our home for years without ever thinking about going to a camp," he said. "The atmosphere was unbelievable. There was a total lack of hassle about nudism.

"One misconception about nudist camps is that they are full of Adonis and Venus bodies," he said. "But they're just like people you see in a grocery store at any given time, except with no clothes on."

Opening lead - six of clubs.

The ability to enter dummy, whenever necessary, plays a large part in declarer's management of his assets. In the same way, it is frequently important for the defenders to have communication with each other's hands.

It follows that anything that can be done to interfere with the other side's means of communication is all to the good, and many hands feature this type of interference.

Consider the present deal where West leads a club. Declarer has seven ready-made tricks and his only chance for two more lies in hearts.

So declarer must arrange his play so as to lead hearts twice toward dummy to establish his eighth and ninth tricks, but at the same time must keep a sharp eye peeled on what the defenders are doing.

Thus, if South wins East's jack of clubs with the ace, he finishes behind the well-known eight ball when East wins the first heart lead with the king and returns a club. West's clubs become established before dummy's hearts, and East-West score three clubs and two hearts to defeat the contract one trick.

Declarer can avoid this outcome by permitting East to win the first trick with the jack of clubs. If East continues the suit, West's clubs drop out of the picture, because, though he may later establish them, he will then have no entry to cash them.

East cannot overcome this difficulty by shifting to a diamond at trick two. Again declarer ducks and the result is that South makes the contract because there is no way for either defender to both establish and cash his long suit.

It would seem that it takes two ducks to cook East's goose!

Genetic Counselors Seek Traveling Funds

By BOB GUENTHER
Star Staff Writer

Outstate couples next year may be able to receive genetic counseling in their own communities for the first time, thus saving them a trip to Omaha.

The State Office of Mental Retardation is seeking a $15,000 appropriation from the Legislature for fiscal 1976-77 to set up a traveling team of genetic counselors to reach people in all corners of the state.

Presently, genetic counseling is available to people willing to travel to the University of Nebraska Medical Center's Center for Human Genetics. (The Beatrice State Home also offers genetic counseling to residents and relatives of residents in the home.)

The Center for Human Genetics with its 20-member staff has been operating for the past 13 years.

Pays For Itself

In that time, Dr. James Eisen, center director, said, the facility has more than paid for itself several times in terms of prevention and treatment of genetic abnormalities and assuaging parents' guilt feelings.

With counseling only available in Omaha, residents of outlying areas, such as Valentine and Scottsbluff, find it "a major chore" and consequently don't seek help, Dr. Eisen said.

"In practice, they don't come," he said. "It's either too far, or people are afraid to ask."

In explaining the need for genetic counseling, Dr. Eisen said:

—one-third to one-half of all miscarriages are due to genetic conditions.

—One-third of all pediatric beds are occupied by children with genetic conditions.

Genetic Diseases

—one-fourth of all people hospitalized have genetic diseases.

—Four of every five cases of mental retardation are attributable to genetic problems.

Dr. Eisen said the costs of prevention and therapy of genetic diseases are one-tenth of what it costs to care for a person after it's too late to control a genetic disease.

In the case of PKU, a genetic metabolic disease which undetected causes mental retardation, it costs $1.25 to test each infant for the condition.

Since one of every 14,000 infants has the disease and dietary treatment for a PKU sufferer costs $16,000 over 10 years, the total cost of prevention is approximately $33,000 per child.

Untreated, PKU can cause mental retardation which would require $365,000 to care for the individual over a lifetime in an institution, he said.

No Charge

Dr. Eisen said the travelling team would work with community physicians and would not charge patients for the service.

The major costs, he said, would be a part-time pediatrician, a part-time social worker and traveling expenses. The only remaining question, he said, is who will pay for x-rays and lab tests.

Dr. Eisen noted that he does not advise couples whether to have children or not but does explain the options they have.

Arnold Carmel, Office of Mental Retardation chief, said, "I'm very hopeful the program will go, and its benefits will become self-evident."

Woman Fined For Stabbing Her Husband

Los Angeles (AP) — Shirley Florea was fined and put on two years probation Monday for stabbing her husband, television producer John P. Florea, in an altercation outside a courtroom where their divorce case has been heard.

Superior Court Commissioner Sam Bubrick also ordered the 48-year-old Mrs. Florea to undergo psychiatric treatment and said she could deduct the cost from her $1,500 fine.

Florea suffered a stab wound in the back but he has since recovered from the injury, authorities said.

Charges Filed Against Policeman In Accident

Omaha (AP) — A Bellevue girl injured in an accident involving an off-duty policeman was in fair condition Monday at St. Joseph Hospital.

The policeman, Mark Jensen, 25, who has served on the Bellevue force two years, has been charged with drunken driving and released on $200 bond.

Bellevue Police Chief Warren Robinson said Jensen has been indenfintely suspended during investigation of the accident, which occurred about midnight Friday.

The girl, Jo Lynn Price, 17, suffered multiple head and back injuries.

Chief Robinson said Miss Price was among a group leaving a friend's home and Jensen was northbound in his pickup truck when the accident occurred. Robinson said the Jensen truck, at a curve, smashed into the rear of one car, pushing it into another. Miss Price apparently was caught between the two cars.

Chief Robinson said Jensen, who had been off duty sick for four days, was relieved of duty shortly after the accident.

dear abby

Gay Family Objects To Use COLOR

DEAR ABBY: My family name is "Gay." My ancestors have been traced back to France in the early 1600s.

I am writing this in hopes that the Gay Liberation Society will see it and realize how unfair they are being in using our name for their organization.

The gay liberation group holds that they have a right to live and let live — a philosophy with which I am in complete agreement. But in so doing, they have infringed upon the rights of others.

Since the homosexuals have organized and officially adopted our name for their group, we have been harassed with crank telephone calls at all hours, and subjected to insults and ridicule.

Our name was "Gay" long before they took that name, so I think in all fairness to us Gays, they should change the name of their society to one more befitting to their crusade.

The last straw came when my father called me long distance after he saw a TV series on homosexuality, and he seriously suggested that WE change OUR name!

A PROUD GAY

DEAR PROUD: I understand your plight and am most sympathetic, but I doubt if the Gay Liberation Society will consider changing its name. Although you were Gay first, I believe there are more of THEM than there are of YOU.

DEAR ABBY: I was recently married. The wedding was beautiful and quite costly. My parents paid for everything.

They hired the finest photographer in town, who took nearly 100 pictures in color. He took abut 25 group pictures in which the mother of the groom appeared.

Later, we learned that she went to the photographer's studio and asked to see the pictures of the wedding. Then she BOUGHT the negatives of all the pictures in which she thought she looked "terrible," and she destroyed them!

Those pictures can never be replaced, Abby. What do you think of such a vain woman? And what can be done about it?

HURT BRIDE

DEAR HURT: If your parents hired the photographer, he had no business selling the negatives to anyone. The groom's mother was clearly out of line.

There is nothing you can do about it now. (P.S. One word of advice, dear. Don't taunt your husband about this. He's not responsible for his mother's deeds.)

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I were married for 30 years and raised a fine family. He was a wonderful man, and I loved him very much. After he had been gone for 10 years, I married another man.

This marriage was not a beautiful love affair, as was my first. It was a convenience for both of us. My second husband also had been married previously.

I want to be buried in my family plot when my time comes, and my present husband wants to be buried beside HIS first wife. We are agreed on that, but here's the problem: How can I be buried beside my husband with my present husband's last name — which I legally bear?

That would be dreadful.

Could I have my marker read: "Elizabeth, child of God, 1915"? Or would that be in poor taste?

PLANNING AHEAD IN CANADA

DEAR PLANNING: I think you've hit on the perfect solution.

DEAR ABBY: I have a sex problem that I have tried to handle myself, but it's not getting any better. I don't have a minister to talk to, and even if I did, I don't think I could discuss this with him.

You see, when my husband and I make love, I don't feel anything. I mean, I get aroused, but nothing happens. I'm 27 and have four children. Shouldn't I feel something?

This is my second marriage, and it was the same way with my first marriage. Does this mean I'm frigid?

I am afraid my husband will start shopping around for a replacement if I don't put a little more enthusiasm into my lovemaking. I pretend I'm getting something out of it, but I'm afraid I'm not very convincing.

Abby, please help me.

MISSING SOMETHING IN MINNEAPOLIS

DEAR MISSING: First, see your gynecologist. After a thorough examination, he will know if something physical needs correcting. If it's not physical, ask for his recommendation. Your local university has a human sexuality program that offers excellent counseling. If it's any comfort to you, your problem is far more common than you think.

DEAR ABBY: We own a dog that is always kept on a leash when he's put outside.

Our neighbor has cats that are allowed to roam freely outside and onto our property., They tease our dog, causing him to bark until we put the cats back on their own property.

We have had anonymous phone calls informing us that our dog's barking is disturbing the entire neighborhood. Abby, if those cats didn't tantlize our dog, he wouldn't bark.

What do you suggest we do? We've complained to the cat owners, but they still turn their cats loose on our property.

FUMING

DEAR FUMING: Tell the cat owners that if their cats are found on your property, you will ring up the local pound. Then follow through. One "cat-astrophe" should do it.

Trainable Handicapped Strive In Seward To Find Their Niche

By TOM COOK
Outstate Nebraska Bureau

Seward — Society is beginning to realize the special skills and achievements trainably handicapped children are capable of mastering.

And Susan Everett, head teacher in the Center for the Trainably Handicapped in Seward, thinks society will be the winner when her students find their niche in it.

"There is no reason for them to be institutionalized if they can become a functioning part of society," Mrs. Everett says.

"We try to prepare them to cook, clean and be able to live in a semi-supervised environment, so that later they may be able to be trained for a job."

The school is part of the Seward School District, and Mrs. Everett's five class members ride buses and go to the elementary school for lunch, library and physical education classes with the rest of the students.

"There are no problems. It is a good experience for all the students. They learn to accept each other and interact very well," she says.

Results Visible

The Seward center is in its second year, and Mrs. Everett says she has seen the results of keeping her students in their own community with the kids they grew up with and — more important — their families.

Special students from the Seward area used to attend Lincoln's Arnold School.

"Many parents commuted every day. It was hard on them and the kids, and one of the students stayed in a hotel during the week. He hated being away from home," Mrs. Everett says.

Fred Bieck, supervisor of Mental Retardation for the State Educational Department, says Seward's is one of more than 40 such schools opened in the state since 1974.

LB403, passed that year, required school boards to provide educational services to trainably handicapped in their district or contract with a neighboring district to provide them.

One of the goals of the legislation, according to Bieck, was to keep special students in the community and prepare them to find a place in it.

'Definite Change'

"The students get a better self-image, they are more positive and you see a definite change when they stay in their community," he said. "When you talk about the community accepting them, they have a better outlook on life."

Bieck said the number of students and teachers in special programs has increased steadily since the special education law was passed.

"We've been through one year of trial and error," he said. "I think many more school districts are more cognizant of special ed training. Before, many at best were indifferent to them."

Local Advantages

Mrs. Everett believes local school district centers have advantages over larger institutions.

"With my aide Carree Rahber, we have a 2-5 student-teacher ratio. In order for a child to obtain his potential, he must work on an individual level. Knowing him and how to phrase things to him is critical," she says.

It is also important for special ed programs to use community resources, according to Mrs. Everett, who uses student aides from Concordia Teachers College and the Lutheran school's indoor swimming pool for weekly "coordination practice and just plain fun."

Not all the Concordia students, who try working in the center make it. Some lack patience and understanding, but those that make it are special themselves, she says.

"The first reason I signed up to help was because I wanted to be an inner-city school teacher," Ed Sander, a Concordia senior, says.

"Now I'm not thinking about that. After working with our 'normal' kids, I've kind of changed my mind. These kids are great, they'll do anything just to get your love."

Tedium Worth It

Mrs. Everett admits that sometimes the repetition necessary in her class work gets tedious, but the rewards are worth it.

"One student worked on writing his name for hours and for him that's forever. But he learned it," she says. "We reward them for the smallest things, try to catch them with the good and try not to see the bad."

Deceptive Trade Trial Opens

Omaha (AP) — Douglas County Judge Samuel Cooper started taking testimony Tuesday in a case in which a business faces criminal charges for an alleged deceptive trade practice.

The defendant is Baxter Chrysler Plymouth Inc. of Omaha. The firm is charged under the criminal provision of the State Deceptive Trade Practices Act which went into effect March 28, 1974.

A spokesman for the state attorney general's office said this is the first such case he knows of in Nebraska.

The first witness was Dwight J. Moore, an Omaha attorney who lives near Fremont. Moore testified he bought a 1974 International Scout from the Baxter firm in September of 1974. He said the vehicle was represented as being in new and original condition.

Moore testified he had problems with the car, returned it to Baxter's and it was repaired, but he returned later with the same complaint.

Moore testified he took the vehicle to Flynn and Larsen, an International Harvester dealer in Fremont, in February this year. He said he then was told there had been a fire under the hood and was shown damaged electrical and air conditioning lines.

Moore said he was told by the Flynn and Larsen service manager that some of the wiring was not that originally installed by the manufacturer.

The case is being tried without a jury.

Wayne Residents Oppose Proposed Road Widening

Wayne (UPI) — The State Department of Roads wants to build a four-lane highway at the north edge of the Wayne city limits in northeast Nebraska and at least 21 residents are opposed to the project.

The department's proposal calls for Nebraska 15 to be four lanes wide for one mile starting just inside the north Wayne city limits, with another nine miles of the highway north resurfaced and improved.

During a public hearing on the project, 21 of the 47 persons attending the meeting said they were against a one-mile stretch of four-lane highway, contending the project would remove a portion of yards of residences and businesses in the area. They favored resurfacing and improvements to the highway, but requested that all 10 miles of the project remain a two-lane highway.

Mayor Freeman Decker also disagreed with Roads Department figures over the city's northern boundary line, contending the state's figures extended too far north.

The project, which was scheduled for work in 1978 or 1979, would be funded jointly by the federal, state and city governments.

M. Packwood, Retired Sterling Publisher, Dies

Sterling — Funeral services for Marion F. Packwood, 75, retired publisher, will be at 1:30 p.m. Wednesday at St. John American Lutheran Church. He died Monday at his home.

After publishing the Cook Weekly Carrier from 1929 to 1944, he was publisher of the Johnson County Courier in Sterling from 1944 to December 1971.

Surviving are his wife, Mary; son, Richard of Lincoln; sisters, Mrs. Miles (Dorothy) Gilow and Bernice Packwood, both of Long Beach, Calif., and Mrs. Nathan (Stanis) Fligstein of St. Louis, Mo.; and a grandson.

Drilling Mishap Victim Identified As Sidney Man

Harrisburg (AP) — The victim of an oil drilling accident near here Monday was identified Tuesday as Maynard L. Furrey, 28, of Sidney.

Identification had been withheld pending notification of next of kin.

Furrey suffered fatal injuries when a cable snapped on some oil drilling equipment and struck him, according to Banner County Sheriff Earl Bailey. The Sidney man was employed by the Gear Drilling Co.

Corps Projects To Be Inspected

Omaha (AP) — The assistant secretary of the Army in charge of civil works will tour Corps of Engineers facilities in Nebraska and South Dakota Wednesday and Thursday.

Victor V. Veysey of Washington will visit Missouri River Division headquarters in Omaha, then tour the relocated town of Niobrara, Neb., and visit Gavins Point Dam and other South Dakota areas.

Name Stuck

Ranger, Tex. (UPI)—A small, quiet town now, this area was once such a haven for robbers that a permanent camp of the Texas Rangers had to be established here. Long after the law officers were no longer needed the sprouting town retained the name.

Doctor From Colombia Apparently Will Not Return To Osceola

Osceola (UPI) — Dr. Carlos Nossa, the Colombia, South America, physician who practiced medicine in Osceola and encountered more than a year of immigration difficulties, apparently will not return to the United States, Dr. Clarence Davis said Tuesday.

Davis, who practiced with Nossa, bitterly criticized the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service's Omaha office during a telephone interview with UPI.

"I think the very, very tragic thing about this is that it was not handled in a different manner by the Immigration Service in Omaha at the time it all began," Davis said.

Disservice To U.S.

"The Immigration Service in Omaha did a tremendous disservice to the people of the State of Nebraska and the people of the United States. I personally don't feel my tax dollars should go into the payment of salaries of people of this type."

Despite assurancer Nossa would be granted a visa, Davis said Nossa has not filed an application for a "waiver of excludability," which, Davis said, would allow Nossa to re-enter the United States with his family.

"I have had no definite statement from Dr. Nossa that he is not going to return," Davis said, "but the last letter from him would indicate that he will not return."

Davis, who now will practice alone in this community of nearly 1,000 in eastern Nebraska, said Nossa has requested his personal belongings from Osceola shipped to Colombia and has attempted to sell his car which is in Omaha.

'A Criminal'

If Nossa were to file an application for re-entry, Davis said, Nossa apparently feels he would be returning as "a criminal."

"From a realistic standpoint," Davis said, "this would not be so, of course."

The waiver is a pardon for the alleged false statement and violation of a working visa obtained in 1973 to fill a medical post in Mississippi. Nossa was accused of violating the visa when he left Mississippi to resettle in Osceola in July of last year, facing the threat of deportation during the past year.

Nossa, his German-born wife and their two American-born children returned to South America Sept. 20 under a plan to re-enter the United States as a spouse of a German national.

Davis, who sponsored Nossa, at least two Nebraska attorneys and Sen. Carl Curtis' office intervened earlier this month following reports from Bogota that Nossa was encountering difficulty in receiving a new visa.

On Oct. 7, Curtis' office said the problems had been ironed out and Nossa only had to file an application for re-entry.

However, Davis said Tuesday there was no evidence that the Colombia government was attempting to keep him. "I think that he was probably fed up with the whole thing," Davis said. "It's a very complex, emotional reaction."

Loneliest In World

As the only physician left in Osceola, Davis said, "I'm the most lonely person in the whole world. It makes a difference in the quality and quantity of medical care and the availability of medical coverage. It makes a difference in coverage of staffing the hospital. It makes a difference in the amount of revenues brought into the town. It makes a tremendous difference."

Davis said the Immigration Service in Omaha could have handled Nossa's case differently, such as granting him a visa as "an exceptionally talented person" with a needed skill.

"What really tees me off," Davis said, "is the fact that I filed a petition for a working visa for Dr. Nossa and that petition has never been answered, and as a U.S. taxpayer and a U.S. citizen, it really tees me off no end, and no reason was given on why they didn't answer my petition."

Nossa had about half the patient load in the Osceola hospital. Davis said he is working at full capacity. Without Nossa, he said, "It means at least 20 outpatients per day will not be seen, a decrease in the hospital population of at least 10 patients per day.

"Instead of being on call every other night, now I'm on call every night," Davis said.

When asked if any further action was contemplated, Davis replied: "The die is cast."

Sale 'Disappoints' Curtis

Washington (AP) — Sen. Carl Curtis of Nebraska said Tuesday he was "very disappointed" in the grain agreement with the Soviet Union.

The senator also said he was disappointed in the actions which brought it about.

Curtis said, "This Russian agreement sets a bad precedent. It is an invitation for big land owners and other pressure groups in the country to take action to force a lowering of the price of farm products through the curtailment of exports.

"I protested the moratorium when it was put on. I think it is a mistake. I think the State Department should stay out of trade negotiations," he said.

Curtis suggested that the Office of Special Representative for Trade Negotiations, Clayton Yeutter, with the support of Agriculture Secretary Earl Butz, the Nebraska Republican said.

Curtis went on, "What the political reaction is to this agreement will depend on what the grain market does in the next 15 months. The procedures used, however, are clearly a mistake from the long-range standpoint."

Curtis Exon

Exon Joins Grain Deal Criticism

Gov. J. J. Exon agreed Tuesday with farm leaders who criticized the Soviet grain deal, but said those leaders should have expressed their concern last month when President Ford was in Omaha for a White House domestic conference.

Exon noted that Agriculture Secretary Earl Butz "said that we would be pleased with the arrangement" being made with the Soviets. "I did not buy that at that time, but unfortunately some agriculture leaders did," Exon said.

He said Farm Bureau leaders praised Butz at the Omaha conference,."

Exon said responsibility rests first with the President, then with the Secretary of Agriculture and finally with the State Department.

Exon called the Soviet American grain deal "a political sellout to those who maintain that the farmer is responsible for high food prices."

Day Care Program Draws Students' Ire

Less than a month old, Nebraska's Title 20, the Social Services Program, is drawing heat from former recipients who claim that the program is arbitrarily against college students.

The $18.2 million program, financed with more than $4.5 million state dollars, excluded college students from any day care benefits.

Now at least two college students — one in Lincoln and one in Omaha — are contemplating a challenge of the state program.

Chris Lamberson, 21, of Lincoln, said she would file suit if she can not obtain financial aid "because I am in a four-year program at the university. It means that I will have to pay for my day care entirely. I don't think it's fair; it's discriminatory."

She said they hope to get a court ruling which will preclude the state from granting other eligible parents, who are not students from social service subsidies from day care by declaring the current program discriminatory.

Likewise a 30-year-old Creighton University Law School senior, Susan Bradley of Omaha, said chances for that determination "are not very hopeful" though she is exploring possibilities.

She said she had approached the American Civil Liberties Union and legal aid in hopes of similar court litigation.

Meanwhile, the head of the University of Nebraska child care cooperative, Mary Jo Ryan, said a letter writing campaign had resulted in more than 100 letters to state senators, Gov. J. J. Exon and State Welfare Department officials. She estimated that at least 150 parents in Lincoln and Omaha are affected and guessed parents were affected at Kearney State College.

State Social Services Director Larry Nedrow said he believed chances were slim for a Title 20 revision even though revisions are allowed under federal guidelines during the nine-month program year.

"The fact remains that the hard decision that we had to make in terms of what services would be provided within the existing budget limitations would remain the same," he said.

The decision in this case was to concentrate on those who are employed and have a need for day care, he said. The state program was announced Sept. 27.

Scott To Tell Plans

Pittsburgh (UPI) — Sen. Hugh Scott, R-Pa., Senate minority leader, plans to announce Dec. 4 whether he will retire after serving 50 years in government or seek a fourth term, a source close to Scott said.

Growers Are Unhappy With Lifting Of Ban

Ogallala (AP) — The president of the Nebraska Wheat Growers Association said that group is not optimistic about the United States' agreement to sell grain to Russia.

Frank Johansen said the group is unhappy with the lifting of the U.S.-Soviet grain moratorium because it probably came too late in the marketing year for wheat producers.

He said he does not think the Soviet Union will participate in any sales, even though the ban has been lifted.

Johansen said the association thinks the initial grain ban was illegal.

He added, "When you barter oil for wheat then our government has a bigger interest in keeping the price of grain at the lowest level."

$740,000 Is Paid for Land; Dispute Noted

Papillion (AP) — A portion of land that once was involved in the Nebraska-Iowa boundary dispute brought $740,000 at auction at the Sarpy County Courthouse Monday.

The tract of about 648 acres, the farm of the late August B. Lienemann, was partitioned for sale. The partition resulted from a difference of the heirs about the value of the land.

The Lienemann family had owned the land since 1901. It was purchased by another familiar Sarpy County name, Gail Iske, who farms in the LaPlatte area.

Sarpy County levied taxes on the parcel in 1901. Neither August Lienemann nor his father paid the taxes, claiming it was Iowa land and Sarpy County had no jurisdiction.

When the county tried to sell the land at auction for taxes in 1942, the case went to court. Debate hinged on the state boundary lines and the frequent shifting of the Missouri River bed, the center of which was supposed to be the state line.

The Lienemanns won as the state court ruled that when the river changes course, the boundary does not change.

The matter was remanded to the county with instructions that a new survey be made.

Eventually, a permanent line was established at the river and the land became part of Nebraska.

Hearing Slated For November On Coal Pipeline

The Legislature's Public Works Committee has scheduled public hearings in Ogallala and Bridgeport to hear testimony on a proposed Wyoming-to-Arkansas coal slurry pipeline.

The promoters of the pipeline, Energy Transportation Systems, Inc., are asking the legislature for the power of eminent domain to cross railroad lands.

Committee Chairman Maurice Kremer of Aurora said the hearings would be held at 9 a.m. Nov. 3 in the Bridgeport High School auditorium and at 9 a.m. Nov. 4 in the courthouse in Ogallala, to hear testimony from farmers and ranchers whose land could be crossed by the project.

Genetic Counselors Seek Traveling Funds

By BOB GUENTHER
Star Staff Writer

Outstate couples next year may be able to receive genetic counseling in their own communities for the first time, thus saving them a trip to Omaha.

The State Office of Mental Retardation is seeking a $15,000 appropriation from the Legislature for fiscal 1976-77 to set up a traveling team of genetic counselors to reach people in all corners of the state.

Presently, genetic counseling is available to people willing to travel to the University of Nebraska Medical Center's Center for Human Genetics. (The Beatrice State Home also offers genetic counseling to residents and relatives of residents in the home.)

The Center for Human Genetics with its 20-member staff has been operating for the past 13 years.

Pays For Itself

In that time, Dr. James Eisen, center director, said, the facility has more than paid for itself several times in terms of prevention and treatment of genetic abnormalities and assuaging parents' guilt feelings.

With counseling only available in Omaha, residents of outlying areas, such as Valentine and Scottsbluff, find it "a major chore" and consequently don't seek help, Dr. Eisen said.

"In practice, they don't come," he said. "It's either too far, or people are afraid to ask."

In explaining the need for genetic counseling, Dr. Eisen said:

—one-third to one-half of all miscarriages are due to genetic conditions.

—One-third of all pediatric beds are occupied by children with genetic conditions.

Genetic Diseases

—one-fourth of all people hospitalized have genetic diseases.

—Four of every five cases of mental retardation are attributable to genetic problems.

Dr. Eisen said the costs of prevention and therapy of genetic diseases are one-tenth of what it costs to care for a person after it's too late to control a genetic disease.

In the case of PKU, a genetic metabolic disease which undetected causes mental retardation, it costs $1.25 to test each infant for the condition.

Since one of every 14,000 infants has the disease and dietary treatment for a PKU sufferer costs $16,000 over 10 years, the total cost of prevention is approximately $33,000 per child.

Untreated, PKU can cause mental retardation which would require $365,000 to care for the individual over a lifetime in an institution, he said.

No Charge

Dr. Eisen said the travelling team would work with community physicians and would not charge patients for the service.

The major costs, he said, would be a part-time pediatrician, a part-time social worker and traveling expenses. The only remaining question, he said, is who will pay for x-rays and lab tests.

Dr. Eisen noted that he does not advise couples whether to have children or not but does explain the options they have.

Arnold Carmel, Office of Mental Retardation chief, said, "I'm very hopeful the program will go, and its benefits will become self-evident."

Woman Fined For Stabbing Her Husband

Los Angeles (AP) — Shirley Florea was fined and put on two years probation Monday for stabbing her husband, television producer John P. Florea, in an altercation outside a courtroom where their divorce case has been heard.

Superior Court Commissioner Sam Bubrick also ordered the 48-year-old Mrs. Florea to undergo psychiatric treatment and said she could deduct the cost from her $1,500 fine.

Florea suffered a stab wound in the back but he has since recovered from the injury, authorities said.

Charges Filed Against Policeman In Accident

Omaha (AP) — A Bellevue girl injured in an accident involving an off-duty policeman was in fair condition Monday at St. Joseph Hospital.

The policeman, Mark Jensen, 25, who has served on the Bellevue force two years, has been charged with drunken driving and released on $200 bond.

Bellevue Police Chief Warren Robinson said Jensen has been indenfintely suspended during investigation of the accident, which occurred about midnight Friday.

The girl, Jo Lynn Price, 17, suffered multiple head and back injuries.

Chief Robinson said Miss Price was among a group leaving a friend's home and Jensen was northbound in his pickup truck when the accident occurred. Robinson said the Jensen truck, at a curve, smashed into the rear of one car, pushing it into another. Miss Price apparently was caught between the two cars.

Chief Robinson said Jensen, who had been off duty sick for four days, was relieved of duty shortly after the accident.

Sole Survivor Arranging Sutherland Burials

By DEAN TERRILL
Southeast Nebraska Bureau

Sutherland — "There won't be anyone to come home to this Christmas . . ."

Called back to this Lincoln County village to bury her parents and four other slain members of her family, Mrs. Audrey Kellie Brown is the last living member of what was once a close-knit family. She said the weekend tragedy is still beyond her comprehension.

"I don't think it will all soak in until the letters quit coming and we don't go home for Christmas," said the woman, who moved three weeks ago from North Platte to Broomfield, Colo. "It was all so needless."

Mrs. Brown's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Henery Kellie, were among the six relatives shot to death Saturday night at their modest home here. The returnee also had the task of helping make funeral arrangements for her 32-year-old brother, David, two nieces and a nephew.

The eldest of three Kellie offspring at age 37, Mrs. Brown also lost a sister in a traffic accident nine years ago. She was Mrs. Jennie Rowley of Cozad.

Numbed by the multiple tragedy, this quiet community of 840 was bracing itself for combined services to be held in the high school auditorium Wednesday afternoon. All pupils are being dismissed and many of the town's businesses are closing.

Officiating at the 2 p.m. funeral will be Mrs. Brown's mother-in-law, the Rev. Mrs. Verneda Brown of Wesleyan Church at Arthur. Likewise ministers in that fundamentalist faith are the younger Mrs. Brown and her husband, Melvin.

Remarkably well composed, the daughter credited her strength to the family's Christian beliefs. Her husband joined her in explaining that "we have our faith to back us . . . we have no doubts that the folks are in heaven."

The couple also said they "hold no hostility" toward the man accused of the murders, Erwin Charles Simants. They said they had met the 29-year-old suspect twice when he was doing odd jobs for the Kellies.

"He treated us with the utmost kindness," they stated. "He was real quiet and when he worked, he worked hard. We've heard that the very day of the shootings he was telling around town that Dad was the best friend he ever had."

Like most residents of Sutherland, the Browns said they "have no idea" what motivated the killings. They added that "no man in his right mind could take innocent children."

According to Sally Schuff, editor of Sutherland's Courier-Times, "most everyone is still wondering about a possible motive." She said the community's mood has changed from one of terror and shock to "an orderly helpfulness" in preparing for the funeral.

Preceding the services by exactly five hours, a 9 a.m. preliminary hearing was scheduled for Simants in Lincoln County Court. There are reports that the suspect has made a statement, but authoritites have not made it public.

It was also reported that County Attorney Milton Larson believes a motive may be established when autopsy findings on the murder victims are received. There was no further explanation.

Operation Needed

North Platte (AP) — Relatives say a man accused of slaying a family of six may have been living his own type of death sentence.

"He had a knot on the inside of his stomach that would come out as large as your fist," said Mary Olson, ex-wife of accused slayer Erwin Charles Simants.

Mrs. Olson said her sister, "who was very close to" Simants, told her a doctor advised Simants that he would not live past age 30 without surgery. Mrs. Olson said other friends of her ex-husband told her the same thing.

Simants, 29, was "afraid of doctors" and did not have the operation, she said.

Mrs. Olson described her ex-husband, charged with six counts of first-degree murder, as "very sweet and gentle. I just don't believe that he did it. He valued life too highly."

Mrs. Olson, divorced from Simants "about four years ago," said she had brought cigarettes to the jail for him.

Murder Hearing Coverage Argued

By DEAN TERRILL
Southeast Nebraska Bureau

North Platte — In a highly unusual night session of Lincoln County Court, both prosecution and defense attorneys requested the limiting of press coverage on Wednesday's scheduled preliminary hearing for accused slayer Erwin Charles Simants.

While County Attorney Milton Larson entered a formal motion for "restrictive coverage" the two public defenders representing Simants went further. They asked that the proceeding be "completely closed" to both the press and public and that witnesses be sequestered from hearing one another's testimony.

Judge Ronald A. Ruff immediately approved the sequestoring, a not uncommon request, but deferred until Wednesday a decision on the other motions. The preliminary hearing is scheduled for 9 a.m.

Notified Tuesday afternoon that the judge had set a meeting to discuss coverage of the hearing, approximately a dozen media representatives responded. But instead of a meeting, court was formally convened and arguments presented on the motion.

Defendant Simants, handcuffed to County Sheriff Gordon Gilster, was also present along with several attorneys. He took no part in the proceedings except to listen, calmly staring downward most of the time.

Besides the two sides which quoted liberally from publications from legal ethics and law precedent, an attorney representing the media also presented testimony. Harold Kay of North Platte argued that Nebraska law stipulates that all judicial procedures must be open."

Both Larson and Leonard Vyhnalek, assistant public defender, contended that if all evidence from the preliminary hearing was reported, the defendant's right of a free trial would be jeopardized. But Larson urged admitting the press but imposing restrictions on some of the evidence.

"Permitting the press to be in court may forestall any additional rumors that are not true," said Larson.

Vyhnalek said that while the Nebraska constitution requires public jury trials, "I do not feel that the state of Nebraska militates that a hearing be made public." He added that because of publicity given the case, "some damage has been done already."

Kay argued that "the people are entitled to freedom of the press" and said he anticipates a change of venue regardless. He suggested that if newsmen were admitted they still would not give coverage "word for word."

Referring specifically to rumors that Simants has given a statement, Kay said the press could be instructed to refer to its contents generally. He added that he is "sure that the news media will take no action which would prejudice the defendant."

"As far as I know, there never has been in Nebraska a procedure applying the 'gag rule,'" Kay stated.

The attorney said he was representing the North Platte Telegraph, Lincoln Journal and Star, Omaha World-Herald, North Platte radio station KODY and the Media of Nebraska.

In announcing his overnight deferment of a decision, Judge Ruff said he would have to consider "some real serious constitutional issues."

Arbor Lodge Visitors Set Record

Nebraska City — During the past two weekends, visitors to the mansion at Arbor Lodge State Historical Park here have totaled more than 3,700. An all-time record was set Oct. 12 when 1,678 persons toured the mansion. Fall scenery plus the area's apple harvest annually draw many spectators to Arbor Lodge at this time of the year. The lodge will be closing for the season Oct. 26.

Brott Resigning Gage County Post

Beatrice (AP) Steve Brott, Gage County attorney, has told the County Board he is resigning effective Dec. 15 to devote full time to private practice. He said he plans to join a law firm in Falls City. Brott was appointed county attorney in November of 1973 to fill the unexpired term of Ron Sutter, who resigned. Brott was elected to the office last November. He served as Hitchcock County attorney from 1970 to 1973.

Lutherans Approve Life Center

Kearney (AP) — Members of the Zion Lutheran Church in Kearney have approved a $467,500 project to build a Christian Life Center. The center will include a classroom-gymatorium addition to the church's present day school. The present school will be remodeled into offices and a chapel. The project is scheduled for completion by next fall.

Central Tech OKs New Programs

Grand Island (UPI) — The Central Technical Community College area board approved three new programs and the drafting of a letter to state legislators over budget cuts proposed by Gov. J. James Exon. The three new programs, which will be implemented on the Hastings and Columbus campuses, include lithographic technology, dental hygiene and electronics technology.

People May Petition City For Parking Prohibitions

By LYNN ZERSCHLING
Star Staff Writer

Residents living south of the University of Nebraska-Lincoln's east campus had problems with students parking all day in front of their homes. So, they did something about it.

People living near the football stadium couldn't get out of their driveways on football Saturdays. So, they did something about it.

Homeowners living around Lincoln's three major hospitals found their streets clogged with hospital visitors on weekday afternoons. So, they did something about it.

What they did was petition the city to ban parking on their side of the street during certain hours on specific days.

STAR PHOTO
PARKING . . . banned all day long.

Must Be Reasonable

Althought the requests to prohibit parking in certain areas may have little to do with maintaining unrestricted traffic flow on those residential streets, City Traffic Engineer Bob Holsinger said his office will consider requests to ban parking "if it's reasonable."

Holsinger has the legal authority to ban parking on city streets. However, in order for parking to be prohibited on one side of a street, Holsinger requires a majority of property owners living on the side of the street involved to sign a petition stating they favor the parking ban.

The city instituted a policy requiring homeowners' signatures because Holsinger doesn't want to end up being an arbitrator "between those who want the ban and those who don't."

If Hazard Exists

City Hall will also prohibit parking on residential streets when notified by the police department, fire department, ambulance firms or bus company. Parking will be prohibited if vehicles are "constituting a hazard for emergency vehicles," Holsinger reported.

The city prohibits parking on one side of C St. from 9th to 17th, for example, because emergency vehicles have trouble traveling on the narrow, 20-foot wide road.

Although city officials stated that parking restrictions are not widespread, parking bans are enforced around Lincoln high schools, the university, hospitals, commercial areas and some churches.

In the neighborhoods surrounding the UNL east campus, residents were successful in restricting parking from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. on others.

STAR PHOTO
NO PARKING . . . just in morning.

Residents believed adequate parking is provided for students on campus, Holsinger said, but many students don't want to pay a permit fee and were parking in the neighborhoods instead.

Around Lincoln's high schools parking has been restricted from 8 a.m. until 4 p.m., while parking has been banned from 2 p.m. to 4 p.m. around hospitals. Parking is a sin on Sunday mornings around some churches.

Residents living in the area from 9th to 10th and Charleston requested that parking be banned on Saturdays. The football crowds made driving almost impossible for homeowners in that area.

While some property owners may not think too much of the parking bans requested by a majority of their neighbors, Holsinger said property owners' requests to prohibit parking doesn't afford the residents any special privileges either.

"This is not a customized parking area. Nobody can park on the streets."

Some Rejected

Although about 99% of the requests for parking restrictions is granted, Holsinger said requests have been turned down.

"If the need for parking in an area outweighs the need to take it off, we deny the request," he said.

The city also rejects requests if parking restriction wanted by the residents are unenforceable.

"We won't take it (parking) off for 15 minutes," he said.

If, however, a petition signed by a majority of residents making what city officials consider a reasonable request is submitted, it usually takes two to three weeks for "no parking" signs to be posted on the street.

From then on, motorists have to find someplace else to park their cars, or risk being ticketed by police officers.

Brief Says No One Ever Hurt By Generating Plant Radiation

By BOB GUENTHER
Star Staff Writer

After all the smoke in the nuclear power debate has cleared, the fact remains that not a single person has ever been harmed by radiation from any of the 54 nuclear power plants in the U.S., the State Power Review Board has been told.

In a brief, Del Dirrim, attorney for the Omaha Public Power District (OPPD), warned that unless Ft. Calhoun No. 2 nuclear plant is built, Nebraskans will face a critical power shortage and "greatly increased" electricity rates in the 1980s.

Referring to a group trying to block the plant, Dirrim said, "The hysterical and unfounded outcry of the extremely small and loose-knit group called Nebraska Public Power Project . . . proposes no feasible alternative to (the nuclear plant)."

OPPD's opponents claimed that, though "unpleasant," the public welfare demands the second nuclear plant be blocked for economic and safety reasons.

Dirrim said, "It would be even more 'unpleasant' to cause the ratepayers of Nebraska to face critical electrical shortages in the mid-1980s and beyond; to greatly curtail or prohibit industrial development in Nebraska; and to impose upon a great number of Nebraskans the greatly increased electrical rates which would result from any alternative to this application."

The Power Review Board is expected to act later this week on OPPD's application to construct the 1,150-megawatt plant which has an $810 million price tag. The City of Lincoln had an opportunity to share in the construction of the plant; however, the City Council rejected the offer.

Dirrim noted that Ft. Calhoun No. 2 has "received the most intense and critical examination by (the board) of any matter ever presented . . ."

He added, "By the time the benefits of this proposed generation unit are being enjoyed by a large number of Nebraskans, the membership of the Power Review Board will be drastically altered or completely changed, and the majority of the membership of the Nebraska Public Power Project, currently led by Mr. (Rich) Lombardi and . . . Sen. (Steve) Fowler, will hopefully be centered on more responsible endeavors than (this)."

"When all is said and done on the subject of nuclear plant safety, one irrefutable fact remains: That with at least 54 nuclear generation plants in commercial operation in the U.S. today, not one human being has ever been harmed by radiation from any of these plants," Dirrim said.

Fuel Contract Inked

Los Angeles (AP) — Southern California Edison Co. has signed a 10-year contract reportedly in excess of $1 billion with Pertamina, the national oil company of Indonesia, to buy "substantial volumes" of low sulfur fuel, an Edison spokesman said.

EPA Okays Scottsbluff Sewage Plan

Scottsbluff (AP) — It's go for Scottsbluff's proposed new sewage system as far as the Environmental Protection Agency is concerned.

City Manager Frank Koehler and Mayor Donald Overman met with EPA officials from Washington and the Nebraska region and learned that plans are satisfactory.

They said the environmental officials have reacted quite favorably to Scottsbluff's proposed new system, which involves using the sewage to irrigate cropland.

Koehler said, "The environmental officials were quite interested in the possibility that the proposed irrigation system is even more cost-effective than appears in the engineering reports."

Region 7 EPA engineering division head Paul Walker of Kansas City told the city officials, "This is an exemplary project which meets the goals and the guidelines" of EPA legislation.

City officials indicated that if no major hitches develop, the project could be completed in slightly more than two years.

Immanuel Plans Facilities For Aged, Alcoholic

Omaha (AP) — Construction may start early next spring on two facilities on the Immanuel Medical Center's campus in northwest Omaha.

Riley Green Jr., Immanuel's chief executive officer, said plans for a 196-bed home for the elderly and a 30-bed alcoholic treatment center have been or soon will be reviewed by local and state health planning agencies.

He said loans probably will provide the primary financing for the projects, which would go out for construction bids late this year and be completed in 1977.

Officials said it is hoped that gifts also will help pay for the previously announced home for the aged, planned jointly by Immanuel and the Fontenelle Boulevard Home.

Cost of the home is estimated at about $6 million. The building would have a capacity nearly the same as that of the separate homes now operated by jimmanuel and Fontenelle.

The alcoholic treatment center would cost about $755,000.

Trainable Handicapped Strive In Seward To Find Their Niche

By TOM COOK
Outstate Nebraska Bureau

Seward — Society is beginning to realize the special skills and achievements trainably handicapped children are capable of mastering.

And Susan Everett, head teacher in the Center for the Trainably Handicapped in Seward, thinks society will be the winner when her students find their niche in it.

"There is no reason for them to be institutionalized if they can become a functioning part of society," Mrs. Everett says.

"We try to prepare them to cook, clean and be able to live in a semi-supervised environment, so that later they may be able to be trained for a job."

The school is part of the Seward School District, and Mrs. Everett's five class members ride buses and go to the elementary school for lunch, library and physical education classes with the rest of the students.

"There are no problems. It is a good experience for all the students. They learn to accept each other and interact very well," she says.

Results Visible

The Seward center is in its second year, and Mrs. Everett says she has seen the results of keeping her students in their own community with the kids they grew up with and — more important — their families.

Special students from the Seward area used to attend Lincoln's Arnold School.

"Many parents commuted every day. It was hard on them and the kids, and one of the students stayed in a hotel during the week. He hated being away from home," Mrs. Everett says.

Fred Bieck, supervisor of Mental Retardation for the State Educational Department, says Seward's is one of more than 40 such schools opened in the state since 1974.

LB403, passed that year, required school boards to provide educational services to trainably handicapped in their district or contract with a neighboring district to provide them.

One of the goals of the legislation, according to Bieck, was to keep special students in the community and prepare them to find a place in it.

'Definite Change'

"The students get a better self-image, they are more positive and you see a definite change when they stay in their community," he said. "When you talk about the community accepting them, they have a better outlook on life."

Bieck said the number of students and teachers in special programs has increased steadily since the special education law was passed.

"We've been through one year of trial and error," he said. "I think many more school districts are more cognizant of special ed training. Before, many at best were indifferent to them."

Local Advantages

Mrs. Everett believes local school district centers have advantages over larger institutions.

"With my aide Carree Rahber, we have a 2-5 student-teacher ratio. In order for a child to obtain his potential, he must work on an individual level. Knowing him and how to phrase things to him is critical," she says.

It is also important for special ed programs to use community resources, according to Mrs. Everett, who uses student aides from Concordia Teachers College and the Lutheran school's indoor swimming pool for weekly "coordination practice and just plain fun."

Not all the Concordia students, who try working in the center make it. Some lack patience and understanding, but those that make it are special themselves, she says.

"The first reason I signed up to help was because I wanted to be an inner-city school teacher," Ed Sander, a Concordia senior, says.

"Now I'm not thinking about that. After working with our 'normal' kids, I've kind of changed my mind. These kids are great, they'll do anything just to get your love."

Tedium Worth It

Mrs. Everett admits that sometimes the repetition necessary in her class work gets tedious, but the rewards are worth it.

"One student worked on writing his name for hours and for him that's forever. But he learned it," she says. "We reward them for the smallest things, try to catch them with the good and try not to see the bad."

Deceptive Trade Trial Opens

Omaha (AP) — Douglas County Judge Samuel Cooper started taking testimony Tuesday in a case in which a business faces criminal charges for an alleged deceptive trade practice.

The defendant is Baxter Chrysler Plymouth Inc. of Omaha. The firm is charged under the criminal provision of the State Deceptive Trade Practices Act which went into effect March 28, 1974.

A spokesman for the state attorney general's office said this is the first such case he knows of in Nebraska.

The first witness was Dwight J. Moore, an Omaha attorney who lives near Fremont. Moore testified he bought a 1974 International Scout from the Baxter firm in September of 1974. He said the vehicle was represented as being in new and original condition

Moore testified he had problems with the car, returned it to Baxter's and it was repaired, but he returned later with the same complaint.

Moore testified he took the vehicle to Flynn and Larsen, an International Harvester dealer in Fremont, in February this year. He said he then was told there had been a fire under the hood and was shown damaged electrical and air conditioning lines

Moore said he was told by the Flynn and Larsen service manager that some of the wiring was not that originally installed by the manufacturer.

The case is being tried without a jury.

Wayne Residents Oppose Proposed Road Widening

Wayne (UPI) — The State Department of Roads wants to build a four-lane highway at the north edge of the Wayne city limits in northeast Nebraska and at least 21 residents are opposed to the project.

The department's proposal calls for Nebraska 15 to be four lanes wide for one mile starting just inside the north Wayne city limits, with another nine miles of the highway north resurfaced and improved.

During a public hearing on the project, 21 of the 47 persons attending the meeting said they were against a one-mile stretch of four-lane highway, contending the project would remove a portion of yards of residences and businesses in the area. They favored resurfacing and improvements to the highway, but requested that all 10 miles of the project remain a two-lane highway.

Mayor Freeman Decker also disagreed with Roads Department figures over the city's northern boundary line, contending the state's figures extended too far north.

The project, which was scheduled for work in 1978 or 1979, would be funded jointly by the federal, state and city governments.

M. Packwood, Retired Sterling Publisher, Dies

Sterling — Funeral services for Marion F. Packwood, 75, retired publisher, will be at 1:30 p.m. Wednesday at St. John American Lutheran Church. He died Monday at his home.

After publishing the Cook Weekly Carrier from 1929 to 1944, he was publisher of the Johnson County Courier in Sterling from 1944 to December 1971.

Surviving are his wife, Mary; son, Richard of Lincoln; sisters, Mrs. Miles (Dorothy) Gilow and Bernice Packwood, both of Long Beach, Calif., and Mrs. Nathan (Stanis) Fligstein of St. Louis, Mo.; and a grandson.

Drilling Mishap Victim Identified As Sidney Man

Harrisburg (AP) — The victim of an oil drilling accident near here Monday was identified Tuesday as Maynard L. Furrey, 28, of Sidney.

Identification had been withheld pending notification of next of kin.

Furrey suffered fatal injuries when a cable snapped on some oil drilling equipment and struck him, according to Banner County Sheriff Earl Bailey. The Sidney man was employed by the Gear Drilling Co.

Corps Projects To Be Inspected

Omaha (AP) — The assistant secretary of the Army in charge of civil works will tour Corps of Engineers facilities in Nebraska and South Dakota Wednesday and Thursday.

Victor V. Veysey of Washington will visit Missouri River Division headquarters in Omaha, then tour the relocated town of Niobrara, Neb., and visit Gavins Point Dam and other South Dakota areas.

Name Stuck

Ranger, Tex. (UPI)—A small, quiet town now, this area was once such a haven for robbers that a permanent camp of the Texas Rangers had to be established here. Long after the law officers were no longer needed the sprouting town retained the name.

Sale 'Disappoints' Curtis

Washington (AP) — Sen. Carl Curtis of Nebraska said Tuesday he was "very disappointed" in the grain agreement with the Soviet Union.

The senator also said he was disappointed in the actions which brought it about.

Curtis said, "This Russian agreement sets a bad precedent. It is an invitation for big land owners and other pressure groups in the country to take action to force a lowering of the price of farm products through the curtailment of exports.

"I protested the moratorium when it was put on. I think it is a mistake. I think the State Department should stay out of trade negotiations," he said.

Curtis suggested that the Office of Special Representative for Trade Negotiations, Clayton Yeutter, with the support of Agriculture Secretary Earl Butz, the Nebraska Republican said.

Curtis went on, "What the political reaction is to this agreement will depend on what the grain market does in the next 15 months. The procedures used, however, are clearly a mistake from the long-range standpoint."

Exon Joins Grain Deal Criticism

Gov. J. J. Exon agreed Tuesday with farm leaders who criticized the Soviet grain deal, but said those leaders should have expressed their concern last month when President Ford was in Omaha for a White House domestic conference.

Exon noted that Agriculture Secretary Earl Butz "said that we would be pleased with the arrangement" being made with the Soviets. "I did not buy that at that time, but unfortunately some agriculture leaders did," Exon said.

He said Farm Bureau leaders praised Butz at the Omaha conference,."

Exon said responsibility rests first with the President, then with the Secretary of Agriculture and finally with the State Department.

Exon called the Soviet American grain deal "a political sellout to those who maintain that the farmer is responsible for high food prices."

Day Care Program Draws Students' Ire

Less than a month old, Nebraska's Title 20, the Social Services Program, is drawing heat from former recipients who claim that the program is arbitrarily against college students.

The $18.2 million program, financed with more than $4.5 million state dollars, excluded college students from any day care benefits.

Now at least two college students — one in Lincoln and one in Omaha — are contemplating a challenge of the state program.

Chris Lamberson, 21, of Lincoln, said she would file suit if she can not obtain financial aid "because I am in a four-year program at the university. It means that I will have to pay for my day care entirely. I don't think it's fair; it's discriminatory."

She said they hope to get a court ruling which will preclude the state from granting other eligible parents, who are not students from social service subsidies from day care by declaring the current program discriminatory.

Likewise a 30-year-old Creighton University Law School senior, Susan Bradley of Omaha, said chances for that determination "are not very hopeful" though she is exploring possibilities.

She said she had approached the American Civil Liberties Union and legal aid in hopes of similar court litigation.

Meanwhile, the head of the University of Nebraska child care cooperative, Mary Jo Ryan, said a letter writing campaign had resulted in more than 100 letters to state senators, Gov. J. J. Exon and State Welfare Department officials. She estimated that at least 150 parents in Lincoln and Omaha are affected and guessed parents were affected at Kearney State College.

State Social Services Director Larry Nedrow said he believed chances were slim for a Title 20 revision even though revisions are allowed under federal guidelines during the nine-month program year.

"The fact remains that the hard decision that we had to make in terms of what services would be provided within the existing budget limitations would remain the same," he said.

The decision in this case was to concentrate on those who are employed and have a need for day care, he said. The state program was announced Sept. 27.

Scott To Tell Plans

Pittsburgh (UPI) — Sen. Hugh Scott, R-Pa., Senate minority leader, plans to announce Dec. 4 whether he will retire after serving 50 years in government or seek a fourth term, a source close to Scott said.

Growers Are Unhappy With Lifting Of Ban

Ogallala (AP) — The president of the Nebraska Wheat Growers Association said that group is not optimistic about the United States' agreement to sell grain to Russia.

Frank Johansen said the group is unhappy with the lifting of the U.S.-Soviet grain moratorium because it probably came too late in the marketing year for wheat producers.

He said he does not think the Soviet Union will participate in any sales, even though the ban has been lifted.

Johansen said the association thinks the initial grain ban was illegal.

He added, "When you barter oil for wheat then our government has a bigger interest in keeping the price of grain at the lowest level."

$740,000 Is Paid for Land; Dispute Noted

Papillion (AP) — A portion of land that once was involved in the Nebraska-Iowa boundary dispute brought $740,000 at auction at the Sarpy County Courthouse Monday.

The tract of about 648 acres, the farm of the late August B. Lienemann, was partitioned for sale. The partition resulted from a difference of the heirs about the value of the land.

The Lienemann family had owned the land since 1901. It was purchased by another familiar Sarpy County name, Gail Iske, who farms in the LaPlatte area.

Sarpy County levied taxes on the parcel in 1901. Neither August Lienemann nor his father paid the taxes, claiming it was Iowa land and Sarpy County had no jurisdiction.

When the county tried to sell the land at auction for taxes in 1942, the case went to court. Debate hinged on the state boundary lines and the frequent shifting of the Missouri River bed, the center of which was supposed to be the state line.

The Lienemanns won as the state court ruled that when the river changes course, the boundary does not change.

The matter was remanded to the county with instructions that a new survey be made.

Eventually, a permanent line was established at the river and the land became part of Nebraska.

Hearing Slated For November On Coal Pipeline

The Legislature's Public Works Committee has scheduled public hearings in Ogallala and Bridgeport to hear testimony on a proposed Wyoming-to-Arkansas coal slurry pipeline.

The promoters of the pipeline, Energy Transportation Systems, Inc., are asking the legislature for the power of eminent domain to cross railroad lands.

Committee Chairman Maurice Kremer of Aurora said the hearings would be held at 9 a.m. Nov. 3 in the Bridgeport High School auditorium and at 9 a.m. Nov. 4 in the courthouse in Ogallala, to hear testimony from farmers and ranchers whose land could be crossed by the project.

Sole Survivor Arranging Sutherland Burials

By DEAN TERRILL
Southeast Nebraska Bureau

Sutherland — "There won't be anyone to come home to this Christmas . . ."

Called back to this Lincoln County village to bury her parents and four other slain members of her family, Mrs. Audrey Kellie Brown is the last living member of what was once a close-knit family. She said the weekend tragedy is still beyond her comprehension.

"I don't think it will all soak in until the letters quit coming and we don't go home for Christmas," said the woman, who moved three weeks ago from North Platte to Broomfield, Colo. "It was all so needless."

Mrs. Brown's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Henery Kellie, were among the six relatives shot to death Saturday night at their modest home here. The returnee also had the task of helping make funeral arrangements for her 32-year-old brother, David, two nieces and a nephew.

The eldest of three Kellie offspring at age 37, Mrs. Brown also lost a sister in a traffic accident nine years ago. She was Mrs. Jennie Rowley of Cozad.

Numbed by the multiple tragedy, this quiet community of 840 was bracing itself for combined services to be held in the high school auditorium Wednesday afternoon. All pupils are being dismissed and many of the town's businesses are closing.

Officiating at the 2 p.m. funeral will be Mrs. Brown's mother-in-law, the Rev. Mrs. Verneda Brown of Wesleyan Church at Arthur. Likewise ministers in that fundamentalist faith are the younger Mrs. Brown and her husband, Melvin.

Remarkably well composed, the daughter credited her strength to the family's Christian beliefs. Her husband joined her in explaining that "we have our faith to back us . . . we have no doubts that the folks are in heaven."

The couple also said they "hold no hostility" toward the man accused of the murders, Erwin Charles Simants. They said they had met the 29-year-old suspect twice when he was doing odd jobs for the Kellies.

"He treated us with the utmost kindness," they stated. "He was real quiet and when he worked, he worked hard. We've heard that the very day of the shootings he was telling around town that Dad was the best friend he ever had."

Like most residents of Sutherland, the Browns said they "have no idea" what motivated the killings. They added that "no man in his right mind could take innocent children."

According to Sally Schuff, editor of Sutherland's Courier-Times, "most everyone is still wondering about a possible motive." She said the community's mood has changed from one of terror and shock to "an orderly helpfulness" in preparing for the funeral.

Preceding the services by exactly five hours, a 9 a.m. preliminary hearing was scheduled for Simants in Lincoln County Court. There are reports that the suspect has made a statement, but authoritites have not made it public.

It was also reported that County Attorney Milton Larson believes a motive may be established when autopsy findings on the murder victims are received. There was no further explanation.

Operation Needed

North Platte (AP) — Relatives say a man accused of slaying a family of six may have been living his own type of death sentence.

"He had a knot on the inside of his stomach that would come out as large as your fist," said Mary Olson, ex-wife of accused slayer Erwin Charles Simants.

Mrs. Olson said her sister, "who was very close to" Simants, told her a doctor advised Simants that he would not live past age 30 without surgery. Mrs. Olson said other friends of her ex-husband told her the same thing.

Simants, 29, was "afraid of doctors" and did not have the operation, she said.

Mrs. Olson described her ex-husband, charged with six counts of first-degree murder, as "very sweet and gentle. I just don't believe that he did it. He valued life too highly."

Mrs. Olson, divorced from Simants "about four years ago," said she had brought cigarettes to the jail for him.

Murder Hearing Coverage Argued

By DEAN TERRILL
Southeast Nebraska Bureau

North Platte — In a highly unusual night session of Lincoln County Court, both prosecution and defense attorneys requested the limiting of press coverage on Wednesday's scheduled preliminary hearing for accused slayer Erwin Charles Simants.

While County Attorney Milton Larson entered a formal motion for "restrictive coverage" the two public defenders representing Simants went further. They asked that the proceeding be "completely closed" to both the press and public and that witnesses be sequestered from hearing one another's testimony.

Judge Ronald A. Ruff immediately approved the sequestoring, a not uncommon request, but deferred until Wednesday a decision on the other motions. The preliminary hearing is scheduled for 9 a.m.

Notified Tuesday afternoon that the judge had set a meeting to discuss coverage of the hearing, approximately a dozen media representatives responded. But instead of a meeting, court was formally convened and arguments presented on the motion.

Defendant Simants, handcuffed to County Sheriff Gordon Gilster, was also present along with several attorneys. He took no part in the proceedings except to listen, calmly staring downward most of the time.

Besides the two sides which quoted liberally from publications from legal ethics and law precedent, an attorney representing the media also presented testimony. Harold Kay of North Platte argued that Nebraska law stipulates that all judicial procedures must be open."

Both Larson and Leonard Vyhnalek, assistant public defender, contended that if all evidence from the preliminary hearing was reported, the defendant's right of a free trial would be jeopardized. But Larson urged admitting the press but imposing restrictions on some of the evidence.

"Permitting the press to be in court may forestall any additional rumors that are not true," said Larson.

Vyhnalek said that while the Nebraska constitution requires public jury trials, "I do not feel that the state of Nebraska militates that a hearing be made public." He added that because of publicity given the case, "some damage has been done already."

Kay argued that "the people are entitled to freedom of the press" and said he anticipates a change of venue regardless. He suggested that if newsmen were admitted they still would not give coverage "word for word."

Referring specifically to rumors that Simants has given a statement, Kay said the press could be instructed to refer to its contents generally. He added that he is "sure that the news media will take no action which would prejudice the defendant."

"As far as I know, there never has been in Nebraska a procedure applying the 'gag rule,'" Kay stated.

The attorney said he was representing the North Platte Telegraph, Lincoln Journal and Star, Omaha World-Herald, North Platte radio station KODY and the Media of Nebraska.

In announcing his overnight deferment of a decision, Judge Ruff said he would have to consider "some real serious constitutional issues."

Arbor Lodge Visitors Set Record

Nebraska City — During the past two weekends, visitors to the mansion at Arbor Lodge State Historical Park here have totaled more than 3,700. An all-time record was set Oct. 12 when 1,678 persons toured the mansion. Fall scenery plus the area's apple harvest annually draw many spectators to Arbor Lodge at this time of the year. The lodge will be closing for the season Oct. 26.

Brott Resigning Gage County Post

Beatrice (AP) Steve Brott, Gage County attorney, has told the County Board he is resigning effective Dec. 15 to devote full time to private practice. He said he plans to join a law firm in Falls City. Brott was appointed county attorney in November of 1973 to fill the unexpired term of Ron Sutter, who resigned. Brott was elected to the office last November. He served as Hitchcock County attorney from 1970 to 1973.

Lutherans Approve Life Center

Kearney (AP) — Members of the Zion Lutheran Church in Kearney have approved a $467,500 project to build a Christian Life Center. The center will include a classroom-gymatorium addition to the church's present day school. The present school will be remodeled into offices and a chapel. The project is scheduled for completion by next fall.

Central Tech OKs New Programs

Grand Island (UPI) — The Central Technical Community College area board approved three new programs and the drafting of a letter to state legislators over budget cuts proposed by Gov. J. James Exon. The three new programs, which will be implemented on the Hastings and Columbus campuses, include lithographic technology, dental hygiene and electronics technology.

Board Defers Action On LOMR Contract

The Lancaster County Board deferred action Tuesday on a proposed contract between the Lancaster Office of Mental Retardation (LOMR) and York County to provide services to mentally retarded students.

Commissioner Bob Colin questioned the contract since LOMR is cutting down the number of its employes and, therefore, cutting back on services in Lancaster County.

Commissioner Jan Gauger said that since York County has no programs for mentally retarded students, those students would receive training in Lancaster County. Lancaster county would be reimbursed, she said, adding, "We have an obligation to handle them."

The commissioners said they wanted more information on the LOMR contract which will be with School Dist. 12 in York County.

In other business the board authorized the creation of an escrow account to be opened in the county treasurer's office for the county engineer's office.

The special account would hold the county's portion of money which will be used to match federal funds for county road projects.

Mrs. Gauger said the new account would allow Lancaster County to earn interest on local funds instead of the state, where the county money has been held to date.

The board also:

— Cancelled a payment of $40.59 to Latsch Bros. since a duplicate payment had been made.

— Waived 90-day waiting period for health insurance for Jodi Richter, a clerk typist in County Clerk's office.

— Deferred one week appointment of Chris Layne to Commission on Aging, since the City Council rejected that appointment Monday.

— Approved participation in county retirement plan by Lavern Mick, in county engineer's office.

— Approved recommendation of Personnel Policy Board concerning increase in classification of Clerk Steno I from Grade 4 to Grade 5.

— Approved Outstanding Performance Award of Henry Ahlers, food service worker at Lancaster Manor.

Judges Get Courtroom, At Last

After almost two years of debate, Lincoln's Municipal Court judges will be getting their fourth courtroom.

On Tuesday the County-City Building Commission approved plans to remodel the building's second floor. The city Personnel Department will be turned into the courtroom.

In turn, the Personnel Department and the Violations Bureau on second floor will be moved down to the first floor when the remodeling begins.

No time table has yet been set for those office shifts and beginning of the remodeling work.

ADC Mothers To Get Food Stamps In Mail

According to new federal regulations, mothers receiving aid to depdendent children (ADC), can have food stamps mailed to them after Jan. 1, 1976.

Don Williamson, assistant director of the Lancaster County Public Welfare Department, said the amount charged for the food stamps would be deducted from the ADC checks.

Williamson said welfare officials are planning to take measures by which they can determine whether a recipient received the stamps in the mail.

Williamson said such a measure was necessary because putting food stamps in the mail was "just like putting $20 bills in the mail."

He said to send the stamps by certified mail (in which the signature of the addressee is required) will cost about 65 to 75 cents extra.

Williamson noted the new procedure will only be optional. He indicated many recipients may elect not to use it.

"Many of our ADC mothers work and are not at home when the mailman comes," he said. The new procedure also locks the recipients into spending a certain amount of money for the stamps even if for one reason or another a recipient would need less food.

Welfare Dept. May Ease Standards On Child Care

The Nebraska Department of Public Welfare is considering relaxing standards for child day care centers with the intent of reducing costs incurred by day care centers.

Areas being considered, according to Welfare Director Al Ihms, are the ratio of staff to children, minimum qualifications for staff and nutrition standards.

Ihms said the review of the standards will require several months' study, culminating in a public hearing early next year on any changes proposed.

Ihms said the review is being done in response to concerns that increased operating costs are working a hardship on families with children in day care programs.

A special committee will review the standards; it will consist of representatives of private and public day care centers and the public. Ihms said the committee will be named within two weeks.

Current standards require one staff member for every five children under age 3; one adult for every seven children between ages 3 and 6; and one adult for every 12 from ages 6 through 13.

Nutrition standards require one hot meal equivalent to one-third or one-half of the child's minimum daily nutritional needs and mid-morning and mid-afternoon snacks.

Ihms said there has been some problems interpreting those standards in individual cases.

Day care centers are licensed by the Welfare Department.

People May Petition City For Parking Prohibitions

By LYNN ZERSCHLING
Star Staff Writer

Residents living south of the University of Nebraska-Lincoln's east campus had problems with students parking all day in front of their homes. So, they did something about it.

People living near the football stadium couldn't get out of their driveways on football Saturdays. So, they did something about it.

Homeowners living around Lincoln's three major hospitals found their streets clogged with hospital visitors on weekday afternoons. So, they did something about it.

What they did was petition the city to ban parking on their side of the street during certain hours on specific days.

STAR PHOTO

PARKING . . . banned all day long.

Must Be Reasonable

Althought the requests to prohibit parking in certain areas may have little to do with maintaining unrestricted traffic flow on those residential streets, City Traffic Engineer Bob Holsinger said his office will consider requests to ban parking "if it's reasonable."

Holsinger has the legal authority to ban parking on city streets. However, in order for parking to be prohibited on one side of a street, Holsinger requires a majority of property owners living on the side of the street involved to sign a petition stating they favor the parking ban.

The city instituted a policy requiring homeowners' signatures because Holsinger doesn't want to end up being an arbitrator "between those who want the ban and those who don't."

If Hazard Exists

City Hall will also prohibit parking on residential streets when notified by the police department, fire department, ambulance firms or bus company. Parking will be prohibited if vehicles are "constituting a hazard for emergency vehicles," Holsinger reported.

The city prohibits parking on one side of C St. from 9th to 17th, for example, because emergency vehicles have trouble traveling on the narrow, 20-foot wide road.

Although city officials stated that parking restrictions are not widespread, parking bans are enforced around Lincoln high schools, the university, hospitals, commercial areas and some churches.

In the neighborhoods surrounding the UNL east campus, residents were successful in restricting parking from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. on others.

Residents believed adequate parking is provided for students on campus, Holsinger said, but many students don't want to pay a permit fee and were parking in the neighborhoods instead.

Around Lincoln's high schools parking has been restricted from 8 a.m. until 4 p.m., while parking has been banned from 2 p.m. to 4 p.m. around hospitals. Parking is a sin on Sunday mornings around some churches.

Residents living in the area from 9th to 10th and Charleston requested that parking be banned on Saturdays. The football crowds made driving almost impossible for homeowners in that area.

While some property owners may not think too much of the parking bans requested by a majority of their neighbors, Holsinger said property owners' requests to prohibit parking doesn't afford the residents any special privileges either.

"This is not a customized parking area. Nobody can park on the streets."

Some Rejected

Although about 99% of the requests for parking restrictions is granted, Holsinger said requests have been turned down.

"If the need for parking in an area outweighs the need to take it off, we deny the request," he said.

The city also rejects requests if parking restriction wanted by the residents are unenforceable.

"We won't take it (parking) off for 15 minutes," he said.

If, however, a petition signed by a majority of residents making what city officials consider a reasonable request is submitted, it usually takes two to three weeks for "no parking" signs to be posted on the street.

From then on, motorists have to find someplace else to park their cars, or risk being ticketed by police officers.

Brief Says No One Ever Hurt By Generating Plant Radiation

By BOB GUENTHER
Star Staff Writer

After all the smoke in the nuclear power debate has cleared, the fact remains that not a single person has ever been harmed by radiation from any of the 54 nuclear power plants in the U.S., the State Power Review Board has been told.

In a brief, Del Dirrim, attorney for the Omaha Public Power District (OPPD), warned that unless Ft. Calhoun No. 2 nuclear plant is built, Nebraskans will face a critical power shortage and "greatly increased" electricity rates in the 1980s.

Referring to a group trying to block the plant, Dirrim said, "The hysterical and unfounded outcry of the extremely small and loose-knit group called Nebraska Public Power Project . . . proposes no feasible alternative to (the nuclear plant)."

OPPD's opponents claimed that, though "unpleasant," the public welfare demands the second nuclear plant be blocked for economic and safety reasons.

Dirrim said, "It would be even more 'unpleasant' to cause the ratepayers of Nebraska to face critical electrical shortages in the mid-1980s and beyond; to greatly curtail or prohibit industrial development in Nebraska; and to impose upon a great number of Nebraskans the greatly increased electrical rates which would result from any alternative to this application."

The Power Review Board is expected to act later this week on OPPD's application to construct the 1,150-megawatt plant which has an $810 million price tag. The City of Lincoln had an opportunity to share in the construction of the plant; however, the City Council rejected the offer.

Dirrim noted that Ft. Calhoun No. 2 has "received the most intense and critical examination by (the board) of any matter ever presented."

He added, "By the time the benefits of this proposed generation unit are being enjoyed by a large number of Nebraskans, the membership of the Power Review Board will be drastically altered or completely changed, and the majority of the membership of the Nebraska Public Power Project, currently led by Mr. (Rich) Lombardi and . . . Sen. (Steve) Fowler, will hopefully be centered on more responsible endeavors than (this)."

"When all is said and done on the subject of nuclear plant safety, one irrefutable fact remains: That with at least 54 nuclear generation plants in commercial operation in the U.S. today, not one human being has ever been harmed by radiation from any of these plants," Dirrim said.

Fuel Contract Inked

Los Angeles (AP) — Southern California Edison Co. has signed a 10-year contract reportedly in excess of $1 billion with Pertamina, the national oil company of Indonesia, to buy "substantial volumes" of low sulfur fuel, an Edison spokesman said.

EPA Okays Scottsbluff Sewage Plan

Scottsbluff (AP) — It's go for Scottsbluff's proposed new sewage system as far as the Environmental Protection Agency is concerned.

City Manager Frank Koehler and Mayor Donald Overman met with EPA officials from Washington and the Nebraska region and learned that plans are satisfactory.

They said the environmental officials have reacted quite favorably to Scottsbluff's proposed new system, which involves using the sewage to irrigate cropland.

Koehler said, "The environmental officials were quite interested in the possibility that the proposed irrigation system is even more cost-effective than appears in the engineering reports."

Region 7 EPA engineering division head Paul Walker of Kansas City told the city officials, "This is an exemplary project which meets the goals and the guidelines" of EPA legislation.

City officials indicated that if no major hitches develop, the project could be completed in slightly more than two years.

Immanuel Plans Facilities For Aged, Alcoholic

Omaha (AP) — Construction may start early next spring on two facilities on the Immanuel Medical Center's campus in northwest Omaha.

Riley Green Jr., Immanuel's chief executive officer, said plans for a 196-bed home for the elderly and a 30-bed alcoholic treatment center have been or soon will be reviewed by local and state health planning agencies.

He said loans probably will provide the primary financing for the projects, which would go out for construction bids late this year and be completed in 1977.

Officials said it is hoped that gifts also will help pay for the previously announced home for the aged, planned jointly by Immanuel and the Fontenelle Boulevard Home.

Cost of the home is estimated at about $6 million. The building would have a capacity nearly the same as that of the separate homes now operated by Immanuel and Fontenelle.

The alcoholic treatment center would cost about $755,000.

"Focus" is the big entertainment section in the "Sunday Journal and Star."

Reagan Campaign Gears Up In State

By DON WALTON
Star Staff Writer

An anticipated presidential primary campaign for former California Gov. Ronald Reagan continues to gear up in Nebraska.

Although Reagan has not yet formally entered the Republican presidential wars, the groundwork has been laid in Nebraska for a primary election collision with President Ford next May.

Former Republican State Chairman Milan Bish of Grand Island has scheduled a news conference in Omaha Thursday to make what he has billed as "a major political announcement" dealing with the Reagan effort.

The announcement, he said Tuesday, "should have great impact statewide and possibly some national ramifications."

Bish declined to discuss the event in advance of the airport press conference.

But he acknowledged that "quite a bit" of organizational effort has already taken place in advance of Reagan's expected entry into the presidential sweepstakes later this year.

In addition to Bish, Reagan forces have already signed up George Cook of Lincoln, state campaign chief for former President Nixon, as one of the key members of Reagan's national campaign team.

Some resignations from party leadership posts in Nebraska are expected to clear the way for a number of future Reagan endorsements.

Reagan can be expected to field a slate of national convention delegate candidates and to campaign in the state.

The former governor, whose close ties to Sen. Carl Curtis have triggered past fund-raising campaign efforts in Nebraska on behalf of the senator, last visited the state in February when he spoke in Grand Island.

Reagan was on the presidential primary ballot in 1968, garnering 42,703 votes. Nixon won that election with 140,076 votes.

Nebraska PTA Opposes 3% Cut In State Budgets

The Nebraska PTA has passed a resolution flatly opposing the 3% across-the-board reduction of state agency budgets, as Gov. J. James Exon has proposed in calling a special session of the Legislature Wednesday.

The PTA resolution urges state senators to reject Exon's moves "that would arbitrarily trim 3%" from state general fund (tax-supported) budgets, and to resist any attempt to reduce spending for education programs.

Rather than "reduce all services for children and youth, the Nebraska PTA favors a readjustment of state funding based on assessed needs and priorities," the resolution states.

Exon has called for spending reductions nearly across the board to ease what he claims will be a state financial crunch and to prevent a tax rate boost.

The 150 PTA delegates at their annual convention in Grand Island installed Mrs. Marvin C. Stewart of Lincoln as state president. She succeeds Mrs. Everett P. Dietz of Omaha.

Other new officers named to serve through 1977 include Mrs. John H. Lichty Jr. of Omaha, president-elect; and Mrs. Curtis R. Doty of Grand Island, recording secretary.

The convention urged its members to monitor local boards of education, to check on their compliance with the new state open meetings law. Another resolution adopted commends boards that are complying with LB325, but noted some "are not in fact following the intent and spirit" of the 1975 law.

Officials Of Railroad Investigate Explosion At BN Signal Building

PACIFIC JUNCTION, Iowa (AP) — Officials of the Burlington Northern Railroad are investigating the explosion which demolished a signal light bungalow about 1½ miles west of here Monday night.

An employe in the Pacific Junction yards said the 6-foot-by 9-foot concrete and steel building was destroyed about 10:30 p.m. A dispatcher in Pacific Junction got a lighted signal indicating there was a train on the tracks — but he knew there wasn't.

"The dispatcher tried to control the signals but he couldn't," said Wayne Lafferty of Lincoln, Neb., Burlington Northern signal supervisor. "He then called a signal repairman. In the meantime, a train went by and reported the damage."

Lafferty said someone apparently climbed atop the building, pried a wire mesh off a small cupola and dropped some type of explosive into the bungalow.

The explosion sent chunks of concrete flying, and the building's steel door was found in a ditch about 40 feet away with the lock still on it.

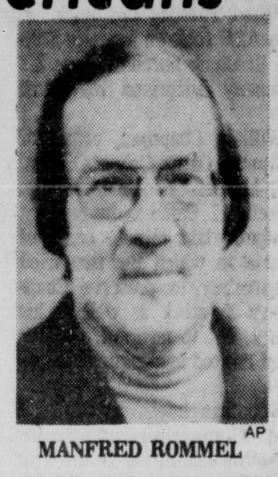
Rommel Helping Black Americans



AP

MANFRED ROMMEL

BONN, West Germany (AP) — The son of Erwin Rommel, the famed German field marshal in World War II, is helping black American soldiers in cases of racial discrimination in Stuttgart where he is the lord mayor.

Manfred Rommel, 49, has won the praise of Gen. George S. Blanchard, commander of the U.S. Army in Europe, for a crackdown on German taxi drivers and bars that have refused service to black Americans.

One American, David Sanderson, 25, of Ronceverte, Miss., said in an interview that before Rommel took office there were "cases on cases of discrimination, which more or less have since disappeared."

The mayor won election as the Christian Democratic candidate last December and took office in January.

At a press reception in Bonn this month, Gen. Blanchard recalled the case of Spec. 4 Charles Allen, a black member of the VII Corps "Candlelight Singers" who had met Rommel after a performance. The general said Rommel invited Allen to let him know if he ever encountered any problems in Stuttgart.

Shortly thereafter, he added, Allen had occasion to remind the mayor of his offer.

"As an American soldier," the black soldier wrote Rommel, "I want to address you today, Mr. Mayor, because I was treated like a second-class human being in a city calling itself 'The World's Partner' . . ."

Allen, a friend of Sanderson, said that on Jan. 3 two cabbies had refused to take him from Stuttgart central railway station to his barracks about six miles away.

According to Allen's letter, one cabby replied, "I don't drive Negroes." Another taxi driver, a woman, refused on the ground that she was afraid of blacks. A third cab finally took him to his destination.

Rommel wrote Allen, apologizing for the incident "in the name of all the people of Stuttgart." The two offending cabbies were fined 100 marks ($40) each.

Five months later, Sanderson, his German-born wife, their friend John Fox of Meridian, Miss., and his German fiance, were refused entry to a Stuttgart nightclub.

Sanderson, a civilian employe of the U.S. military, informed Rommel and the mayor last August ordered an investigation that led the city to suspend until next Dec. 19 the owner's license to operate three local nightclubs. The suspension is now under appeal.

Rommel has promised to fight racial discrimination "with energy and severity". But, he added: "The majority of the people in Stuttgart take a liberal and tolerant view of members of other races."

Texas Wells Hang In There

Austin, Tex. (UPI) — Oil wells in Texas have been pumping at maximum production since April 1972 because of the fuel shortage.

Members of the Texas Railroad Commission, which regulates oil and gas production in the state, say it is unlikely the production allowable will ever again drop below full capacity except in select fields where all-out production would result in waste.

Board Defers Action On LOMR Contract

The Lancaster County Board deferred action Tuesday on a proposed contract between the Lancaster Office of Mental Retardation (LOMR) and York County to provide services to mentally retarded students.

Commissioner Bob Colin questioned the contract since LOMR is cutting down the number of its employes and, therefore, cutting back on services in Lancaster County.

Commissioner Jan Gauger said that since York County has no programs for mentally retarded students, those students would receive training in Lancaster County. Lancaster county would be reimbursed, she said, adding, "We have an obligation to handle them."

The commissioners said they wanted more information on the LOMR contract which will be with School Dist. 12 in York County.

In other business the board authorized the creation of an escrow account to be opened in the county treasurer's office for the county engineer's office.

The special account would hold the county's portion of money which will be used to match federal funds for county road projects.

Mrs. Gauger said the new account would allow Lancaster County to earn interest on local funds instead of the state, where the county money has been held to date.

The board also:

— Cancelled a payment of $40.59 to Latsch Bros. since a duplicate payment had been made.

— Waived 90-day waiting period for health insurance for Jodi Richter, a clerk typist in County Clerk's office.

— Deferred one week appointment of Chris Layne to Commission on Aging, since the City Council rejected that appointment Monday.

— Approved participation in county retirement plan by Lavern Mick, in county engineer's office.

— Approved recommendation of Personnel Policy Board concerning increase in classification of Clerk Steno I from Grade 4 to Grade 5.

— Approved Outstanding Performance Award of Henry Ahlers, food service worker at Lancaster Manor.

Judges Get Courtroom, At Last

After almost two years of debate, Lincoln's Municipal Court judges will be getting their fourth courtroom.

On Tuesday the County-City Building Commission approved plans to remodel the building's second floor. The city Personnel Department will be turned into the courtroom.

In turn, the Personnel Department and the Violations Bureau on second floor will be moved down to the first floor when the remodeling begins.

No time table has yet been set for those office shifts and beginning of the remodeling work.

ADC Mothers To Get Food Stamps In Mail

According to new federal regulations, mothers receiving aid to depdendent children (ADC), can have food stamps mailed to them after Jan. 1, 1976.

Don Williamson, assistant director of the Lancaster County Public Welfare Department, said the amount charged for the food stamps would be deducted from the ADC checks.

Williamson said welfare officials are planning to take measures by which they can determine whether a recipient received the stamps in the mail.

Williamson said such a measure was necessary because putting food stamps in the mail was "just like putting $20 bills in the mail."

He said to send the stamps by certified mail (in which the signature of the addressee is required) will cost about 65 to 75 cents extra.

Williamson noted the new procedure will only be optional. He indicated many recipients may elect not to use it.

"Many of our ADC mothers work and are not at home when the mailman comes," he said. The new procedure also locks the recipients into spending a certain amount of money for the stamps even if for one reason or another a recipient would need less food.

Welfare Dept. May Ease Standards On Child Care

The Nebraska Department of Public Welfare is considering relaxing standards for child day care centers with the intent of reducing costs incurred by day care centers.

Areas being considered, according to Welfare Director Al Ihms, are the ratio of staff to children, minimum qualifications for staff and nutrition standards.

Ihms said the review of the standards will require several months' study, culminating in a public hearing early next year on any changes proposed.

Ihms said the review is being done in response to concerns that increased operating costs are working a hardship on families with children in day care programs.

A special committee will review the standards; it will consist of representatives of private and public day care centers and the public. Ihms said the committee will be named within two weeks.

Current standards require one staff member for every five children under age 3; one adult for every seven children between ages 3 and 6; and one adult for every 12 from ages 6 through 13.

Nutrition standards require one hot meal equivalent to one-third or one-half of the child's minimum daily nutritional needs and mid-morning and mid-afternoon snacks.

Ihms said there has been some problems interpreting those standards in individual cases.

Day care centers are licensed by the Welfare Department.

Quick Action 'Surprised' Feeder

Omaha (UPI) — The chairman of the American Beef Packers, Inc., creditors committee testified Tuesday the quick action ABP took on a nearly $70,000 livestock purchase from his company "surprised hell out of me."

William Chapman, owner of Chapman Cattle Co., of Omaha, and his head bookkeeper, Mrs. Roselle E. Calmes, unraveled a dramatic last minute chain of events in which the two tried desperately to preserve Chapman's livestock as well as his check, but to no avail, as ABP filed limited bankruptcy on Jan. 7.

Chapman, later named to head the 11-member unsecured creditors committee, testified he sold 150 head of cattle from a Sidney feedlot to ABP for its Fort Morgan, Colo., plant on Jan. 3.

Chapman said a truck carrier, contracted by ABP, picked up the cattle on Jan. 6 and took the load to Fort Morgan where it was slaughtered on the same day.

5-10 Days Normal

Chapman said it normally took from five to 10 days from the date of sale until the date of delivery to a packing plant. When asked by the government about the quickness of the sale and slaughter, Chapman said "it surprised hell out of me."

After he had sold the cattle, Chapman said he made various inquiries about whether ABP was "solvent" and upon receivng answers to his question, called the Sidney feedlot manager.

Chapman said he instructed the feedlot manager on Jan. 6 to telephone the Fort Morgan plant to find out if Chapman's check was in the mail.

Chapman dispatched the feedlot manager 80 miles from Sidney to Fort Morgan to pick up the check and return it to Sidney. There, Chapman said a pilot contracted by his company, returned the check to Omaha.

On Jan. 7, Chapman and Mrs. Calmes testified the pilot took Mrs. Calmes and the check to Detroit, Mich., in an attempt to cash it at the Michigan National Bank upon which it was drawn.

Mrs. Calmes of Bellevue said she was informed by bank officials they "couldn't cash the check for me" because there was no money in the ABP account. Mrs. Calmes returned with the $69,417.64 check to Omaha.

When asked if he had ever been paid, Chapman said, "No, there would be a lot of people mad if I had."

The government called 12 witnesses Tuesday to further allege Frank R. West, ABP board chairman and president, Robert E. Lee, ABP group vice president-cattle procurement, ABP and its wholly owned subsidiary Beefland International Inc., of Council Bluffs, Iowa, engaged in an alleged scheme to defraud creditors.

Tuesday was the first day livestock feeders, who are owed more than $21 million by ABP, were called to testify.

Among the charges contained in the 105 count indictment handed down by a federal grand jury were 29 counts of interstate transportation of stolen or otherwise fraudently obtained property and 32 counts of wire fraud, which the government contends includes using the wires to stop payment of checks.

While Chapman testified his cattle were taken to Colorado, other livestock feeders from Nebraska testified their cattle, purchased on Jan. 3, were taken to the Beefland plant in Council Bluffs, Iowa.

Asked For Tags

Chapman further testified he asked the plant manager at Fort Morgan to place identification tags on the sides of his butchered cattle so he could trace them.

Chapman said he emphasized "several times in the strongest language I could and still do it nicely" that he wanted the identification done. However, Chapman said the plant manager told him he had called ABP's Omaha headquarters "and the attorneys advised him he didn't have to do it."

The beef was subsequently shipped from Fort Morgan, and Chapman said he had no idea of the destination.

Francis Chvatal, a Morse Bluff farmer and cattle feeder, testified an ABP buyer purchased 35 head of cattle from him on Jan. 4 for $14,019 and picked the load up on Jan. 5 when it was taken to Beefland. Chvatal said he never did receive a payment check.

Rudy Meduna, a Colon farmer and cattle feeder, said he sold 90 head of cattle to ABP for $40,821.84, on Jan. 4. His ABP cattle buyer picked up the check, written on the Seattle First National Bank, of Seattle, Wash., on Jan. 6 and took it to the South Omaha Production Credit Association.

Meduna said it was customary for the ABP buyer to do this because of problems Meduna had experienced with ABP. Meduna said the check later bounced.

A Seattle First National Bank official has testified previously that on Jan. 3 ABP called him and told him not to honor checks.

When asked if he had received any money for his cattle, Meduna said, "not a red cent."

ABP Paid More

However, under defense questioning, he said the price paid by ABP was about $1 per hundredweight higher than the offer he had received from two other packers.

Other livestock feeders testifying they sold cattle to ABP for Beefland but never received payment were Bery L. Rex Weber of McCool Junction and Emery C. Hansen of Weeping Water.

At times, the defense contended the orders for the cattle in question were actually made in mid-December, but the livestock wasn't picked up until early January.

Fettin Co. Bid Low

Fettin Roofing Co. of Lincoln, with a bid of $33,213, was the apparent low bidder Tuesday for roof repair on the former law building of the University of Nebraska-Lincoln campus.

Colombia Issues New Banknotes

Bogota, Colombia (UPI)—The Colombian Central Bank has just put new 200-peso bills into circulation. Worth about six U.S. dollars, the banknote is the biggest in Colombia at present. It carries a picture of South American liberator Simon Bolivar on the front and a coffee picker on the back.

Bills of 500 pesos, about 16 U.S. dollars, were in circulation until recently. When bank robbers took a pile of them in a holdup in Santa Marta on the Caribbean coast, the government withdrew the denomination from circulation to prevent the robbers from using the stolen money.

Grain Fed Safely Despite Aflatoxin

By ERIC KRAMER
Associated Press Writer

A U.S. Department of Agriculture researcher says he has fed cattle 50 times the amount of aflatoxin currently allowed by Food and Drug Administration officials with no ill effects.

Aflatoxin, listed as a cancer-causing substance, has caused a scare in recent days among farmers and elevator operators in Iowa, Kansas, Missouri and Nebraska.

Alex Keyl, in a telephone interview from his home in Athens, Ga., said he gace 100 yearlings feed with 1,000 parts per billion aflatoxin without producing ill effects.

Many elevators have stopped accepting corn which glowed under an ultraviolet or "black" light for fear it contained aflatoxin.

Keyl said, "That's ridiculous. That's absolutely ridiculous."

The Food and Drug Administration prohibits interstate shipment of grain containing more than 20 parts per billion of aflatoxins.

Ken Pohlman of A&L Midwest Agricultural Laboratories in Omaha said his lab examined seven samples of Nebraska corn which glowed under a black light and found no measurable amount of aflatoxin.

Bob Anderson of the Nebraska Grain Dealers Association said Tests on three Nebraska corn samples taken to the U.S. Department of Agriculture lab in Omaha showed two samples above 15 parts per billion and one below. He said the USDA lab used 15 parts per billion as the limit because its tests had a five parts per billion margin of error.

University of Nebraska researchers said their tests would not be completed until Wednesday.

Keyl said aflatoxin showed up in only one of the 100 experimental cattle. He said the aflatoxin was in the liver of the cow and disappeared shortly after the animal was taken off the aflatoxin feed.

James A. Adamson, deputy regional director of the Food and Drug Administration, said the FDA had no way to precent farmers from feeding grain containing aflatoxin to cattle. He said the U.S. Department of Agriculture lab in Omaha would perform tests for $10.85 each to determine the level of aflatoxin in a sample of grain.

The government test could free the corn to move in interstate commerce, but the FDA said it would get a copy of any lab test which showed grain containing more than 20 parts per billion of aflatoxin.

Adamson, who said he knows of no positive proof of aflatoxins in Midwest corn, said his agency could seize grain moving in interstate commerce if it contained high levels of the substance.

However, he said the FDA would not get the results of black light tests done by elevators.

Marv Sitorius, head of the plant industry division of the State Department of Agriculture, said his agency had the authority to stop farmers from selling or using grain which was found in a laboratory to have more than 20 parts per billion of aflatoxin.

However, Anderson said a farmer or elevator operator whose grain did not pass the lab test in Omaha could demand a more exact test at USDA facilities in Maryland.

A fourth or more of Nebraska's corn crop is usually used up on the farm without ever being sold or tested for aflatoxins.

As much as half crop often is fed to cattle in Nebraska without leaving the state.

David Wysong, a University of Nebraska plant pathologist, said aflatoxins were usually produced when grain was stored. He said aflatoxins can attack drought-stressed corn in the field under the right conditions. He said he knew of no treatment to prevent aflatoxins from forming in the field.

Mass Honors Duke Ellington

NANCY, France (AP) — An ecumenical mass in memory of jazz band leader Duke Ellington was held during a jazz festival here.

Some 2,000 people attended the mass offered in a circus tent by the Rev. Guy de Fatto, a former professional jazz musician in France.

The choir was formed by the American "Stars of Faith" group led by the Rev. Isaac Douglas of Nashville, Tenn.

Three Theaters Drop Weekday Movie Matinees

Three downtown Lincoln movie theaters, the State, the Cinema 1 and Cinema 2, have eliminated Monday through Friday matinee shows.

Manager Gene Bunrdorf said the three theaters now will be open for evening shows during the week, and all day on weekends and holidays.

Dave Livingston of the Douglas theaters said they also plan to drop matinees during the week, and schedule them only on weekends and holidays.

Spokesmen for the Stuart and Plaza theaters said they have no plans to eliminate matinees during the week.

Missouri General License Revoked

The Nebraska Insurance Department has revoked the license of Missouri General Insurance Co., Director E. Benjamin Nelson said Thursday.

He said Nebraskans insured with Missouri General should seek coverage elsewhere, because the company may not be able to pay claims sought since Sept. 12. The company was placed in receivership in Missouri in mid-September.

Nelson said policyholders who have claims against the company will be contacted by the Missouri Insurance Department. Policyholders who have any questions should contact the Nebraska Insurance Department, he said.

Maytag Reports Record Profits

Newton, Iowa (UPI) — The Maytag Co. reported a record high fiscal quarter, with sales and earnings surpassing those for the same period in 1974.

A company statement said sales for the three-month period that ended Sept. 30 totaled $69,878,683, an increase of 14% over sales in the same quarter last year.

Earnings for the period were $8,912,683, or 67 cents a share, compared to $5,822,891 for the same quarter in 1974.

Judge Asks Beefing Up Of Courtroom Security

Omaha (AP) — District Judge Rudolph Tesar has asked Douglas County Courthouse architects to provide better security for district courtrooms.

Tesar said he may have to start packing a gun in his briefcase if better security is not provided.

The judge said additional deputy sheriffs had to be summoned in a recent criminal case when spectators and relatives of a defendant in the courtroom became upset when the jury brought in a guilty verdict.

Tesar said he has handled three cases in the last year in which persons in the courtroom became upset and he felt that the judge and jurors were endangered.

Nes Latenser, president of Latenser and Sons, the architectural firm handling the remodeling job, said the work will include additional court security features.

Ogallala School Bond Defeated

Lincoln Star Special

Ogallala — Incomplete returns late Tuesday night indicated the $5.5 million Ogallala junior-senior high school bond proposal was defeated, according to the Keith County clerk's office.

About 75% of the ballots were opposing the issue, it was reported.

More Cattle Being Fed

For the first time since December 1973, the number of cattle in Nebraska feedlots is higher than the comparable figure for the previous year.

Ron Radenz of the State-Federal Division of Agricultural Statistics said cattle feeders were beginning to place more cattle on feed, partly in response to a projected record corn crop. Oct. 1, 1974, and 20% more than Sept. 1, 1975.

On Oct. 1, there were 1.06 million cattle being fattened for slaughter. That is 2% more than

However, the figure was still 26% below the number of cattle in feedlots Oct. 1, 1973, when cattle prices began to take their disastrous dip.

Whear Elected As Sherman County Sheriff

Lincoln Star Special

Loup City — In a special recall election in Sherman County Tuesday, William F. Whear ousted incumbent Virgil Kaminski for the county sheriff's post.

County Clerk Murl J. Badura said the unoffocial count was 1,084 for Whear and 1,008 for Kaminski.

Approximately 75% of the voters in Sherman County turned out at the polls, the county clerk reported.

The recall election was the outgrowth of a petition drive conducted by a group of county residents who accused Kaminski of drinking while on duty, misconduct and showing partiality.

Kaminski, 45, was re-elected to the post last November in a write-in campaign, after losing out in the primary.

The 33-year-old Whear is the current police chief of Loup City, a position he has held since August 1974. Coming here from Omaha, he was employed with the Nebraska State Patrol from 1968 to 1972.

PSC Approves G. I. Bus Line Dropping Route

The Nebraska Public Service Commission has approved discontinuation of United Motorways Grand Island-Loup City-Boelus bus route.

The route became a major money loser after the establishment of minibus service in Loup City.

Despite voting for abandonment, commissioner Duane Gay said Monday the PSC should require higher bus rates to subsidize bus lines' marginal routes linking smaller Nebraska communities.

The decision had no effect on an application to discontinue routes from Grand Island to Ord and Broken Bow.

Dogs' Problems Caused By People

LOS ANGELES (AP) — "My master doesn't understand me." That's the most common complaint of William Campbell's patients — the German shepherds, Saint Bernards, fox terriers and even the poodles.

Campbell, sort of a dog psychiatrist, says most mental problems in dogs are caused by their owners.

"The dog is a great animal, but he needs to be better understood," Campbell said in a recent interview. "Normally, the dog has no problem. It's the people who have the problem."

Campbell, 45, who describes himself as a canine behavior specialist, is the president-elect of the American Society of Veterinary Ethology,

He sees all sorts of dog problems — house soiling, furniture chewing, nervousness, lack of self-esteem or even obesity.

"You can't change a dog's behavior without changing the dog owner in terms of how he relates to the dog," Campbell said.

Campbell said a main reason for dog problems is that owners treat them inconsistently, alternating lavish praise with punishment. He favors rewarding good deeds.

Campbell said hyperactive children can make a dog hyperactive, and marital stress can be communicated to the dog.

"Most dogs have a tendency to reduce tension by barking, chewing or digging, or all three," he said. "He can get a gastrointestinal upset or colitis if the tension isn't stopped. We try to find out what's causing tension and if you can relieve that, the symptoms disappear."

He said some problems are brought on by the canine "work ethic" or by a natural tendency of a dog to imitate his master.

"Dogs love to imitate people," he said. "If they see you blowing your nose, they'll do their best to imitate by tearing up the tissue or reeling off a whole roll of toilet paper."

Reagan Campaign Gears Up In State

By DON WALTON
Star Staff Writer

An anticipated presidential primary campaign for former California Gov. Ronald Reagan continues to gear up in Nebraska.

Although Reagan has not yet formally entered the Republican presidential wars, the groundwork has been laid in Nebraska for a primary election collision with President Ford next May.

Former Republican State Chairman Milan Bish of Grand Island has scheduled a news conference in Omaha Thursday to make what he has billed as "a major political announcement" dealing with the Reagan effort.

The announcement, he said Tuesday, "should have great impact statewide and possibly some national ramifications."

Bish declined to discuss the event in advance of the airport press conference.

But he acknowledged that "quite a bit" of organizational effort has already taken place in advance of Reagan's expected entry into the presidential sweepstakes later this year.

In addition to Bish, Reagan forces have already signed up George Cook of Lincoln, state campaign chief for former President Nixon, as one of the key members of Reagan's national campaign team.

Some resignations from party leadership posts in Nebraska are expected to clear the way for a number of future Reagan endorsements.

Reagan can be expected to field a slate of national convention delegate candidates and to campaign in the state.

The former governor, whose close ties to Sen. Carl Curtis have triggered past fund-raising campaign efforts in Nebraska on behalf of the senator, last visited the state in February when he spoke in Grand Island.

Reagan was on the presidential primary ballot in 1968, garnering 42,703 votes. Nixon won that election with 140,076 votes.

Nebraska PTA Opposes 3% Cut In State Budgets

The Nebraska PTA has passed a resolution flatly opposing the 3% across-the-board reduction of state agency budgets, as Gov. J. James Exon has proposed in calling a special session of the Legislature Wednesday.

The PTA resolution urges state senators to reject Exon's moves "that would arbitrarily trim 3%" from state general fund (tax-supported) budgets, and to resist any attempt to reduce spending for education programs.

Rather than "reduce all services for children and youth, the Nebraska PTA favors a readjustment of state funding based on assessed needs and priorities," the resolution states.

Exon has called for spending reductions nearly across the board to ease what he claims will be a state financial crunch and to prevent a tax rate boost.

The 150 PTA delegates at their annual convention in Grand Island installed Mrs. Marvin C. Stewart of Lincoln as state president. She succeeds Mrs. Everett P. Dietz of Omaha.

Other new officers named to serve through 1977 include Mrs. John H. Lichty Jr. of Omaha, president-elect; and Mrs. Curtis R. Doty of Grand Island, recording secretary.

The convention urged its members to monitor local boards of education, to check on their compliance with the new state open meetings law. Another resolution adopted commends boards that are complying with LB325, but noted some "are not in fact following the intent and spirit" of the 1975 law.

Officials Of Railroad Investigate Explosion At BN Signal Building

PACIFIC JUNCTION, Iowa (AP) — Officials of the Burlington Northern Railroad are investigating the explosion which demolished a signal light bungalow about 1½ miles west of here Monday night.

An employe in the Pacific Junction yards said the 6-foot-by 9-foot concrete and steel building was destroyed about 10:30 p.m. A dispatcher in Pacific Junction got a lighted signal indicating there was a train on the tracks — but he knew there wasn't.

"The dispatcher tried to control the signals but he couldn't," said Wayne Lafferty of Lincoln, Neb., Burlington Northern signal supervisor. "He then called a signal repairman. In the meantime, a train went by and reported the damage."

Lafferty said someone apparently climbed atop the building, pried a wire mesh off a small cupola and dropped some type of explosive into the bungalow.

The explosion sent chunks of concrete flying, and the building's steel door was found in a ditch about 40 feet away with the lock still on it.

Board Closes Pershing Talks

By DICK HOLMAN
Star Staff Writer

Public discussion by the Southeast Nebraska Technical Community College (SeTech) Area Board on negotiations to acquire Pershing College lasted less than a minute Tuesday.

Gary Carstens of Beatrice, board facilities committee chairman, summarized: "There isn't anything of substance to report." He didn't elaborate.

Carstens added only that negotiations between SeTech and the University of Nebraska Foundation, which owns the defunct Beatrice campus, will continue.

The report came after the board interrupted its public meeting for a 20-minute closed session followed by a 15-minute recess to discuss Pershing and an SeTech faculty request for collective bargaining recognition.

Plan Not Finished

After the meeting, board attorney Doug Curry said the "possibilities" that the foundation would have a proposal ready Tuesday didn't materialize. The foundation executive committee met earlier Tuesday.

President Harry Haynie said the foundation committee took no new action. He reiterated that the "main decision" stands: To "maximize the revenue that can be obtained from the sale of the college." Empty four years after going bankrupt, the 69-acre Pershing has a value estimated at more than $2 million.

The SeTech board on a 7-4 vote last month authorized the talks to acquire the nine-year-old campus as a gift, to buy it for no more than $35,800, or to lease it. The action prompted a suit seeking to bar the board from ratifying any such agreement without the governor's and the Legislature's okay.

If accomplished, the board would phase out its Fairbury campus and move it to Pershing, a proposal which has produced a sustained wave of opposition.

Lincoln board member Kathy Brauer later in the meeting said, "I thin, we need to look into" the Fairbury student union building fund, for which $10 per student is still being collected.

She suggested the board "explore alternatives" to use the money, now totalling about $48,000, or to determine "how to get that back to the students who contributed" to the fund established 7½ years ago.

Would End Commitment

But G. Alan Dunlap said if the Fairbury campus stops collecting the fee, that would "end the commitment" to build a student union. First, he said, the future of the campus should be resolved.

In a related comment, Waverly board member Betty Schlaphoff said, apparently seriously, "It's been suggested" that SeTech "hire Peru (State College) to run our academic program."

In deliberations to close Fairbury, some board members objected to the heavy concentration of academic transfer courses offered versus few vocational-technical or occupational programs.

Not explaining who proposed the idea, Mrs. Schlaphoff said Peru would be paid on a per-pupil basis, using Peru faculty and administrators to "relieve us of this dilemma that we're always getting into." (She was one of the four who voted to oppose acquisition of Pershing.)

SeTech Board Sets $6.7 Million Budget

The Southeast Nebraska Technical Community College (SeTech) Area Board voted unanimously Tuesday to send a 1976-77 budget request of $6.7 million to the State Department of Administrative Services.

The proposal is $120,000 more than the board tentatively approved last month, and represents a $747,283 increase over current-year spending.

To continue 1975-76 programs budgeted at $5,675,051 will require $6,191,649 next fiscal year, a 9.1% increase.

But requests of $230,685 to pay for a workload increase and $278,332 for new programs bring the total sought to $6,700,666, an 18.1% overall increase.

By campus, the budget would award Fairbury $795,541, an all-funds increase of $98,623 or 28.5%; Milford, $2,579,470, up $217,917 or 12.4%; Lincoln, $2,613,958, up $375,854 or 24.3%; and SeTech Area office administration and 15-county operations, $711,697, up $54,889 or 8.35%.

If the legislative special session sustains Gov. J. James Exon's request to trim state agency general fund budgets by 3% almost across the board, SeTech Area President Robert S. Eicher said that "would cost us about $85,000." He said he assumes spending cuts would be imposed on each SeTech campus.

"State aid this year is 50% of our total budget," Dr. Eicher said. If the Legislature cut 3% of tax-supported funds, that would mean the 1976-77 proposed budget would "start from a new base."

Because of the Unicameral's uncertainty about any reduction, he told the board, "At this point, I'd hate to see us take out" any requests for increases based on the current approved budget. In fact, he said the board may want to seek larger increases.

Moreover, despite the board's approval of the package Tuesday, he said it might not be what SeTech will need next year.

"I seriously doubt there'll be any increase in state aid," Eicher said. Yet if that remains stable and SeTech maintained its 1.35-mill local operations levy, the taxing authority would produce $2 million — $700,000 more than this year.

But he said if state aid were cut, that "would amost necessitate" raising the local levy to maintain current operations. He explained that most increases would go to salaries (70% of the budget), which were set at 8% by the old board but half the members have been replaced. Faculty negotiations might alter the need, he said.

Waverly board member Betty Schlaphoff said if there's a state aid shortfall, SeTech could "use the local levy to fund pay increases." And if SeTech retains its Fairbury campus — which could possibly be moved to Beatrice — "we'll need it (more funds) there."

SeTech Students Refuse To Take Whittier Classes

While adult evening classes are packed on the Lincoln campus, Director David L. Buettner said Tuesday many Southeast Nebraska Technical Community College (SeTech) students have refused to attend further sessions in Whittier Junior High, where two classes have been cancelled.

Dr. Buettner told the SeTech board that both relate to "problems of the area," 2240 Vine, because of tensions there evoked by the shooting death of Sherdell Lewis.

Noting a Lincoln enrollment mark of 3,515 students, Buettner said SeTech usually hopes to maintain 80-85% in the evening classes until completion.

But at Whittier, Monday and Wednesday night class attendance has already dropped to 65% of those first enrolled, while Tuesday and Thursday sessions are down to 60%. The school now serves "some classes with as few as three or four people."

The director noted in response to students' fears because of "damages to automobiles in the area," he has hired a security man to monitor the Whittier parking lot during the evening classes. Buettner said he hopes that will "minimize the risks involved."

"It's going to be a big problem for us," he said, "trying to get that enrollment back up where it has been" at Whittier.

Board Chairman Robert Wekesser of Lincoln said, "Maybe we should move someplace else, because the problems aren't going to go away." He suggested the board might ask the Lincoln Public Schools for class space elsewhere.

SeTech rents space in Whittier, which is still used as a junior high but is pegged for closing. The school board has offered to sell Whittier to SeTech, to consolidate its Lincoln campus, not spread throughout Lincoln in leased space.

The board took no action on Wekesser's suggestion, but toured the entire Lincoln campus Tuesday night.

Rommel Helping Black Americans

MANFRED ROMMEL AP

BONN, West Germany (AP) — The son of Erwin Rommel, the famed German field marshal in World War II, is helping black American soldiers in cases of racial discrimination in Stuttgart where he is the lord mayor.

Manfred Rommel, 49, has won the praise of Gen. George S. Blanchard, commander of the U.S. Army in Europe, for a crackdown on German taxi drivers and bars that have refused service to black Americans.

One American, David Sanderson, 25, of Ronceverte, Miss., said in an interview that before Rommel took office there were "cases on cases of discrimination, which more or less have since disappeared."

The mayor won election as the Christian Democratic candidate last December and took office in January.

At a press reception in Bonn this month, Gen. Blanchard recalled the case of Spec. 4 Charles Allen, a black member of the VII Corps "Candlelight Singers" who had met Rommel after a performance. The general said Rommel invited Allen to let him know if he ever encountered any problems in Stuttgart.

Shortly thereafter, he added, Allen had occasion to remind the mayor of his offer.

"As an American soldier," the black soldier wrote Rommel, "I want to address you today, Mr. Mayor, because I was treated like a second-class human being in a city calling itself 'The World's Partner' . . ."

Allen, a friend of Sanderson, said that on Jan. 3 two cabbies had refused to take him from Stuttgart central railway station to his barracks about six miles away.

According to Allen's letter, one cabby replied, "I don't drive Negroes." Another taxi driver, a woman, refused on the ground that she was afraid of blacks. A third cab finally took him to his destination.

Rommel wrote Allen, apologizing for the incident "in the name of all the people of Stuttgart." The two offending cabbies were fined 100 marks ($40) each.

Five months later, Sanderson, his German-born wife, their friend John Fox of Meridian, Miss., and his German fiance, were refused entry to a Stuttgart nightclub.

Sanderson, a civilian employe of the U.S. military, informed Rommel and the mayor last August ordered an investigation that led the city to suspend until next Dec. 19 the owner's license to operate three local nightclubs. The suspension is now under appeal.

Rommel has promised to fight racial discrimination "with energy and severity". But, he added: "The majority of the people in Stuttgart take a liberal and tolerant view of members of other races."

Texas Wells Hang In There

Austin, Tex. (UPI) — Oil wells in Texas have been pumping at maximum production since April 1972 because of the fuel shortage.

Members of the Texas Railroad Commission, which regulates oil and gas production in the state, say it is unlikely the production allowable will ever again drop below full capacity except in select fields where all-out production would result in waste.

Fisk Saves Boston In 12th

BOSTON (AP) — "I didn't know if it was going to be fair or foul," Boston catcher Carlton Fisk said of his game-winning home run in the 12th inning early Wednesday morning, "but I knew if it was fair it was out of here."

In a game that had a fistful of emotional twists and turns, it was entirely appropriate that the Red Sox' 7-6 World Series victory over the Cincinnati Reds should come with the sudden drama of a home run.

Fisk delivered the shot that settled this unbelievably exciting sixth game and tied the Series at three victories each. The see-saw, rain-delayed battle between these evenly matched teams will be settled for good Wednesday night when they clash in a seventh and final game at 8:30 p.m. EDT.

The finale will be a battle of left-handers, with Boston's Bill Lee facing Cincinnati's Don Gullett. But it will have to be a whopper to top the drama which the Reds and Red Sox produced in Game 6.

Fisk's huge homer finally decided the issue but, like any good drama, there was suspense up to the very last moment. The ball soared high and far down the left field line, but Fisk stood at home plate for a moment. He wasn't admiring his shot . . . he was hoping.

Finally, left field umpire Dick Stello gave the home run sign as the ball banged into the screen portion of the foul pole atop the left field wall. The show had reached its finale and the Red Sox were winners.

Out of the Boston dugout came a stream of players, joined quickly by swarms of fans anxious to celebrate Fisk's home run with the popular catcher. For a moment, they overran home plate and there was some question whether Fisk would be able to complete his home run trot.

"Don't worry about that," said Fisk. "I was making sure I touched every base—every little white thing I saw. I was going to touch them all, even if I had to straight-arm somebody out of the way."

When Fisk came to the plate to lead off the 12th inning against reliever Pat Darcy, the eighth Cincinnati pitcher, he looked up to see which way the wind was blowing, perhaps hoping for a little help if he got a ball up in the air.

"I looked at the flag, but it wasn't doing anything," said Fisk. "I think it was wrapped around the pole."

Fisk's shot hardly needed help from the wind as far as distance was concerned. The only question was fair or foul. And when it hit the screen on the fair side of the pole, Boston had tied the Series and set up a seventh-game showdown.

Can it be as good as this one was? If it is, the fans are in for some show. Even the players had to appreciate it.

"That probably had to be one of the best-played . . . not just World Series games, but one of the best-played games I've ever sen," said Fisk. "In the 10th inning, Pete Rose said to me, 'This is some kind of game.' And I said it certainly was."

The Red Sox had come from behind in the eighth inning with the same kind of suddenness, tying the score on a two-out, three-run homer by pinch hitter Bernie Carbo. That swing wiped out a three-run Boston deficit and the game went into extra innings, settling down into a battle of bullpens.

Darcy was the Reds' eighth pitcher, setting a record for arms used by one team in a World Series game. The teams used a total of 12 pitchers between them, also a series record.

In the top of the 12th, the Reds had made one last run at Rick Wise, the fourth Boston hurler. With one out, Tony Perez and George Foster stroked singles. But Wise got Dave Concepcion on a long fly to right field and struck out Cesar Geronimo, ending the inning.

By the time Fisk reached home plate on his game-winning homer, the rampant Red Sox fans had spilled onto the field and police and park attendants had difficulty keeping them off the Boston catcher as he romped toward the dugout.

He was interviewed for television in front of the dugout with fans swarming around him. Then, Fisk took a long, happy run across the outfield into the left field corner to the door of the Red Sox clubhouse.

When Wise got the Reds out in the top of the 12th, the game was four hours old and just about every minute of action was tingling.

Very few fans had left the ballpark when Fisk came to the plate with the scoreboard clock reading 12:31 a.m. EDT.

The husky Boston catcher unloaded on Darcy and the only question was whether the ball would stay fair or sail foul. Fisk stood at the plate for a moment, watching the drive and perhaps saying a little prayer hoping to help the ball stay on the right side of the foul pole.

When it hit the pole, venerable old Fenway Park went slightly daffy with a wave of fans and Red Sox players spilling over the home plate area.

Long minutes after the sudden end of the ball game, fans still remained in the stands, savoring one of the most dramatic games in World Series history.

This was a game that seesawed back and forth, first leaning Boston's way on a three-run first-inning by rookie Fred Lynn, then seeming to turn to the Reds, who knocked out Red Sox ace Luis Tiant and took the lead 6-3.

They were only four outs away from nailing down their first world championship since 1940 when Carbo's second pinch home run of the Series brought in three runs and tied the score at 6-6.

In the eighth inning, Cesar Geronimo knocked Tiant out of the game with a leadoff home run down the right field line that barely made it into the stands just inside the foul pole.

Boston Manager Darrell Johnson came out to get his pitcher and Tiant left to a standing ovation from the capacity crowd of 35,205, which has carried on its own special love affair with the aging right-hander with the herky-jerk motion.

Cincinnati was six outs away from the world championship with a three-run lead when pitcher Pedro Borbon got into trouble in the bottom of the eighth.

Former NU Starter Pate Dies In Coma

From Press Reports

Calgary, Alta. — Hamilton Tigercats linebacker Tom Pate died in a hospital Tuesday night, four days after he collapsed with a brain disorder in a Canadian Football League game against the Calgary Stampeders.

In a brief statement, the Calgary Foothills Hospital said "Tom died this evening at about 6:20 p.m. CDT." A hospital spokesman said a full statement would be issued Wednesday.

Pate, a 23-year-old rookie from Omaha, played his collegiate career at the University of Nebraska as a defensive end.

A defensive end at Nebraska, the 6-3, 221-pound Pate was a three-year letterman at the university. At Omaha Westside, Pate was a three-sport letterman and earned all-Metro honors for his defensive prowess as a fullback-linebacker.

The parents of the rookie, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur L. Pate, were at his side when he died.

Brain Aneurism

Pate had been in a coma since he collapsed Saturday. He had been undergoing treatment for a brain aneurism, described as a congenital or inherited weakness in his brain's vascular system.

Pate joined the Saskatchewan Roughriders after graduation, but joined Hamilton in July after being dropped by the Roughriders.

Bob Martin, NU's right defensive end this year and a starter with Pate last year, said, "Tom was a great guy. He was always easy to work with and I learned a lot from him.

More Desire

"He had about as much desire as anyone," Martin continued. "If anyone could make it (in pro football), he could just by desire alone."

Pate played for the unbeaten freshman team in 1970 and was red-shirted in 1971. He was backup for NU All-American Willie Harper in 1972 and in 1973 was a strong alternate and starter. By the spring of 1974, Pate had earned the No. 1 defensive left end position for the Black Shirts.

In the last game of his Nebraska career in the 1974 Sugar Bowl win over Florida, Pate was the leading tackler with 14 tackles, 11 of them unassisted. He was named co-defensive player of the game in the 1974 win over Northwestern.

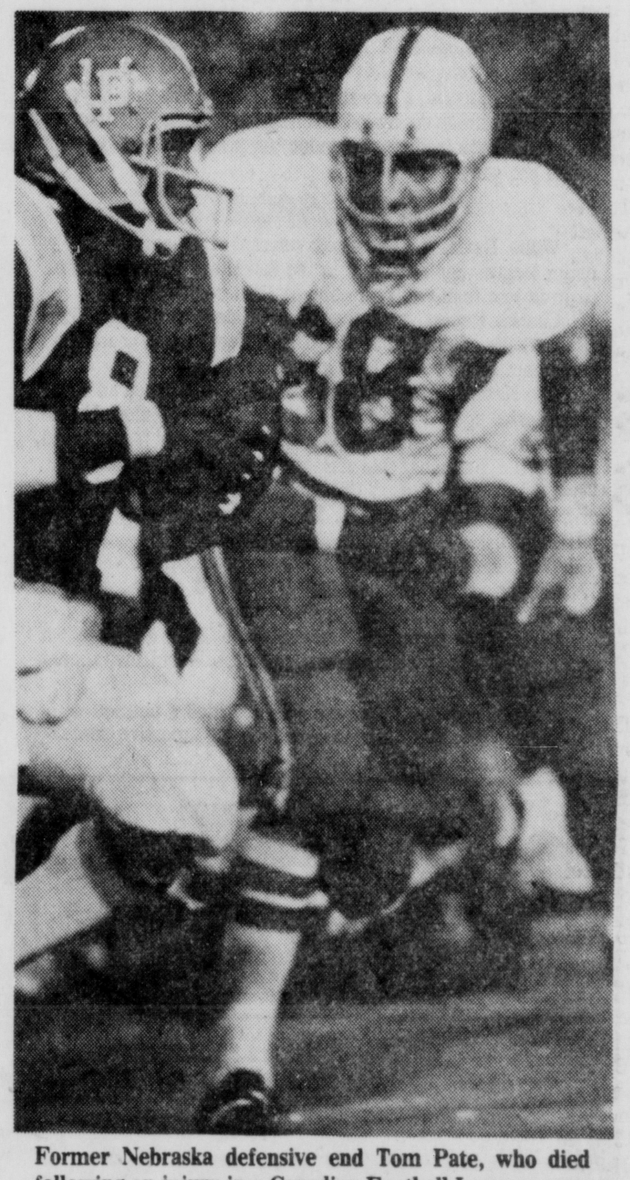
Not Football Injury

The hospital spokesman said Pate's brain aneruism did not stem from either the football injury or a childhood attack of spinal meningitis.

"The head injury was not the initial problem, nor was his childhood illness," the spokesman said. "The weakness was probably congential or inherited."

Pate caught spinal meningitis at 13 and lapsed into a four-day coma. He spent 11 days in a hospital and briefly suffered from blurred vision and partial paralysis when he was released.

Dr. Jim Charters, a Hamilton team doctor, confirmed reports from Pate's teammates that he had been suffering from severe headaches in recent weeks. Dr. Charters said that before Pate's death there was no evidence linking the collapse with the headaches.



Former Nebraska defensive end Tom Pate, who died following an injury in a Canadian Football League game, had one of the best games of his career in the 1974 Sugar Bowl. Here Pate (68) runs down Florida quarterback Don Gaffney early in the third quarter of the tilt.

Only 36 Perfect Records Remain

By RANDY YORK
Prep Sports Editor

And now there are only 36.

That's how many Nebraska prep football teams have survived the first seven weeks of the season without suffering a loss.

Only four Class A teams are included in the elite group — Bellevue (7-0), Lincoln Northeast and Scottsbluff (each 6-0-1) and Lincoln East (6-0-2).

The breakdown for other classes shows six unbeatens in Class B, five in Class C-1, seven in Class C-2, five in Class D and nine in eight-man competition.

They include:

Class B — Hartington Cedar Catholic (7-0), Holdrege (7-0), Kimball (7-0), Lincoln Pius X (7-0), Waverly (7-0) and Wayne (6-0).

Class C-1 — Battle Creek (7-0), Bennington (7-0), Gibbon (6-0), Norfolk Catholic (6-0) and Plainview (7-0).

Class C-2 — Alma (7-0), Cambridge (7-0), Friend (5-0-2), Henderson (4-0-3), Nebraska City Lourdes (6-0-1), Pleasanton (7-0) and Scribner (7-0).

Class D — Alliance St. Agnes (7-0), Callaway (7-0), Homer (7-0), Loomis (7-0) and Nelson (6-0-1).

Eight-Man — Adams (7-0), Decatur (6-0), Elgin (7-0), Odell (6-0), Ruskin (7-0), Shelby (7-0), Sidney St. Pat's (7-0), Thedford (5-0-1) and Wilsonville (6-0-1).

Because of Teacher's Convention this week throughout the state, prep football gets an early start with a sizable number of games on Wednesday night.

This week's top games are Lincoln Northeast at Grand Island Friday night in a Class A showdown. Holdrege at Lexington Friday night in a battle of Class B powers and Adams at Odell in an eight-man showdown.

Grand Island and Lexington are seen as upset winners and Adams, No. 1 in eight-man, is the choice in its Homesteader Conference contest.

Other strong upset possibilities are Beatrice over York and Hastings over Norfolk.

In games involving Lincoln teams this weekend, it's:

North Platte (4-2-1) v. Lincoln High (0-7), Friday night Seacrest Field — this could be a much closer matchup than one might expect. North Platte almost has as difficult time as the Links putting the ball in the end zone.

Lincoln Northeast (6-0-1) at Grand Island (6-1), Friday night — A crucial game for both teams' state playoff hopes. The Rockets seem to have lost some of the edge they possessed two weeks ago and the Islanders are running in high gear. Grand Island the choice, playing at home being the difference.

Lincoln Southeast (3-4) at Millard (1-5-1), Friday night — The Knights have to be the best losing team in the entire state. At least a win here will boost them to .500.

Papillion (5-2) v. Lincoln East (6-0-2), Saturday night, Seacrest Field — Remember last year at this time up in Papillion? The Spartans struggled to a 6-0 win against a much weaker Papillion team. That should be enough incentive to avoid a repeat.

Huskers Remain Fourth

From The News Wires

Ohio State maintained its lead over Oklahoma in both The Associated Press and United Press International college football ratings Tuesday while Colorado became the only newcomer to crack the top ten.

In the UPI ratings, Alabama, 5-1, switched places with Texas A & M for fifth and sixth places, respectively. The move came when Alabama made up a 105-point deficit to overcome the Aggies by one point after A & M struggled to a 14-6 win over winless TCU.

Colorado's invasion of the top ten came by virtue of a 31-20 win over Missouri, which was ranked 10th in both pools last week. Colorado is 5-1, with that one loss a one-point defeat by Oklahoma.

Nebraska, ranked fourth, will meet the Buffaloes in Lincoln this Saturday. It will be the third conference game for both teams.

The top ten in both polls, with the exception of the switch of Alabama and Texas A & M, includes Ohio State, Oklahoma, Southern California, Nebraska, Michigan, Texas, Penn St. and Colorado.

The AP poll has arizona St. 11th, followed by Florida, Arizona, Notre Dame, Missouri, Michigan St., Pittsburgh, Maryland, UCLA and South Carolina.

The Associated Press UPI poll has a few switches in the last five, and added San Diego St. and Miami of Ohio while leaving out Michigan St. and South Carolina.

Sox Earn Cincinnati Accolades

BOSTON (UPI) — "If this ain't the number one pastime, I don't know what is!" beamed Pete Rose in the gloom of the losing Cincinnati Reds dressing room.

The Reds had just been beaten 7-6 by the Boston Red Sox in one of the most dramatic World Series games in history, but Rose couldn't have been more excited.

"My God, you couldn't have more exciting things than that," said Rose, referring to Carlton Fisk's game-winning homer off the foul pole leading off the 12th, Bernie Carbo's game-tying three-run homer in the eighth and Dwight Evans' game-saving catch in the 11th.

"I know they say that Evans is good," said Rose, "but if that catch of his is any indication of just how good he is, well I hope I never hit another ball to right field."

Reds Manager Sparky Anderson was even more emphatic about Evans' sensational one-handed catch and the subsequent doubling-up throw on Ken Griffey that bailed the Red Sox out of a tight jam in the 11th.

'Gimmick' Plays Possible In Colorado-Nebraska Matchup

SPORTS SIGNALS

By Bob Owens
Star Sports Editor

Gimmick Plays Possible

It's entirely possible the fans Saturday in Nebraska's Memorial Stadium will be treated to some "gimmick" plays by both the Cornhuskers and Colorado.

"This is possible," Coach Tom Osborne of the Huskers said after Tuesday's workout in preparation for the talented Buffaloes. "Particularly in a game where there is no apparent edge in personnel you might see each team have two or three 'gimmick' plays.

"You can't expect to win with gimmicks, but you might get an edge or a big play that will enable you to win the game. Then again the opportunity may never present itself to use those kind of plays. You can gimmick yourself to death."

An example of a so-called gimmick play would be the "halfback-to-the-quarterback pass" which enabled Nebraska to score a touchdown last season against Oklahoma.

Another might be the "lateral pass-quick kick" play which backfired on Indiana and enabled the Huskers to pick up an easy touchdown against the Hoosiers.

Nebraska pulled a couple out of the hat for good yardage against Oklahoma State last Saturday. The first one gained 19 yards to the OSU four to set up the second NU touchdown. It's called "fake 21, iso sweep, quarterback keep." The other was the old end-around for 13 yards by Bobby Thomas to set up the first touchdown.

Colorado Offense 'Robust'

Colorado coach Bill Mallory runs a basic "I" formation much like Nebraska, but the Buffaloes go into a full-house backfield in short yardage situations. That means the backs line up almost like they did in the old split-T formation.

Mallory calls it his "robust" formation, a name he got from Ohio State coach Woody Hayes, who uses that alignment quite often.

"It's a little bit like the wishbone in that there are four backs who can carry the ball and there is an extra blocker," Osborne explained. "It's a great play for fullbacks in that there are two halfbacks blocking for the fullback."

Osborne recalled that when Nebraska used the formation several years ago, fullback Frank Solich, now Southeast coach, was the leading Husker ball carrier. This year, Colorado's top rusher is fullback Terry Kunz.

"The robust set definitely helps us," Kunz said after he averaged 5.7 yards on 23 carries in the opener against California. "We're able to run outside better with it because it gives us another halfback to block.

"I like it because it's the only formation off of which we run my favorite play, a play on which I take two steps laterally and then cut up through tackle. We can't run it out of the 'I' because we don't have the extra blocker you need on the end."

Not Easy To Prepare For NU

While Colorado's robust formation and 'I' formation plays make it difficult for an opposing defense to get ready for the Buffaloes, Nebraska's ofense isn't exactly simple for opponents to prepare to face the Huskers.

"Most people who play us feel there's a lot of preparation for them," Osborne said. "We throw the ball a lot of different ways. It isn't a matter of saying you've got to stop two or three plays like you can do against some teams."

Osborne pointed out that there are two theories of offense. "One is to run a few plays and run them over and over until you do them so well you can't stop them, the other is to do a lot of things," he said. "We're more of the multiple offense approach."

Osborne pointed out there are a lot of plays that the Huskers are able to run only once or twice a day in getting ready for a game, but he also said they never use a play they haven't worked on during the week. The Huskers, obviously, pick out certain plays to fit a game plan and work on them rather than trying to go through all the plays in the playbook.

Nebraska runs many different sets from its "I" formation and also has what is called the "spread" formation which looks like a double-wing alignment. Last week at Oklahoma State, the Huskers added the "power-I" to their repertoire. That certainly gave Colorado something new to work on this week.

What will be new this week? Only Osborne, his assistant coaches and the players know and they aren't telling, but you can bet they'll have some tricks ready. Whether they use them will depend on what Colorado does defensively. Ditto for the Buffaloes. That should make for a very intersting football game.

It's Sin To Let Them Play

Former Cornhusker assistant Jim Walden, who now is Miami's defensive coordinator, had some observations about Colorado after the Buffaloes stopped the Hurricanes 23-10.

"We were fighting a Colorado bunch that was so big it's a sin to let them play," Walden commented. "They four-yard you to death. But we stopped them and got a little momentum, and what happens? They get a bloop single to right field and it ends up a home run."

Walden referred to a CU punt that was sliced to the right, out of the reach of Miami's return men. "Then it's crunch, crunch, crunch and we don't have the physical strength to keep them out of the end zone."

Norm Bulaich, who plays for the Miami Dolphins, watched the Hurricanes and Colorado and commented, "I'd sure like to run behind that line."

The Buffs are directed by senior David Williams, who Osborne said is "the best quarterback we've faced so far this year." He said Williams has speed, size and is a good thrower. "He can do so many things well."

The Huskers worked out about two hours Tuesday in pads. Senior defensive end Dave Redding missed practice with strained knee ligaments and sophomore wingback Curtis Craig was out with a bruised knee.

Osborne said Craig jogged a little and probably will be able to practice Wednesday.

Quick Action 'Surprised' Feeder

Omaha (UPI) — The chairman of the American Beef Packers, Inc., creditors committee testified Tuesday the quick action ABP took on a nearly $70,000 livestock purchase from his company "surprised hell out of me."

William Chapman, owner of Chapman Cattle Co., of Omaha, and his head bookkeeper, Mrs. Roselle E. Calmes, unraveled a dramatic last minute chain of events in which the two tried desperately to preserve Chapman's livestock as well as his check, but to no avail, as ABP filed limited bankruptcy on Jan. 7.

Chapman, later named to head the 11-member unsecured creditors committee, testified he sold 150 head of cattle from a Sidney feedlot to ABP for its Fort Morgan, Colo., plant on Jan. 3.

Chapman said a truck carrier, contracted by ABP, picked up the cattle on Jan. 6 and took the load to Fort Morgan where it was slaughtered on the same day.

5-10 Days Normal

Chapman said it normally took from five to 10 days from the date of sale until the date of delivery to a packing plant. When asked by the government about the quickness of the sale and slaughter, Chapman said "it surprised hell out of me."

After he had sold the cattle, Chapman said he made various inquiries about whether ABP was "solvent" and upon receivng answers to his question, called the Sidney feedlot manager.

Chapman said he instructed the feedlot manager on Jan. 6 to telephone the Fort Morgan plant to find out if Chapman's check was in the mail.

Chapman dispatched the feedlot manager 80 miles from Sidney to Fort Morgan to pick up the check and return it to Sidney. There, Chapman said a pilot contracted by his company, returned the check to Omaha.

On Jan. 7, Chapman and Mrs. Calmes testified the pilot took Mrs. Calmes and the check to Detroit, Mich., in an attempt to cash it at the Michigan National Bank upon which it was drawn.

Mrs. Calmes of Bellevue said she was informed by bank officials they "couldn't cash the check for me" because there was no money in the ABP account. Mrs. Calmes returned with the $69,417.64 check to Omaha.

When asked if he had ever been paid, Chapman said, "No, there would be a lot of people mad if I had."

The government called 12 witnesses Tuesday to further allege Frank R. West, ABP board chairman and president, Robert E. Lee, ABP group vice president-cattle procurement, ABP and its wholly owned subsidiary Beefland International Inc., of Council Bluffs, Iowa, engaged in an alleged scheme to defraud creditors.

Tuesday was the first day livestock feeders, who are owed more than $21 million by ABP, were called to testify.

Among the charges contained in the 105 count indictment handed down by a federal grand jury were 29 counts of interstate transportation of stolen or otherwise fraudently obtained property and 32 counts of wire fraud, which the government contends includes using the wires to stop payment of checks.

While Chapman testified his cattle were taken to Colorado, other livestock feeders from Nebraska testified their cattle, purchased on Jan. 3, were taken to the Beefland plant in Council Bluffs, Iowa.

Asked For Tags

Chapman further testified he asked the plant manager at Fort Morgan to place identification tags on the sides of his butchered cattle so he could trace them.

Chapman said he emphasized "several times in the strongest language I could and still do it nicely" that he wanted the identification done. However, Chapman said the plant manager told him he had called ABP's Omaha headquarters "and the attorneys advised him he didn't have to do it."

The beef was subsequently shipped from Fort Morgan, and Chapman said he had no idea of the destination.

Francis Chvatal, a Morse Bluff farmer and cattle feeder, testified an ABP buyer purchased 35 head of cattle from him on Jan. 4 for $14,019 and picked the load up on Jan. 5 when it was taken to Beefland. Chvatal said he never did receive a payment check.

Rudy Meduna, a Colon farmer and cattle feeder, said he sold 90 head of cattle to ABP for $40,821.84, on Jan. 4. His ABP cattle buyer picked up the check, written on the Seattle First National Bank, of Seattle, Wash., on Jan. 6 and took it to the South Omaha Production Credit Association.

Meduna said it was customary for the ABP buyer to do this because of problems Meduna had experienced with ABP. Meduna said the check later bounced.

A Seattle First National Bank official has testified previously that on Jan. 3 ABP called him and told him not to honor checks.

When asked if he had received any money for his cattle, Meduna said, "not a red cent."

ABP Paid More

However, under defense questioning, he said the price paid by ABP was about $1 per hundredweight higher than the offer he had received from two other packers.

Other livestock feeders testifying they sold cattle to ABP for Beefland but never received payment were Bery L. Rex Weber of McCool Junction and Emery C. Hansen of Weeping Water.

At times, the defense contended the orders for the cattle in question were actually made in mid-December, but the livestock wasn't picked up until early January.

Fettin Co. Bid Low

Fettin Roofing Co. of Lincoln, with a bid of $33,213, was the apparent low bidder Tuesday for roof repair on the former law building of the University of Nebraska-Lincoln campus.

Colombia Issues New Banknotes

Bogota, Colombia (UPI)—The Colombian Central Bank has just put new 200-peso bills into circulation. Worth about six U.S. dollars, the banknote is the biggest in Colombia at present. It carries a picture of South American liberator Simon Bolivar on the front and a coffee picker on the back.

Bills of 500 pesos, about 16 U.S. dollars, were in circulation until recently. When bank robbers took a pile of them in a holdup in Santa Marta on the Caribbean coast, the government withdrew the denomination from circulation to prevent the robbers from using the stolen money.

FOOTBALL

Alabama will play in the Sugar Bowl if unbeaten the rest of the season, the Nashville Banner reported Tuesday. The article, written by Fred Russell, a long-time friend of Bear Bryant, said, "Bear Bryant has excluded the Orange Bowl from his hopes and plans, if ever he did entertain the idea of playing Oklahoma there for what might have been a piece of the national championship."

Alabama All-American end Leroy Cook was named The Associated Press College Lineman of the Week for his performance against Tennessee. Cook has 11 tackles, including a sack of Vols quarterback Randy Wallace for a 10-yard loss on the last play of the game.

The committee to name Iowa State University's new football stadium after Jack Trice has disbanded. The members of the group felt the efforts were no longer needed and "perhaps harmful." Trice was an early black football player for Iowa State who died after being trampled by Minnesota players in a 1923 game in Minneapolis.

Attendance is a clouded issue for the World Football League. The only clear thing about it is that if it (attendance) isn't up, some of the teams may go under. The Hawaiians lost four players including both of their quarterbacks after a dispute over cutting salaries to cut costs.

The Charlotte Hornets' general manager Upton Bell is talking about moving the team if attendance isn't around 14,000-16,000 for each of its last five home games. In Portland, the attendance averages under 8,000 even with a ticket price cut. Philadelphia, though, is having the most acute attendance problems. The average there is about 3,500 but last week's game drew just 1,293 fans.

And in San Antonio, a group of local businessmen were attempting to round up $350,000 in pledges to keep the San Antonio Wings in business for the rest of the 1975 WFL season.

BASKETBALL

The Kansas City Kings put Rick Adelman on waivers to cut their squad to the 12-man limit.

The Philadelphia 76ers cut Charles Cleveland, a third-round draft choice from the University of Alabama.

Happy Hairston, a forward in the NBA for the past 11 years was placed on waivers by the Los Angeles Lakers. Hairston was the NBA's sixth leading rebounder last year and averaged 10.3 points per game.

OTHER SPORTS

Willie Davis, a 35-year-old veteran of 15 seasons in the major leagues has been sent to the San Diego Padres, his fifth team in less than two years, for outfielder Dick Sharon.

Charles Rupert, executive vice president of the San Francisco Giants, denied that the Giants owners are nearing an agreement to move the franchise to Toronto.

The National Hockey League officially confirmed an eight-game series against two teams from the Soviet Union. Unlike the Team Canada set-up of 1972, when an all-star team played against the Russians, this series will match the Philadelphia Flyers, 1975 Stanley Cup Champions against the top Russian army teams, starting Jan. 11. The Russians will then tour the NHL clubs.

Wajima, one of the top U.S. three-year-olds, will run in the Washington, D.C., International on Nov. 8 at Laurel Race Course, as his final race before retirement.

Chris Evert swamped Rosmary Casals, 6-0, 6-1 to gain a finals berth in the women's singles at the World Invitational Tennis classic.

Rubin "Hurricane" Carter's attorney filed a petition with New Jersey Governor Brendan Byrne seeking executive clemency for his client.

Boston's Lynn Leads All-Stars

NEW YORK (AP) — Super rookie Fred Lynn of the Boston Red Sox continued his collection of laurels, leading The Associated Press' 5 1975 Major League All-Star baseball team.

The centerfielder who led the American League in runs scored, doubles and slugging percentage, also picked up the most votes from a nationwide panel of sports writers and broadcasters.

Lynn, who batted .331, second highest in the AL, and was third in the league in runs batted in with 105, polled 389 votes. The closest to the Red Sox slugger was second baseman Joe Morgan of the Cincinnati Reds, who received 320.

Joining Lynn in the outfield were Greg Luzinski of the Philadelphia Phillies, the National League's RBI champion, and Reggie Jackson of the Oakland A's.

Besides Morgan, the infield is composed of first baseman George Scott of the Milwaukee Brewers, third baseman Bill Madlock of the Chicago Cubs and shortstop Larry Bowa of the Philadelphia Phillies.

Baltimore's Jim Palmer was named the team's right-handed pitcher, outdueling Tom Seaver of the New York Mets, 179 votes to 157. Catfish Hunter of the New York Yankees finished a distant third.

Randy Jones of the San Diego Padres polled 163 votes to grab the left-handed pitching spot, beating out Vida Blue of Oakland, who finished with 103.

Cincinnati's Johnny Bench easily captured the catching spot, getting 265 votes to 87 for runner-up Ted Simmons of the St. Louis Cardinals.

Only Bench and Jackson are repeaters from last year.

Bowa had the second closest fight, beating out Dave Concepcion of Cincinnati 165-134. Bowa batted .305 and scored 79 runs.

Besides the pitchers, only three members of The AP team batted under .300—Jackson, Scott and Bench. But Jackson and Scott tied for the AL home run champion with 36 apiece, while Bench was second to Luzinski in RBIs in the NL with 110. Luzinski drove in 121 runs and hit 34 homers.

Scott also paced the junior circuit in total bases with 318 and in RBIs with 109. Jackson was second in the AL in doubles with 39, third in total bases and fourth in RBIs. Steve Garvey of Los Angeles, the 1974 National League Most Valuable Player, was runner-up to Scott at first base, some 49 votes behind Scott.

Lynn's greatest day came on June 18 when, against the Detroit Tigers, he collected five hits, including three homers, and knocked in 10 runs. He finished the season leading the league in runs with 103, doubles with 47 and slugging percentage with .566.

Madlock captured the NL batting title with .354 and finished far ahead of Cincinnati's Pete Rose, 320 votes to 93. Morgan, who crushed Rod Carew, the major's leading hitter, 320 to 98 in the balloting, had an outstanding season. He was fourth in the NL in hitting with .327, third in runs scored with 107 and second in stolen bases with 68.

Palmer and Jones held identical distinctions: they both posted the lowest earned run averages in their respective leagues among starting pitchers.

Palmer, 23-11, struck out 193 and threw 10 shutouts while coming up with an ERA of 2.09. His 23 victories tied him with Hunter for the AL high. Jones had a 2.24 ERA en route to a 20-12 season, striking out 103 while walking only 56.

There was no contest in the outfield, either. After Lynn's 389 votes, Luzinski polled 289 and Jackson had 220. The next highest was Dave Parker of the Pittsburgh Pirates with 97. Another Boston rookie, Jim Rice, was fifth with 71 votes.

Record Broken

Lake McConaughy — Dom Contratto of Oshkosh finally brought the Nebraska state striped bass record back to Nebraska Monday with a 25-pound, one ounce striper caught Monday.

Contratto's fish measured 37¾ in length and 24¾ in girth. It topped the former record of 23-4 caught by Coloradoan Les Williams on Oct. 5. Contratto was using a chub for bait.

"This was my biggest thrill ever, no doubt about that," said Contratto, who had landed a 30-pound king salmon Aug. 29. "We started to land him and our net looked like one you'd dip minnows with."

It was the fourth time the state striper record had been bettered this fall. Contratto was fishing with Jack Jacobs.

Brown Signs Nuggett Pact

DENVER (AP)—Roger Brown, a 6-foot-11 free agent from Kansas, signed a contract with the Denver Nuggets of the American Basketball Association on Tuesday.

A team spokesman said Brown will be on the roster for the Nuggets Friday night.

Trans-Neb. Champion Meets Set

Sports enthusiasts in the Capital City could have a difficult time deciding what to do Wednesday.

Trans-Nebraska championships will be decided in three different sports at three different sites.

Lincoln Northeast will host the Trans volleyball championship with matches beginning at noon.

Top-seeded East High (10-1) faces Hastings (0-10) in the first match with the winner advancing to the 3:30 p.m. semifinals against host Northeast (5-4).

At 12:45 p.m., a rematch of last week's city championship is scheduled with third-seeded Lincoln High (9-3), the defending conference champion, meeting Southeast (4-5).

The Links won the city title last week, 15-10, 15-17 and 15-8 over Southeast after the Knights upset East in the first round.

Grand Island (3-6) and second-seed North Platte (9-2) will end the first session with a 1:30 p.m. match and the winner meeting the Lincoln High-Southeast winner at 4:15 p.m.

The consolation finals are scheduled for 7 p.m. with finals following.

At Lincoln High, boys gymnastics competition is scheduled to begin at 6 p.m. with two events running simultaneously.

North Platte, the defending champion figures as the team favorite with a tight all-around battle expected.

Southeast will host the girls' swimming championships beginning with diving preliminaries at 4 p.m.

The swimming prelims will follow the diving, with finals scheduled for 7 p.m.

East High, the defending champion, is again favored, but outstanding individual performances are expected from Lincoln High's Barb Harris, Grand Island's Melanie Jacobs and East's Kris Funk.

FWAA Names Owens

Cedar Rapids, Ia. — Bob Owens, sports editor of The Lincoln Star, has been named a member of the 1975 All-America selection committee of the Football Writers Association of America.

Gus Schrader, sports editor of The Cedar Rapids-Gazette and preaident of the FWAA, said the committee will meet in Chicago Dec. 1 to make the final selections.

Members of the FWAA will receive a ballot early in November with names of players nominated by the committee, with the assistance of head football coaches in each area of the country.

The committee and the areas they will cover:

East — Joe Concannon, Boston Globe; Atlantic Coast — Jennings Culley, Richmond News-Leader; South — Alf Van Hoose, Birmingham News; Southwest — Orville Henry, Arkansas Gazette; Midlands — Owens; Midwest — John Bansch, Indianapolis Star; Rockies — Regis McAuley, Tucson Daily Citizen; Pacific Coast — Loel Schrader, Long Beach Independent Press-Telegram.

Action shots of the players selected will be assembled for a highlight film which will be shown on national television, sponsored by Chevrolet, which is financing the project for the FWAA.

RATINGS

by Randy York
Prep Sports Editor

In November, the Nebraska School Activities Assn. (NSAA) will select four teams in each of six classes to determine six state championships by playoffs. The Sunday Journal and Star computer has rated the present district leaders and contenders on the NSAA playoff formula.

Class C-1

1—Wahoo Neumann (6-1)
2—Plainview (7-0)
3—Centennial (4-1-1)
4—Battle Creek (7-0)
5—Oshkosh (6-1)
6—Omaha Holy Name (4-2-1)
7—Fremont Bergan (5-2)
8—Norfolk Catholic (6-0)
9—Gibbon (6-0)
10—Bennington (7-0)

Comment — No. 2 Plainview faces a major test Friday night, hosting Class B O'Neill (4-2-1). Fremont Bergan posted division's most impressive win last week, a 35-0 handling of Class B David City Aquinas.

Class C-2

1—Scribner (7-0)
2—Grant (6-1)
3—Friend (5-0-2)
4—Cambridge (7-0)
5—Henderson (4-0-3)
6—Alma (7-0)
7—Neb. City Lourdes (6-0-1)
8—Pleasanton (7-0)
9—Republican Valley (5-1)
10—Walthill (5-2)

Comment — Scribner regains top spot after Grant's 6-0 struggle against North Platte St. Pat's. O'Neill St. Mary's exist from top 10 following lopsided loss to three-time loser Bassett. That creates room for Walthill to make first ratings appearance.

Class D

1—Alliance St. Agnes (7-0)
2—Nelson (6-0-1)
3—Lawrence (6-1)
4—Loomis (7-0)
5—Callaway (7-0)
6—Homer (6-0)
7—Fairmont (5-1)
8—Oxford (5-2)
9—Falls City SH (4-1-1)
10—Wolbach (5-1)

Comment — Alliance St. Agnes enhanced its No. 1 status with 14-5 triumph over five-time Class C winner Hay Springs. No. 6 Homer plays at Class C-2's No. 10 Walthill Wednesday night in key matchup for both teams.

Eight-Man

1—Adams (7-0)
2—Elgin (7-0)
3—Ruskin (7-0)
4—Shelby (7-0)

Grain Fed Safely Despite Aflatoxin

By ERIC KRAMER
Associated Press Writer

A U.S. Department of Agriculture researcher says he has fed cattle 50 times the amount of aflatoxin currently allowed by Food and Drug Administration officials with no ill effects.

Aflatoxin, listed as a cancer-causing substance, has caused a scare in recent days among farmers and elevator operators in Iowa, Kansas, Missouri and Nebraska.

Alex Keyl, in a telephone interview from his home in Athens, Ga., said he gace 100 yearlings feed with 1,000 parts per billion aflatoxin without producing ill effects.

Many elevators have stopped accepting corn which glowed under an ultraviolet or "black" light for fear it contained aflatoxin.

Keyl said, "That's ridiculous. That's absolutely ridiculous."

The Food and Drug Administration prohibits interstate shipment of grain containing more than 20 parts per billion of aflatoxins.

Ken Pohlman of A&L Midwest Agricultural Laboratories in Omaha said his lab examined seven samples of Nebraska corn which glowed under a black light and found no measurable amount of aflatoxin.

Bob Anderson of the Nebraska Grain Dealers Association said Tests on three Nebraska corn samples taken to the U.S. Department of Agriculture lab in Omaha showed two samples above 15 parts per billion and one below. He said the USDA lab used 15 parts per billion as the limit because its tests had a five parts per billion margin of error.

University of Nebraska researchers said their tests would not be completed until Wednesday.

Keyl said aflatoxin showed up in only one of the 100 experimental cattle. He said the aflatoxin was in the liver of the cow and disappeared shortly after the animal was taken off the aflatoxin feed.

James A. Adamson, deputy regional director of the Food and Drug Administration, said the FDA had no way to precent farmers from feeding grain containing aflatoxin to cattle. He said the U.S. Department of Agriculture lab in Omaha would perform tests for $10.85 each to determine the level of aflatoxin in a sample of grain.

The government test could free the corn to move in interstate commerce, but the FDA said it would get a copy of any lab test which showed grain containing more than 20 parts per billion of aflatoxin.

Adamson, who said he knows of no positive proof of aflatoxins in Midwest corn, said his agency could seize grain moving in interstate commerce if it contained high levels of the substance.

However, he said the FDA would not get the results of black light tests done by elevators.

Marv Sitorius, head of the plant industry division of the State Department of Agriculture, said his agency had the authority to stop farmers from selling or using grain which was found in a laboratory to have more than 20 parts per billion of aflatoxin.

However, Anderson said a farmer or elevator operator whose grain did not pass the lab test in Omaha could demand a more exact test at USDA facilities in Maryland.

A fourth or more of Nebraska's corn crop is usually used up on the farm without ever being sold or tested for aflatoxins.

As much as half crop often is fed to cattle in Nebraska without leaving the state.

David Wysong, a University of Nebraska plant pathologist, said aflatoxins were usually produced when grain was stored. He said aflatoxins can attack drought-stressed corn in the field under the right conditions. He said he knew of no treatment to prevent aflatoxins from forming in the field

Three Theaters Drop Weekday Movie Matinees

Three downtown Lincoln movie theaters, the State, the Cinema 1 and Cinema 2, have eliminated Monday through Friday matinee shows.

Manager Gene Bunrdorf said the three theaters now will be open for evening shows during the week, and all day on weekends and holidays.

Dave Livingston of the Douglas theaters said they also plan to drop matinees during the week, and schedule them only on weekends and holidays.

Spokesmen for the Stuart and Plaza theaters said they have no plans to eliminate matinees during the week.

Mass Honors Duke Ellington

NANCY, France (AP) — An ecumenical mass in memory of jazz band leader Duke Ellington was held during a jazz festival here.

Some 2,000 people attended the mass offered in a circus tent by the Rev. Guy de Fatto, a former professional jazz musician in France.

The choir was formed by the American "Stars of Faith" group led by the Rev. Isaac Douglas of Nashville, Tenn.

Kids Tag Tough Tony 'Our Friend' After Visit

By JIM CUNNINGHAM

The way he slashes and crashes and bolts and jolts his way around a football field, it's no wonder that Tony Davis has been the subject of some unique descriptions.

During his slam-bang grid career, he's been variously referred to as "Tony the Terror", "The Tecumseh Tornado" and, most famously no doubt, "Tough Tony."

Last Friday, prior to departing for Stillwater, Okla. and a confrontation with some hostile Oklahoma State Cowboys, "Tough Tony" received another title. This one was the result of activity away from the gridiron.

The title was bestowed by the 70 students who attend Lincoln's Hayward School. The NU Star entered the school as Tony Davis, football player. He left an hour later as Tony Davis, "Our Friend."

Hayward School, located a short distance from Memorial Stadium, is the home of Training for Occupational Proficiency, a program for mentally retarded young people, ages 13-18. Friday was Tony Davis Day at the school and the Husker's visit marked a special occasion out of which a special relationship grew.

At a full school assembly, Davis patiently and explicitly answered questions for perhaps 20 minutes before the effect of Tough Tony's presence was suddenly but clearly expressed.

He's My Friend

A young, mongoloid girl, 14-year old Jill, spontaneously jumped up among her schoolmates and chirped: "Tony Davis is the best football player and he's my friend."

With that, the entire group clapped and cheered in agreement.

Davis' visit also included an autograph session. Every student wanted one. Some got two. Davis signed the school's two footballs. He even autographed the underside of a pet turtle.

Posters had been prepared, saluting the Big Red fullback and Nebraska football in general. Most of the signs were mounted on the gymnasium walls but one received special attention. It was made by 15-year old Mark.

Mark was on the building's second floor when Davis arrived but spotted the gridder from the stairway.

"Hey Tough Tony," he yelled charging down the steps. "I've got something for you."

He presented Davis with his poster and recited its message: "Tony Davis, I trust you to win for Nebraska."

Remarkable Ability

Davis earned the new friendship tag. He took charge of the affair and showed a remarkable ability to understand the gist of the many questions asked of him. In turn, his questioners showed a keen knowledge of football.

"Are you going to play pro football," one youngster asked.

"I sure would like to," Davis replied.

"How come you don't wear stripes anymore?"

"We changed uniforms this year," Davis explained. "We now wear what are called mesh jerseys. They're cooler. The other jerseys were just too hot."

"Which is the best football team in the whole United States?"

"I think Nebraska is."

That answer brought a round of cheers.

Hayward students are trained in vocational skills so it wasn't unusual for one youngster to ask: "Tony Davis, do you have a boss?"

Tony's Boss

"Oh yes, I sure do. His name is Tom Osborne and he's over at that big stadium, not too far from here."

"What position do you play?"

"I play fullback. Do you know what a fullback is?"

Some nodded affirmatively. Others weren't so sure.

"A fullback runs with the ball, but he also does more blocking. Do you know what blocking is?"

Again the reactions varied.

"Blocking is when you run into someone real hard."

Not all responses came in the form of questions. Another student had a more personal observation.

"I bet Tony Davis is embarrassed to have all of those muscles under his shirt," the young man whispered to his teacher. "I bet he never takes his shirt off."

Davis, whose sister Jeannine teaches special education in New Jersey, exhibited a special sensitivity, different from the physical toughness he shows on the field.

"This is the kind of situation that makes you realize just how many gifts you have and that you have to use those gifts in the best possible way," he said after signing his name over and over.

"These kids really have a lot of love to share and they want to spread it around. I think it's important to show them that you care."

While Davis has become famous for the impact he can create on the playing field, he can also make an impact off the field.

Twenty minutes after the assembly had ended and Tony had gone, it was discovered that 14-year old Julie, a sensitive mongoloid lass, was not in her classroom.

She was quickly located, when found she was clutching her Tony Davis autograph and crying. An instructor asked her why.

"I'm just so happy, I can't stop," she replied.

That's what having a friend can mean.

Hole-In-One

Jack Herbert scored a hole-in-one Wednesday on the 157-yard eighth hole at Hillcrest Country Club. He used a four iron. Witnesses were L. C. Jones, Les Hein, Duane Larson and Clarence Krueger.

Aaron Slated At Brandeis

Home run king Hank Aaron will make a short autograph public appearance at Brandeis Wednesday.

Baseball's alltime home run hitter will hold a news conference upon his arrival in the Capital City, then be in the TV department at Brandeis to meet the public for one hour — through the lunch hour — from 11:45 to 12:45 p.m.

Nebraska Defense Stumbles

Mission, Kan. — Nebraska slipped a bit in the football statistics for this week. Previously second in total defense, Nebraska's meeting with Oklahoma State dropped the Huskers to fourth.

Navy and Alabama moved ahead of Nebraska in the total defensive statistics.

Still in the No. 1 spot is Texas A&M, which is also on the top of the rushing defense list. According to charts from the NCAA Statistics Service, the College Station, Tex. crew has been consistently in the lead in defensive figures.

This is the fifth time in six weeks A&M has been the total defense leader and the fourth straight week coach Emory Bellard's team has been No. 1 in rushing defense.

The Aggies are yielding 169.0 total yards a game and only 62.8 rushing yards an outing.

Most of Texas A&M's defensive unit has been together for a long time, some as long as four years — since 1972, the first year of the freshman-eligible rule.

Georgia Tech retained its lead in rushing offense (395.2) and took over the top spot in total offense (442.5).

Texas stayed on top in scoring, averaging 36.3 points a game. The Longhorns have scored 218 points in six games, one more than Alabama and two more than Ohio State.

San Diego State stayed atop the passing offense category for the fifth straight week. The Aztecs are averaging 291.0 aerial yards a game.

East's Watters Wins Award

By RANDY YORK
Prep Sports Editor

Lincoln East quarterback Dave Watters' mastery of the two-minute drill earns the Spartan senior co-captain the Sunday Journal and Star's prep Player of the Week award.

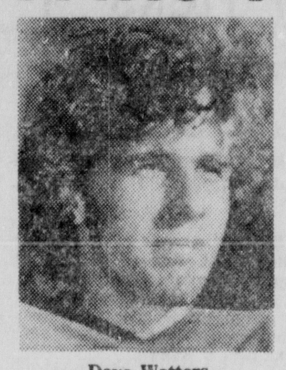
With East trailing Lincoln Southeast 7-6 last week, Watters got his last offensive opportunity on his own seven-yard line with 1:37 remaining in the game.

Watters promptly hit seven of eight passes for 91 yards, including a 26-yard touchdown strike with 23 seconds remaining, to give third-ranked East a 12-7 victory.

Watters finished with 16 completions in 27 attempts for 169 yards and a touchdown. He rushed 17 times for 40 yards and scored East's other touchdown.

Others who will receive Player of the Week cards for outstanding performances last week include:

Don Miller, Minden — He caught a 34-yard touchdown pass with only four seconds remaining to transform a 14-13 deficit into a gigantic 20-14 upset win over previously unbeaten Ogallala. Miller also sprinted 23 yards for a first quarter touchdown to get things started for the Whippets, who had won only once in its previous six starts.



Dave Watters

Jeff Krejci, Schuyler — Quarterback hit 12 of 18 passes, iccluding touchdown strikes of 21 and 28 yards, ran for a third touchdown and threw a two-point conversion pass in team's 20-14 victory over Crete.

Tom Doggett, Lincoln Pius X — Senior I-back rushed for 180 yards and scored on runs of 11, 12, 54 and 57 yards in top-ranked Class B Thunderbolts' homecoming cruise past Council Bluffs St. Albert's.

Tim Wurth, Omaha Burke — Despite his team's one-point loss to powerful Omaha Westside, the state's leading Class A rusher accumulated 219 yards on 21 carries and scored two touchdowns.

Don Coleman, Gordon — Junior rushed for 116 yards on only 12 carries and scored three touchdowns — on a 70-yard run, a 33-yard pass and a 95-yard kickoff return — to give the Broncos a 28-27 Western Conference triumph over Sidney.

Bob Janda, St. Edward — Senior halfback, only 5-8 and 140 pounds, has rushed for 450 yards and scored seven touchdowns in team's last two games. Last week's touchdowns against Cedar Rapids came on runs of 18, 25 and 62 yards and an 85-yard punt return.

Lonnie Damme, Nemaha Valley — In a 34-14 homecoming win over Elmwood, this senior fullback converted from end rushed for 195 yards on nine carries, scored two touchdowns and had tackles totaling 23 yards in losses.

Ed Kohmetscher, Lawrence — In the first 15 minutes, he threw four scoring passes covering 11, 15, 16 and 50 yards as Class D-rated team dispatched Exeter, 27-0.

Pat Lierley, Lodgepole — Junior halfback (5-9, 147) rushed 28 times for 245 yards and scored five touchdowns on runs of 19, 29, 28, 45 and 6 yards in team's first win in seven games, 24-2, over Dix. He also participated in 11 tackles.

Mike Lee, Wheatland — Caught scoring passes of 38, 50 and 60 yards and tallied another touchdown on a three-yard run in team's lopsided win over Paxton.

Scott Freburg, Bertrand — Junior middle linebacker was credited with 14 solo tackles and two assists, intercepted a pass and ran for a touchdown against Beaver City.

Gary Ernst, Hastings St. Cecilia — Junior tailback rushed for 178 yards on 26 carries and scored three touchdowns (one on an 85-yard run) as Blue Hawks handled Geneva in surprisingly easy 33-8 fashion.

Bill Bruhn, Dawson-Verdon — Senior halfback rushed for 272 yards and six touchdowns (on runs of 40, 32, 50, 25, 8 and 4 yards) in eight-man team's 43-20 win at Table Rock.

Korey Brill, Bayard — Scored all three of team's touchdowns, one on an 83-yard fumble recovery, in Tigers' sixth straight win, 18-13 over Mitchell.

Rod Thayer, Wallace — Senior four-year starter was in on 20 tackles, knocked down two passes and caught a 40-yard pass to set up team's only touchdown in 6-6 tie against Maywood, assuring Wallace (4-1-1) its first winning season in more than a decade.

Greg Ericksen, Hampton — Senior end scored four touchdowns, three on passes of 30, 37 and 37 yards and one on a fumble recovery in the end zone, as Hawks downed Monroe, 50-22.

New F32 All Winter Radial

For A Firm Grip On Winter Without Studs

This is The Ice Radial Goodyear advertises on network TV. The Ice Radial that handles snow and slush, sleet and ice — without metal studs. One reason is a tread compound so flexible it keeps right on working when the weather hits zero. Another reason is Flexten cord — pound for pound, five times stronger than steel. Double Flexten cord belts and radial construction help keep the tread in firm, shoulder-to-shoulder contact on winter roads. For dependable performance in all kinds of weather, all season long, get the "F32 All Winter" radial. Act now and save.

Missouri General License Revoked

The Nebraska Insurance Department has revoked the license of Missouri General Insurance Co., Director E. Benjamin Nelson said Thursday.

He said Nebraskans insured with Missouri General should seek coverage elsewhere, because the company may not be able to pay claims sought since Sept. 12. The company was placed in receivership in Missouri in mid-September.

Nelson said policyholders who have claims against the company will be contacted by the Missouri Insurance Department. Policyholders who have any questions should contact the Nebraska Insurance Department, he said.

Maytag Reports Record Profits

Newton, Iowa (UPI) — The Maytag Co. reported a record high fiscal quarter, with sales and earnings surpassing those for the same period in 1974.

A company statement said sales for the three-month period that ended Sept. 30 totaled $69,878,683, an increase of 14% over sales in the same quarter last year.

Earnings for the period were $8,912,683, or 67 cents a share, compared to $5,822,891 for the same quarter in 1974.

Judge Asks Beefing Up Of Courtroom Security

Omaha (AP) — District Judge Rudolph Tesar has asked Douglas County Courthouse architects to provide better security for district courtrooms.

Tesar said he may have to start packing a gun in his briefcase if better security is not provided.

The judge said additional deputy sheriffs had to be summoned in a recent criminal case when spectators and relatives of a defendant in the courtroom became upset when the jury brought in a guilty verdict.

Tesar said he has handled three cases in the last year in which persons in the courtroom became upset and he felt that the judge and jurors were endangered.

Nes Latenser, president of Latenser and Sons, the architectural firm handling the remodeling job, said the work will include additional court security features.

More Cattle Being Fed

For the first time since December 1973, the number of cattle in Nebraska feedlots is higher than the comparable figure for the previous year.

Ron Radenz of the State-Federal Division of Agricultural Statistics said cattle feeders were beginning to place more cattle on feed, partly in response to a projected record corn crop. Oct. 1, 1974, and 20% more than Sept. 1, 1975.

On Oct. 1, there were 1.06 million cattle being fattened for slaughter. That is 2% more than

However, the figure was still 26% below the number of cattle in feedlots Oct. 1, 1973, when cattle prices began to take their disastrous dip.

Whear Elected As Sherman County Sheriff

Lincoln Star Special

Loup City — In a special recall election in Sherman County Tuesday, William F. Whear ousted incumbent Virgil Kaminski for the county sheriff's post.

County Clerk Murl J. Badura said the unoffocial count was 1,084 for Whear and 1,008 for Kaminski.

Approximately 75% of the voters in Sherman County turned out at the polls, the county clerk reported.

The recall election was the outgrowth of a petition drive conducted by a group of county residents who accused Kaminski of drinking while on duty, misconduct and showing partiality.

Kaminski, 45, was re-elected to the post last November in a write-in campaign, after losing out in the primary.

The 33-year-old Whear is the current police chief of Loup City, a position he has held since August 1974. Coming here from Omaha, he was employed with the Nebraska State Patrol from 1968 to 1972.

PSC Approves G. I. Bus Line Dropping Route

The Nebraska Public Service Commission has approved discontinuation of United Motorways Grand Island-Loup City-Boelus bus route.

The route became a major money loser after the establishment of minibus service in Loup City.

Despite voting for abandonment, commissioner Duane Gay said Monday the PSC should require higher bus rates to subsidise bus lines' marginal routes linking smaller Nebraska communities.

The decision had no effect on an application to discontinue routes from Grand Island to Ord and Broken Bow.

Ogallala School Bond Defeated

Lincoln Star Special

Ogallala — Incomplete returns late Tuesday night indicated the $5.5 million Ogallala junior-senior high school bond proposal was defeated, according to the Keith County clerk's office.

About 75% of the ballots were opposing the issue, it was reported.

New York (UPI) — You think the recession hurt you?

How about golfer Johnny Millers?

Miller, who pocketed $346,302 last year in PGA tour events, not counting a few extra bucks picked up in Pro-Ams, won "only" $226,118 on the 1975 tournament trail, some $120,184 less than in 1974.

That total left him in second place on the final money-won list to Jack Nicklaus, who cleared $298,149, according to the final PGA list released Tuesday.

In 1974, 276 players won money on the tour, with the low man pocketing $25. In 1975, the PGA coped with unemployment and inflation by having 296 players participate in tour events, with the low man winning $63.

'All's Fair . . .' Says Tackle

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — A Birmingham defensive tackle, Dick Trower, almost got by with dropping a penalty flag against Memphis in Birmingham's 21-0 World Fottball League victory Sunday.

Quarterback Danny White of Memphis was near the scrimmage line when he threw a long pass to Jim Kiick. An official was standing near White.

"I saw him go for the flag in his back pocket," Trower said, "but he didn't throw it. I was right beside him so I took it out of his pocket and looked around. I didn't think anyone was looking so I threw the flag myself."

Meanwhile, Kiick caught the ball on Birmingham's 8-yard line, and the confusion began.

Officials ran back upfield to find out why the flag had been dropped. The official whose flag was involved, rather than be embarrassed, started stating his case.

"Two or three Memphis players saw me get the flao out of the official's pocket, and they were ranting and raving," Trower said. "I told them we would do anything to win."

The confused official was overruled, Birmingham halted Memphis anyway and preserved the shutout.

U.S. Sweeps Pool Events, Four Golds In Wrestling

MEXICO CITY (UPI) — The United States won all six pools events Tuesday, scoring sweeps in three, as Rick Colella and Kathy Heddy became double gold medalists at the Pan American Games.

Over at the wrestling arena, with the freestyle finals coming to a conclusion, the United States had picked up four gold medals midway through the contest through Lloyd Keaser of Annapolis, Md., in the 149-pound division; Gregory Hicks of Santa Ana, Calif., in the 191-pound class; Ben Peterson of Comstock, Wisc., at 198 pounds and Michael McCready of Dubuque, Iowa, in the 202 pounds and over division.

The big event at the pool was the defeat of Ecuador's Jorge Delgado in the men's 200 meters butterfly by Greg Jagenburg of West Chester, Pa., in 2:03.42, with Steve Gregg of Wilmington, Del., taking the silver in 2:04.06.

Delgado, who won the event at the world championships in Cali, Colombia, three months ago, predicted after his 100 meter freestyle victory Sunday he would win the 200 butterfly, "because it is my best event." But Jagenburg, 19, swept to the front at the first turn and that was it for the University of Southern Illinois student. Delgado faded over the final lap to be passed by Gregg and the American team went wild.

Miss Heddy, 17, added the 400 meter individual medley title to the 200 individual medley she won earlier at the Games by coming from behind with a storming final freestyle leg to win by about a half length from Canada's Cheryl Gibson in 5:06.05.

Of the nine Americans who won world titles in Cali, Miss Heddy, of Summit, N.J., is one of just two to join the Games team. Jenni Franks of Wilmington, Del., won the bronze medal.

Colella, at 23 one of the old men on the team, added the 200 meters breaststroke title to the 100 he won Sunday, when he led from start to finish to win by four lengths from Canada's Dave Neinbach and Gustavo Lozano of Mexico.

Apart from the 200 butterfly, the U.S. also scored sweeps in the men's 400 meter freestyle and the women's 100 meter butterfly.

Dough Northway of Tucson, Ariz., won the freestyle from teammate Bobby Hackett, the pre race favorite, by about 2½ lengths in 4:00.51, while Cathy Wright of New Albany, Ind., won the butterfly by threequarters of a length from Peggy Tosdal of Dana Point, Calif., in 1:02.71.

In the men's 200 meter backstroke, Dan Harrigan of Mishawaka, Ind., led all the way to defeat Canada's Mike Scartg and teammate Robert Jackson of San Jose by three lengths in 2:06.69.

With six of the seven races completed in the yachting events, the U.S. was assured of victory in the Lightning and Snipe classes, while a pair of Brazilian sailors won the Flying Dutchman series.

Bruce and Pam Goldsmith of Chicago, with Paul Adams as crew, were the Lightning winners, while the team of Jeff Lenhart of San Diego and Dave Ullman of Laguna Beach, Calif., took the Snipe series.

Midland Takes Offense Lead

Wayne and Kearney — the state's best defensive teams met at Wayne and both team's averages rose. Midland had a runaway with Dana and vaulted into first place in the offense race. The Warriors had a total of more than 650 yards in the contest.

Kearney's Antelopes won the NCC title with a 3-0 mark. Midland has a 3-0 record in the NIAC with Doane and Concordia with 2-1 marks. Concordia goes to Midland Saturday.

In individual races, Rod Schultz, Hastings and Bob Squires, Hastings are leaders in passing and pass receiving respectively. Schultz has a wide margin in total offense while Dave Burke, Kearney remains as rushing leader and Duane Fritz, Chadron as punter champion.

Sooner Backs Sore

Oklahoma

Oklahoma had a better-than-usual Tuesday practice in its preparations for Saturday's Big Eight clash with Iowa State, according to head Coach Barry Switzer.

Switzer welcomed the return of No. 1 fullback Jim Littrell Tuesday, the first time Littrell had been back at full speed in two weeks.

Littrell returned just in time: Horace Ivory, who had been running in Littrell's place, was sidelined Tuesday and is not expected to play Saturday.

All-American halfback Joe Washington also is sidelined from practice with a bruised instep. He has been hampered for three weeks and has not been able to practice at full speed.

Offensive guard Terry Webb returned to practice Tuesday and is scheduled to start against the Cyclones.

Kansas State

With four starting offensive linemen out with injuries, it was back to basics Tuesday for Kansas State's football offense.

"We did a lot of fundamental work because of our young, and I mean young, and inexperienced offensive linemen," Coach Ellis Rainsberger said.

He elevated three freshmen and one sophomore to the offensive line to replace the four injured starters who may not make it to Missouri. And he had planned to redshirt the sophomore until next season, the coach said.

Also nursing bruises and soreness were quarterbacks Joe Hatcher and Tom Merrifield. Freshman Bob Suarez was moved up to the varsity behind them and may see action Saturday, Rainsberger said.

Missouri

Tony Galbreath's ankle acted up again Tuesday and the Missouri tailback missed the Tigers' football practice.

"Sunday his ankle was good, then he worked out Monday and it was sore Tuesday," Onofrio said. "It's still pretty much a day-to-day thing."

Iowa State

Iowa State football Coach Earle Bruce Tuesday elevated his two top freshmen running backs to the varsity as the Cyclones staged a two-hour drill.

They are preparing to face No. 2 rated Oklahoma Saturday at Norman.

Dexter Green, Woodbridge, Va., and Jeff Curry, Cincinati, Ohio, were brought up for trial shots and Bruce said both will make the trip Friday to Oklahoma City.

The two were impressive Monday as Iowa State's junior varsity romped to a 41-8 win against University of Nebraska at Omaha reserves. Green gained 219 yards rushing in nine carries while Curry carried the ball 13 times for 86 yards.

Sophomore quarterback Buddy Hardeman was held out of contact work for the second straight day and Bruce said his availability for the game against the Sooners is still uncertain.

Kansas

"We can't afford a mid-season slump," Kansas Coach Bud Moore said after Tuesday's football practice.

"We didn't look to sharp today though and we did not have a very good practice."

Moore said he wasn't worried about being last in the nation in passing offense.

"It's how effectively we throw and catch the ball that counts. Not how the other teams defend and how often we throw," he said. "We just need to make it count when we do throw."

Oklahoma State

Stillwater, Okla. (AP) — There were two new faces in the Oklahoma State starting lineups Tuesday as the Cowboys went through a two-hour practice in preparation for Saturday's Big Eight Conference game at Kansas.

Halfback Skip Taylor worked along side halfback Terry Miller, fullback Robert Turner and quarterback Scott Burk as the Pokes functioned out of the wishbone offense.

Taylor was given the promotion earlier in the week on the basis of his performance against Nebraska.

Defensively, linebacker Donnie Edwards was promoted to work with senior Brent Robinson.

Quarterback Charlie Weatherbie was dressed out in full pads, but took no part in the few drills held under full speed conditions.

"We're awfully beat up," said coach Jim Stanley. "We had four or five players having trouble practicing today."

"We're going to work like heck on the I formation this week," he said, "I think Kansas might use it more than the wishbone.

"As far as Nolan Cromwell is concerned, it doesn't make any difference what formation you run. He's probably the most dangerous option man in the league."

Stanley was concerned about his squad's physical condition, adding, "I hope we heal in a hurry. With the silly 48-man travel limit, we might have to practice people early in the week who won't even make the trip."

Penn St.-Pitt Tilt On National TV

NEW YORK (AP) — ABC-TV announced Tuesday the Nov. 22 game in Pittsburgh between Penn State and Pitt will be shown nationally as part of a college football television doubleheader.

G&P Sets Friday Agenda

Possible effects of the upcoming special legislative session on operations of the Game and Parks Commission is among items slated for discussion by the Commissioners at their Friday meeting.

The meeting will begin at 8:30 a.m. on the third floor of the agency's headquarters in Lincoln.

Other items on the agenda include discussion of the fire hazard associated with upcoming hunting seasons. The Commissioners will also deal with proposed land acquisitions, including Gifford Tract Land near Bellevue, and a tract along the Niobrara River in Cherry County.

The agenda includes the Commission's legislative program for 1976, discussion of a special bicentennial issue of NEBRASKAland Magazine, and the approval of names for several new wildlife areas in Deuel, Keith, Lincoln, Dawson, and Hall counties.

Dogs' Problems Caused By People

LOS ANGELES (AP) — "My master doesn't understand me." That's the most common complaint of William Campbell's patients — the German shepherds, Saint Bernards, fox terriers and even the poodles.

Campbell, sort of a dog psychiatrist, says most mental problems in dogs are caused by their owners.

"The dog is a great animal, but he needs to be better understood," Campbell said in a recent interview. "Normally, the dog has no problem. It's the people who have the problem."

Campbell, 45, who describes himself as a canine behavior specialist, is the president-elect of the American Society of Veterinary Ethology,

He sees all sorts of dog problems — house soiling, furniture chewing, nervousness, lack of self-esteem or even obesity.

"You can't change a dog's behavior without changing the dog owner in terms of how he relates to the dog," Campbell said.

Campbell said a main reason for dog problems is that owners treat them inconsistently, alternating lavish praise with punishment. He favors rewarding good deeds.

Campbell said hyperactive children can make a dog hyperactive, and marital stress can be communicated to the dog.

"Most dogs have a tendency to reduce tension by barking, chewing or digging, or all three," he said. "He can get a gastrointestinal upset or colitis if the tension isn't stopped. We try to find out what's causing tension and if you can relieve that, the symptoms disappear."

He said some problems are brought on by the canine "work ethic" or by a natural tendency of a dog to imitate his master.

"Dogs love to imitate people," he said. "If they see you blowing your nose, they'll do their best to imitate by tearing up the tissue or reeling off a whole roll of toilet paper."

ADC Or 'Prostitution'? Hearing Set

By WES ALBERS
Star Staff Writer

A U.S. District Court judge Tuesday declined to order Lincoln County authorities to begin aid to dependent children (ADC) payments to a 17-year-old girl who contends the director of public welfare has declared her eligible for them.

But Judge Robert Van Pelt set the matter for further hearing Oct. 31, saying there are "great social reasons" why welfare authorities should have resolved the girl's case earlier.

"Nothing pushes a mother into prostitution more easily than a delinquency in ADC payments," he said. "That's a great but brutal truth."

Van Pelt denied requests by the girl's attorneys that he issue a restraining order preventing a meeting between the girl and welfare authorities Wednesday and that he order ADC payments to begin Nov. 1.

The 17-year-old North Platte girl applied to the Lincoln County welfare board for ADC benefits, was declared ineligible and appealed her case to state welfare officials.

Alan Ihms, public welfare director, declared the girl eligible Sept. 8, but ADC payments were not begun.

Carroll Lucht, a Legal Aid Society lawyer representing the girl, told the court 43 days have passed since she was declared eligible, "a long delay sufficient to support a restraining order."

County authorities did not appeal Ihms' decision within the 30-day limit, thus depriving the girl of benefits without due process, he contended.

Lucht said $210 per month payments should have started Aug. 1 and payments for "substantial medical, hospital and doctor bills" incurred when she gave birth in September also were withheld.

He asked the court to order payments to be started by Nov. 1.

Ewald Warnsholz, Public Welfare Dept. general counsel, argued that county authorities withheld payments because they believed Ihms made his decision "without all the facts."

Warnsholz said the girl has returned from a Lincoln foster home to her parents' home in North Platte and so may not be eligible for payments.

The hearing between the girl and welfare authorities Wednesday will determine her eligibility, he said.

Van Pelt said he will "order payment promptly" if arguments at the Oct. 31 hearing indicate the girl still is being deprived of payments for which she is eligible.

Texas-Sized Tale Of Toad

Eastland, Tex. (UPI) — One of the more colorful tales of west Texas concerns a horned toad and the county courthouse built in 1897.

According to the tale, many citizens watched a young boy slip the toad into a box which was placed into the cornerstone of the courthouse when it was built. In 1928, 31 years later, the building was torn down and the box removed; and allegedly the toad was still alive enough to hop.

The frog became so famous it paid a visit to then-President Calvin Coolidge at the White House, but died a few months later of what was diagnosed as pneumonia. Its casket still remains in the new county courthouse.

Deer Jaw Cut Corn

New York (UPI) — Genuine Indian succotash was made with corn plus beans, peas or pumpkin, flavored with bear meat or peaches and squash or maple sugar. A recipe attributed to the Iroquois and published in Ottawa, Can., in 1916 directed the cook to cut the corn from the cob with half of a deer's jaw.

Board Closes Pershing Talks

By DICK HOLMAN
Star Staff Writer

Public discussion by the Southeast Nebraska Technical Community College (SeTech) Area Board on negotiations to acquire Pershing College lasted less than a minute Tuesday.

Gary Carstens of Beatrice, board facilities committee chairman, summarized: "There isn't anything of substance to report." He didn't elaborate.

Carstens added only that negotiations between SeTech and the University of Nebraska Foundation, which owns the defunct Beatrice campus, will continue.

The report came after the board interrupted its public meeting for a 20-minute closed session followed by a 15-minute recess to discuss Pershing and an SeTech faculty request for collective bargaining recognition.

Plan Not Finished

After the meeting, board attorney Doug Curry said the "possibilities" that the foundation would have a proposal ready Tuesday didn't materialize. The foundation executive committee met earlier Tuesday.

President Harry Haynie said the foundation committee took no new action. He reiterated that the "main decision" stands: To "maximize the revenue that can be obtained from the sale of the college." Empty four years after going bankrupt, the 69-acre Pershing has a value estimated at more than $2 million.

The SeTech board on a 7-4 vote last month authorized the talks to acquire the nine-year-old campus as a gift, to buy it for no more than $35,800, or to lease it. The action prompted a suit seeking to bar the board from ratifying any such agreement without the governor's and the Legislature's okay.

If accomplished, the board would phase out its Fairbury campus and move it to Pershing, a proposal which has produced a sustained wave of opposition.

Lincoln board member Kathy Brauer later in the meeting said, "I thin, we need to look into" the Fairbury student union building fund, for which $10 per student is still being collected.

She suggested the board "explore alternatives" to use the money, now totalling about $48,000, or to determine "how to get that back to the students who contributed" to the fund established 7½ years ago.

Would End Commitment

But G. Alan Dunlap said if the Fairbury campus stops collecting the fee, that would "end the commitment" to build a student union. First, he said, the future of the campus should be resolved.

In a related comment, Waverly board member Betty Schlaphoff said, apparently seriously, "It's been suggested" that SeTech "hire Peru (State College) to run our academic program."

In deliberations to close Fairbury, some board members objected to the heavy concentration of academic transfer courses offered versus few vocational-technical or occupational programs.

Not explaining who proposed the idea, Mrs. Schlaphoff said Peru would be paid on a per-pupil basis, using Peru faculty and administrators to "relieve us of this dilemma that we're always getting into." (She was one of the four who voted to oppose acquisition of Pershing.)

SeTech Board Sets $6.7 Million Budget

The Southeast Nebraska Technical Community College (SeTech) Area Board voted unanimously Tuesday to send a 1976-77 budget request of $6.7 million to the State Department of Administrative Services.

The proposal is $120,000 more than the board tentatively approved last month, and represents a $747,283 increase over current-year spending.

To continue 1975-76 programs budgeted at $5,675,051 will require $6,191,649 next fiscal year, a 9.1% increase.

But requests of $230,685 to pay for a workload increase and $278,332 for new programs bring the total sought to $6,700,666, an 18.1% overall increase.

By campus, the budget would award Fairbury $795,541, an all-funds increase of $98,623 or 28.5%; Milford, $2,579,470, up $217,917 or 12.4%; Lincoln, $2,613,958, up $375,854 or 24.3%; and SeTech Area office administration and 15-county operations, $711,697, up $54,889 or 8.35%.

If the legislative special session sustains Gov. J. James Exon's request to trim state agency general fund budgets by 3% almost across the board, SeTech Area President Robert S. Eicher said that "would cost us about $85,000." He said he assumes spending cuts would be imposed on each SeTech campus.

"State aid this year is 50% of our total budget," Dr. Eicher said. If the Legislature cut 3% of tax-supported funds, that would mean the 1976-77 proposed budget would "start from a new base."

Because of the Unicameral's uncertainty about any reduction, he told the board, "At this point, I'd hate to see us take out" any requests for increases based on the current approved budget. In fact, he said the board may want to seek larger increases.

Moreover, despite the board's approval of the package Tuesday, he said it might not be what SeTech will need next year.

"I seriously doubt there'll be any increase in state aid," Eicher said. Yet if that remains stable and SeTech maintained its 1.35-mill local operations levy, the taxing authority would produce $2 million — $700,000 more than this year.

But he said if state aid were cut, that "would amost necessitate" raising the local levy to maintain current operations. He explained that most increases would go to salaries (70% of the budget), which were set at 8% by the old board but half the members have been replaced. Faculty negotiations might alter the need, he said.

Waverly board member Betty Schlaphoff said if there's a state aid shortfall, SeTech could "use the local levy to fund pay increases." And if SeTech retains its Fairbury campus — which could possibly be moved to Beatrice — "we'll need it (more funds) there."

SeTech Students Refuse To Take Whittier Classes

While adult evening classes are packed on the Lincoln campus, Director David L. Buettner said Tuesday many Southeast Nebraska Technical Community College (SeTech) students have refused to attend further sessions in Whittier Junior High, where two classes have been cancelled.

Dr. Buettner told the SeTech board that both relate to "problems of the area," 2240 Vine, because of tensions there evoked by the shooting death of Sherdell Lewis.

Noting a Lincoln enrollment mark of 3,515 students, Buettner said SeTech usually hopes to maintain 80-85% in the evening classes until completion.

But at Whittier, Monday and Wednesday night class attendance has already dropped to 65% of those first enrolled, while Tuesday and Thursday sessions are down to 60%. The school now serves "some classes with as few as three or four people."

The director noted in response to students' fears because of "damages to automobiles in the area," he has hired a security man to monitor the Whittier parking lot during the evening classes. Buettner said he hopes that will "minimize the risks involved."

"It's going to be a big problem for us," he said, "trying to get that enrollment back up where it has been" at Whittier.

Board Chairman Robert Wekesser of Lincoln said, "Maybe we should move someplace else, because the problems aren't going to go away." He suggested the board might ask the Lincoln Public Schools for class space elsewhere.

SeTech rents space in Whittier, which is still used as a junior high but is pegged for closing. The school board has offered to sell Whittier to SeTech, to consolidate its Lincoln campus, not spread throughout Lincoln in leased space.

The board took no action on Wekesser's suggestion, but toured the entire Lincoln campus Tuesday night.

Perfect Garden's Crop Less Than Bountiful

By JANE BRYANT QUINN

Jane Bryant Quinn

Chappaqua, N.Y. — Last spring, I planted a vegetable garden to save money on food. That really was my plan — to save us some money. I was moved by the romance of fresh vegetables spilling onto the plates of eager children. Beautiful vegetables, bursting with flavor, fragance and vitamins.

Never having grown vegetables before, I decided to plant everything just to see what it looked like. Corn, carrots, cucumbers, peas, beans, squash, brocooli, cauliflower, lettuce, cabbage, spinach, radishes, eggplant, peppers, scallions, tomatoes, celery and melons. The works.

Columbus discovered America with less planning than went into that garden. Planting dates, heights in relation to sun, days to maturity, succession plantings, yields, early and late lettuce, squash under the corn the way the Indians did it. The perfect garden — foolproof and failsafe.

All I can say is that I'm glad the Plymouth Colony wasn't depending on my garden, or the Pilgrims never would have made it through the first winter. Here are some of the ways I failed to save money:

—Ripeness Dates. It says on the back of the seed packets how long it takes for the vegetables to mature. Those dates are about as reliable as the maturity dates of New York City notes. Everything took a week or two longer than the packet said. This wiped out a lot of my cleverly planted succession plantings. Crop loss: one fifth.

—Germination. Just because you fertilize a seed, water it and talk nicely to it doesn't mean it will return your friendship. The broccoli and cauliflower never came up, although I planted them twice. Melons arose like teenagers — midseason — and too late to do anything. The fall lettuce slept right through. In my neighbor's garden, however, all these things grew nicely. Crop loss: one tenth. Most valuable lesson learned: Don't plant a garden right next to your neighbor's.

—Freshness. One of the really great things about vegeatble gardens is that whatever grows can come fresh from soil to table. Unless, of course, 50 squashes ripen at once. The first are terrific. The next few tolerable and the rest rot. For rotting in the crisper, it's cheaper to buy vegetables at a store. Crop loss: one twentieth.

—Bugs. My partner in gardening believes in organic methods. Nothing but unadulterated poisons for our crop. When maggots got the first radishes, he discovered that wood-ash would kill them; I, the skeptic, had more faith in Diazinon. So we ran a test. Another row of radishes went in — planted partly with wood-ash, partly with Diazinon and partly with no protection at all.

The results, which I hope will settle this question once and for all: nothing works. The maggots got everything. On the advance of a sympathetic reader, I tried radishes again this fall, with no luck. But it really don't matter — my corner store carries good radishes.

The slugs also did pretty well for themselves. Organic gardeners fight them with beer. But after two weeks of running down to the garden every morning to give the slugs their daily belt, you begin to wonder if that is a suitable occupation for a grown-up. Let's hear it for slug pellets. Crop loss from bugs: one twentieth.

—Teasers. Some crops sprout, blossom, start to fruit, then change their minds at the last minute. Our corn, for example, was all failed promise; carrots, splendid tops over misshapen bottoms; peppers, big leaves and underdeveloped fruit. The spinach bolted almost immediately. The celery was tough. All traitorous plants — having their fun, then cutting you out. Crop loss from betrayal: one fifth.

—Results. So what came of my foolproof garden? Tomatoes and squash, and beans and squash, and lettuce and squash, and cucumbers and squash.

Of course, all that produce wasn't free. There were expenses — gardening books, tools, fences, fertilizer, mulch and seed. And my Saturdays, spent in honest toil.

I estimate that I got about $20 worth of produce from my garden this summer — about two fifths of what I had originally expected. For that bounteous harvest, I spent only $64.45. Salads ran about $2 a plate; beans, $1 a helping.

So now we're down to the bottom-line question: Will I do it again next year? Of course, I will. That's because next year I won't make any of this year's mistakes. My garden will at last be foolproof.

Stop in around mid-August, and I'll give you some of my extra squash.

Encouraging Signs Boost Stock Prices

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market, encouraged by signs of easier money and an improving economy, pushed ahead Tuesday in the heaviest trading in more than a month.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials added 4.57 to its 10.07 gain Monday to close at 846.82.

Standard & Poor's 500-stock index rose .74 to 90.56, and the New York Stock Exchange composite index was up .39 at 47.91.

Gainers outpaced losers 971 to 454 among the 1,854 issues traded on the NYSE.

Big Board volume came to 20.80 million shares, up from 13.25 million Monday and the heaviest total since Sept. 19, when 20.83 million changed hands.

Some key short term interest rates declined markedly during the day following Federal Reserve transactions which were interpreted as another step by the Fed to loosen up its credit policy.

The decline added to hopes that a downswing in the bank prime lending rate might be in the offing.

Most major banks are currently posting an 8 per cent rate on the basic charge for business loans, although a small St. Louis bank recently cut its prime to 7¾.

Analysts also noted continuing enthusiasm over the government's report Monday of the biggest quarterly jump in the Gross National Product in 20 years.

And Wall Street seemed generally optimistic about the consumer price index for September, which is due to be issued Wednesday morning.

Despite those pluses, it was evident that the market was meeting with some profit taking pressure after its rise to a three-month closing high on Monday.

Bank Reports Reflect Rise In Assets

By United Press International

Officials of a group of 10 affiliated banks located in seven Nebraska communities with main offices located in Lincoln Tuesday released financial reports on six of the banks.

The reports, reflecting increases in total assets and accounts as well as decreases in outstanding loans in three cases, were issued for the Kearney First National Bank, Fremont First State Bank, the Overland National Bank of Grand Island, Hastings City National Co., the Fremont First National Bank and the North Platte State Bank.

Net earnings for North Platte were pegged at $172,265 for the first nine months of this year, up 28% from a year ago.

Assets totaled $17,798,512, compared to $17,282,425 a year ago and deposits were up 4% at $14,975,560. Loans of $9,239,523 outstanding represented a decline of 10%.

Fremont First National Co. announced a dividend of 20 cents per share based on net earnings for the first nine months of 1975 of $557,623 compared to $479,694 a year ago.

Assets increased from $56,057,285 to $59,274,705 while deposits increased 9.4% to $51,558,062. Loans increased 8% to $31,994,231.

Because Hastings City National Co. acquired the City National Bank of Hastings during the second quarter of 1974, there are no comparative three quarter earnings figures available. Net earnings for the three quarters of this year were pegged at $289,606 and assets were $63,388,567 for the period.

Deposits for the bank increased 6.7% to $53,873,045 while outstanding loans showed an increase to $29,496,043.

Grand Island Overland earnings for the first nine months were up 23% to $319,608. Total assets were up from $50,651,594 to $52,402,020. Deposits increased 8.5% to $43,561,931 while loans decreased 5% to $33,164,867.

Fremont First State Co. net earnings were $121,999 compared to $125,841 for the first nine months of last year. Assets totaled $14,312,253, compared to $13,730,552 a year ago. Deposits were up 4% to $12,230,914 while loans were down about $500,000 to $7,215,026.

Kearney First National Co. assets increased 15% to $51,012,021 while deposits were up 20% to $44,899,662. Loans increased 14% to $32,514,618 and net earnings were up to $364,459 compared to $302,767 a year ago.

Grains Tumble To Limit Losses

Chicago (AP) — Grain futures tumbled for limit losses on the Chicago Board of Trade Tuesday despite the signing of a five year deal with Russia to buy grain from the United States.

Soybeans lost 20 cents a bushel and soybean oil 100 points, or 1 cent a pound. Both were limit declines. Corn touched the limit of 10 cents a bushel lower but closed 8¼ lower. Wheat lost 17 cents, 3 short of a limit and oats were down 4½. Soybean meal declined $4 a ton. Iced broilers lost 1 cent a pound, on selling linked with red meat futures.

Domestic gold futures showed, some independent strength early but it dissipated and prices closed about $1 an ounce lower.

Bernie Carbo connects with a Rawly Eastwick pitch in the eighth inning and sends it into the center field bleachers for a three-run homer to tie the game at 6-6.

Fisk Saves Boston In 12th

BOSTON (AP) — "I didn't know if it was going to be fair or foul," Boston catcher Carlton Fisk said of his game-winning home run in the 12th inning early Wednesday morning, "but I knew if it was fair it was out of here."

In a game that had a fistful of emotional twists and turns, it was entirely appropriate that the Red Sox' 7-6 World Series victory over the Cincinnati Reds should come with the sudden drama of a home run.

Fisk delivered the shot that settled this unbelievably exciting sixth game and tied the Series at three victories each. The see-saw, rain-delayed battle between these evenly matched teams will be settled for good Wednesday night when they clash in a seventh and final game at 8:30 p.m. EDT.

The finale will be a battle of left-handers, with Boston's Bill Lee facing Cincinnati's Don Gullett. But it will have to be a whopper to top the drama which the Reds and Red Sox produced in Game 6.

Fisk's huge homer finally decided the issue but, like any good drama, there was suspense up to the very last moment. The ball soared high and far down the left field line, but Fisk stood at home plate for a moment. He wasn't admiring his shot . . . he was hoping.

Finally, left field umpire Dick Stello gave the home run sign as the ball banged into the screen portion of the foul pole atop the left field wall. The show had reached its finale and the Red Sox were winners.

Out of the Boston dugout came a stream of players, joined quickly by swarms of fans anxious to celebrate Fisk's home run with the popular catcher. For a moment, they overran home plate and there was some question whether Fisk would be able to complete his home run trot.

"Don't worry about that," said Fisk. "I was making sure I touched every base—every little white thing I saw. I was going to touch them all, even if I had to straight-arm somebody out of the way."

When Fisk came to the plate to lead off the 12th inning against reliever Pat Darcy, the eighth Cincinnati pitcher, he looked up to see which way the wind was blowing, perhaps hoping for a little help if he got a ball up in the air.

"I looked at the flag, but it wasn't doing anything," said Fisk. "I think it was wrapped around the pole."

Fisk's shot hardly needed help from the wind as far as distance was concerned. The only question was fair or foul. And when it hit the screen on the fair side of the pole, Boston had tied the Series and set up a seventh-game showdown.

Can it be as good as this one was? If it is, the fans are in for some show. Even the players had to appreciate it.

"That probably had to be one of the best-played . . . not just World Series games, but one of the best-played games I've ever sen," said Fisk. "In the 10th inning, Pete Rose said to me, 'This is some kind of game.' And I said it certainly was."

The Red Sox had come from behind in the eighth inning with the same kind of suddenness, tying the score on a two-out, three-run homer by pinch hitter Bernie Carbo. That swing wiped out a three-run Boston deficit and the game went into extra innings, settling down into a battle of bullpens.

Darcy was the Reds' eighth pitcher, setting a record for arms used by one team in a World Series game. The teams used a total of 12 pitchers between them, also a series record.

In the top of the 12th, the Reds had made one last run at Rick Wise, the fourth Boston hurler. With one out, Tony Perez and George Foster stroked singles. But Wise got Dave Concepcion on a long fly to right field and struck out Cesar Geronimo, ending the inning.

By the time Fisk reached home plate on his game-winning homer, the rampant Red Sox fans had spilled onto the field and police and park attendants had difficulty keeping them off the Boston catcher as he romped toward the dugout.

He was interviewed for television in front of the dugout with fans swarming around him. Then, Fisk took a long, happy run across the outfield into the left field corner to the door of the Red Sox clubhouse.

When Wise got the Reds out in the top of the 12th, the game was four hours old and just about every minute of action was tingling.

Very few fans had left the ballpark when Fisk came to the plate with the scoreboard clock reading 12:31 a.m. EDT.

The husky Boston catcher unloaded on Darcy and the only question was whether the ball would stay fair or sail foul. Fisk stood at the plate for a moment, watching the drive and perhaps saying a little prayer hoping to help the ball stay on the right side of the foul pole.

When it hit the pole, venerable old Fenway Park went slightly daffy with a wave of fans and Red Sox players spilling over the home plate area

Long minutes after the sudden end of the ball game, fans still remained in the stands, savoring one of the most dramatic games in World Series history.

This was a game that seesawed back and forth, first leaning Boston's way on a three-run first-inning by rookie Fred Lynn, then seeming to turn to the Reds, who knocked out Red Sox ace Luis Tiant and took the lead 6-3.

They were only four outs away from nailing down their first world championship since 1940 when Carbo's second pinch home run of the Series brought in three runs and tied the score at 6-6.

In the eighth inning, Cesar Geronimo knocked Tiant out of the game with a leadoff home run down the right field line that barely made it into the stands just inside the foul pole.

Boston Manager Darrell Johnson came out to get his pitcher and Tiant left to a standing ovation from the capacity crowd of 35,205, which has carried on its own special love affair with the aging right-hander with the herky-jerk motion.

Cincinnati was six outs away from the world championship with a three-run lead when pitcher Pedro Borbon got into trouble in the bottom of the eighth.

Only 36 Perfect Records Remain

By RANDY YORK
Prep Sports Editor

And now there are only 36.

That's how many Nebraska prep football teams have survived the first seven weeks of the season without suffering a loss.

Only four Class A teams are included in the elite group — Bellevue (7-0), Lincoln Northeast and Scottsbluff (each 6-0-1) and Lincoln East (6-0-2).

The breakdown for other classes shows six unbeatens in Class B, five in Class C-1, seven in Class C-2, five in Class D and nine in eight-man competition.

They include:

Class B — Hartington Cedar Catholic (7-0), Holdrege (7-0), Kimball (7-0), Lincoln Pius X (7-0), Waverly (7-0) and Wayne (6-0).

Class C-1 — Battle Creek (7-0), Bennington (7-0), Gibbon (6-0), Norfolk Catholic (6-0) and Plainview (7-0).

Class C-2 — Alma (7-0), Cambridge (7-0), Friend (5-0-2), Henderson (4-0-3), Nebraska City Lourdes (6-0-1), Pleasanton (7-0) and Scribner (7-0).

Class D — Alliance St. Agnes (7-0), Callaway (7-0), Homer (7-0), Loomis (7-0) and Nelson (6-0-1).

Eight-Man — Adams (7-0), Decatur (6-0), Elgin (7-0), Odell (6-0), Ruskin (7-0), Shelby (7-0), Sidney St. Pat's (7-0), Thedford (5-0-1) and Wilsonville (6-0-1).

Because of Teacher's Convention this week throughout the state, prep football gets an early start with a sizable number of games on Wednesday night.

This week's top games are Lincoln Northeast at Grand Island Friday night in a Class A showdown. Holdrege at Lexington Friday night in a battle of Class B powers and Adams at Odell in an eight-man showdown.

Grand Island and Lexington are seen as upset winners and Adams, No. 1 in eight-man, is the choice in its Homesteader Conference contest.

Other strong upset possibilities are Beatrice over York and Hastings over Norfolk.

In games involving Lincoln teams this weekend, it's:

North Platte (4-2-1) v. Lincoln High (0-7), Friday night Seacrest Field — this could be a much closer matchup than one might expect. North Platte almost has as difficult time as the Links putting the ball in the end zone.

Lincoln Northeast (6-0-1) at Grand Island (6-1), Friday night — A crucial game for both teams' state playoff hopes. The Rockets seem to have lost some of the edge they possessed two weeks ago and the Islanders are running in high gear. Grand Island the choice, playing at home being the difference.

Lincoln Southeast (3-4) at Millard (1-5-1), Friday night — The Knights have to be the best losing team in the entire state. At least a win here will boost them to .500.

Papillion (5-2) v. Lincoln East (6-0-2), Saturday night, Seacrest Field — Remember last year at this time up in Papillion? The Spartans struggled to a 6-0 win against a much weaker Papillion team. That should be enough incentive to avoid a repeat.

Huskers Remain Fourth

From The News Wires

Ohio State maintained its lead over Oklahoma in both The Associated Press and United Press International college football ratings Tuesday while Colorado became the only newcomer to crack the top ten.

In the UPI ratings, Alabama, 5-1, switched places with Texas A & M for fifth and sixth places, respectively. The move came when Alabama made up a 105-point deficit to overcome the Aggies by one point after A & M struggled to a 14-6 win over winless TCU.

Colorado's invasion of the top ten came by virtue of a 31-20 win over Missouri, which was ranked 10th in both pools last week. Colorado is 5-1, with that one loss a one-point defeat by Oklahoma.

Nebraska, ranked fourth, will meet the Buffaloes in Lincoln this Saturday. It will be the third conference game for both teams.

The top ten in both polls, with the exception of the switch of Alabama and Texas A & M, includes Ohio State, Oklahoma, Southern California, Nebraska, Michigan, Texas, Penn St. and Colorado.

The AP poll has arizona St. 11th, followed by Florida, Arizona, Notre Dame, Missouri, Michigan St., Pittsburgh, Maryland, UCLA and South Carolina.

The Associated Press UPI poll has a few switches in the last five, and added San Diego St. and Miami of Ohio while leaving out Michigan St. and South Carolina.

Sox Earn Cincinnati Accolades

BOSTON (UPI) — "If this ain't the number one pastime, I don't know what is!" beamed Pete Rose in the gloom of the losing Cincinnati Reds dressing room.

The Reds had just been beaten 7-6 by the Boston Red Sox in one of the most dramatic World Series games in history, but Rose couldn't have been more excited.

"My God, you couldn't have more exciting things than that," said Rose, referring to Carlton Fisk's game-winning homer off the foul pole leading off the 12th, Bernie Carbo's game-tying three-run homer in the eighth and Dwight Evans' game-saving catch in the 11th.

"I know they say that Evans is good," said Rose, "but if that catch of his is any indication of just how good he is, well I hope I never hit another ball to right field."

Reds Manager Sparky Anderson was even more emphatic about Evans' sensational one-handed catch and the subsequent doubling-up throw on Ken Griffey that bailed the Red Sox out of a tight jam in the 11th.

Former NU Starter Pate Dies In Coma

From Press Reports

Calgary, Alta. — Hamilton Tigercats linebacker Tom Pate died in a hospital Tuesday night, four days after he collapsed with a brain disorder in a Canadian Football League game against the Calgary Stampeders.

In a brief statement, the Calgary Foothills Hospital said "Tom died this evening at about 6:20 p.m. CDT." A hospital spokesman said a full statement would be issued Wednesday.

Pate, a 23-year-old rookie from Omaha, played his collegiate career at the University of Nebraska as a defensive end.

A defensive end at Nebraska, the 6-3, 221-pound Pate was a three-year letterman at the university. At Omaha Westside, Pate was a three-sport letterman and earned all-Metro honors for his defensive prowess as a fullback-linebacker.

The parents of the rookie, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur L. Pate, were at his side when he died.

Brain Aneurism

Pate had been in a coma since he collapsed Saturday. He had been undergoing treatment for a brain aneurism, described as a congenital or inherited weakness in his brain's vascular system.

Pate joined the Saskatchewan Roughriders after graduation, but joined Hamilton in July after being dropped by the Roughriders.

Bob Martin, NU's right defensive end this year and a starter with Pate last year, said, "Tom was a great guy. He was always easy to work with and I learned a lot from him.

More Desire

"He had about as much desire as anyone," Martin continued. "If anyone could make it (in pro football), he could just by desire alone."

Pate played for the unbeaten freshman team in 1970 and was red-shirted in 1971. He was backup for NU All-American Willie Harper in 1972 and in 1973 was a strong alternate and starter. By the spring of 1974, Pate had earned the No. 1 defensive left end position for the Black Shirts.

In the last game of his Nebraska career in the 1974 Sugar Bowl win over Florida, Pate was the leading tackler with 14 tackles, 11 of them unassisted. He was named co-defensive player of the game in the 1974 win over Northwestern.

Not Football Injury

The hospital spokesman said Pate's brain aneurism did not stem from either the football injury or a childhood attack of spinal meningitis.

"The head injury was not the initial problem, nor was his childhood illness," the spokesman said. "The weakness was probably congential or inherited."

Pate caught spinal meningitis at 13 and lapsed into a four-day coma. He spent 11 days in a hospital and briefly suffered from blurred vision and partial paralysis when he was released.

Dr. Jim Charters, a Hamilton team doctor, confirmed reports from Pate's teammates that he had been suffering from severe headaches in recent weeks. Dr. Charters said that before Pate's death there was no evidence linking the collapse with the headaches.

Former Nebraska defensive end Tom Pate, who died following an injury in a Canadian Football League game, had one of the best games of his career in the 1974 Sugar Bowl. Here Pate (68) runs down Florida quarterback Don Gaffney early in the third quarter of the tilt.

'Gimmick' Plays Possible In Colorado-Nebraska Matchup

SPORTS SIGNALS

By Bob Owens
Star Sports Editor

Gimmick Plays Possible

It's entirely possible the fans Saturday in Nebraska's Memorial Stadium will be treated to some "gimmick" plays by both the Cornhuskers and Colorado.

"This is possible," Coach Tom Osborne of the Huskers said after Tuesday's workout in preparation for the talented Buffaloes. "Particularly in a game where there is no apparent edge in personnel you might see each team have two or three 'gimmick' plays.

"You can't expect to win with gimmicks, but you might get an edge or a big play that will enable you to win the game. Then again the opportunity may never present itself to use those kind of plays. You can gimmick yourself to death."

An example of a so-called gimmick play would be the "halfback-to-the-quarterback pass" which enabled Nebraska to score a touchdown last season against Oklahoma.

Another might be the "lateral pass-quick kick" play which backfired on Indiana and enabled the Huskers to pick up an easy touchdown against the Hoosiers.

Nebraska pulled a couple out of the hat for good yardage against Oklahoma State last Saturday. The first one gained 19 yards to the OSU four to set up the second NU touchdown. It's called "fake 21, iso sweep, quarterback keep." The other was the old end-around for 13 yards by Bobby Thomas to set up the first touchdown.

Colorado Offense 'Robust'

Colorado coach Bill Mallory runs a basic "I" formation much like Nebraska, but the Buffaloes go into a full-house backfield in short yardage situations. That means the backs line up almost like they did in the old split-T formation.

Mallory calls it his "robust" formation, a name he got from Ohio State coach Woody Hayes, who uses that alignment quite often.

"It's a little bit like the wishbone in that there are four backs who can carry the ball and there is an extra blocker," Osborne explained. "It's a great play for fullbacks in that there are two halfbacks blocking for the fullback."

Osborne recalled that when Nebraska used the formation several years ago, fullback Frank Solich, now Southeast coach, was the leading Husker ball carrier. This year, Colorado's top rusher is fullback Terry Kunz.

"The robust set definitely helps us," Kunz said after he averaged 5.7 yards on 23 carries in the opener against California. "We're able to run outside better with it because it gives us another halfback to block.

"I like it because it's the only formation off of which we run my favorite play, a play on which I take two steps laterally and then cut up through tackle. We can't run it out of the 'I' because we don't have the extra blocker you need on the end."

Not Easy To Prepare For NU

While Colorado's robust formation and 'I' formation plays make it difficult for an opposing defense to get ready for the Buffaloes, Nebraska's ofense isn't exactly simple for opponents to prepare to face the Huskers.

"Most people who play us feel there's a lot of preparation for them," Osborne said. "We throw the ball a lot of different ways. It isn't a matter of saying you've got to stop two or three plays like you can do against some teams."

Osborne pointed out that there are two theories of offense. "One is to run a few plays and run them over and over until you do them so well you can't stop them, the other is to do a lot of things," he said. "We're more of the multiple offense approach."

Osborne pointed out there are a lot of plays that the Huskers are able to run only once or twice a day in getting ready for a game, but he also said they never use a play they haven't worked on during the week. The Huskers, obviously, pick out certain plays to fit a game plan and work on them rather than trying to go through all the plays in the playbook.

Nebraska runs many different sets from its "T" formation and also has what is called the "spread" formation which looks like a double-wing alignment. Last week at Oklahoma State, the Huskers added the "power-I" to their repertoire. That certainly gave Colorado something new to work on this week.

What will be new this week? Only Osborne, his assistant coaches and the players know and they aren't telling, but you can bet they'll have some tricks ready. Whether they use them will depend on what Colorado does defensively. Ditto for the Buffaloes. That should make for a very intersting football game.

It's Sin To Let Them Play

Former Cornhusker assistant Jim Walden, who now is Miami's defensive coordinator, had some observations about Colorado after the Buffaloes stopped the Hurricanes 29-10.

"We were fighting a Colorado bunch that was so big it's a sin to let them play," Walden commented. "They four-yard you to death. But we stopped them and got a little momentum, and what happens? They get a bloop single to right field and it ends up a home run."

Walden referred to a CU punt that was sliced to the right, out of the reach of Miami's return men. "Then it's crunch, crunch, crunch and we don't have the physical strength to keep them out of the end zone."

Norm Bulaich, who plays for the Miami Dolphins, watched the Hurricanes and Colorado and commented, "I'd sure like to run behind that line."

The Buffs are directed by senior David Williams, who Osborne said is "the best quarterback we've faced so far this year." He said Williams has speed, size and is a good thrower. "He can do so many things well."

The Huskers worked out about two hours Tuesday in pads. Senior defensive end Dave Redding missed practice with strained knee ligaments and sophomore wingback Curtis Craig was out with a bruised knee.

Osborne said Craig jogged a little and probably will be able to practice Wednesday.

FOOTBALL

Alabama will play in the Sugar Bowl if unbeaten the rest of the season, the Nashville Banner reported Tuesday. The article, written by Fred Russell, a long-time friend of Bear Bryant, said, "Bear Bryant has excluded the Orange Bowl from his hopes and plans, if ever he did entertain the idea of playing Oklahoma there for what might have been a piece of the national championship."

Alabama All-American end Leroy Cook was named The Associated Press College Lineman of the Week for his performance against Tennessee. Cook has 11 tackles, including a sack of Vols quarterback Randy Wallace for a 10-yard loss on the last play of the game.

The committee to name Iowa State University's new football stadium after Jack Trice has disbanded. The members of the group felt the efforts were no longer needed and "perhaps harmful." Trice was an early black football player for Iowa State who died after being trampled by Minnesota players in a 1923 game in Minneapolis.

Attendance is a clouded issue for the World Football League. The only clear thing about it is that if it (attendance) isn't up, some of the teams may go under. The Hawaiians lost four players including both of their quarterbacks after a dispute over cutting salaries to cut costs.

The Charlotte Hornets' general manager Upton Bell is talking about moving the team if attendance isn't around 14,000-16,000 for each of its last five home games. In Portland, the attendance averages under 8,000 even with a ticket price cut. Philadelphia, though, is having the most acute attendance problems. The average there is about 3,500 but last week's game drew just 1,293 fans.

And in San Antonio, a group of local businessmen were attempting to round up $350,000 in pledges to keep the San Antonio Wings in business for the rest of the 1975 WFL season.

BASKETBALL

The Kansas City Kings put Rick Adelman on waivers to cut their squad to the 12-man limit.

The Philadelphia 76ers cut Charles Cleveland, a third-round draft choice from the University of Alabama.

Happy Hairston, a forward in the NBA for the past 11 years was placed on waivers by the Los Angeles Lakers. Hairston was the NBA's sixth leading rebounder last year and averaged 10.3 points per game.

OTHER SPORTS

Willie Davis, a 35-year-old veteran of 15 seasons in the major leagues has been sent to the San Diego Padres, his fifth team in less than two years, for outfielder Dick Sharon.

Charles Rupert, executive vice president of the San Francisco Giants, denied that the Giants owners are nearing an agreement to move the franchise to Toronto.

The National Hockey League officially confirmed an eight-game series against two teams from the Soviet Union. Unlike the Team Canada set-up of 1972, when an all-star team played against the Russians, this series will match the Philadelphia Flyers, 1975 Stanley Cup Champions against the top Russian army teams, starting Jan. 11. The Russians will then tour the NHL clubs.

Wajima, one of the top U.S. three-year-olds, will run in the Washington, D.C., International on Nov. 8 at Laurel Race Course, as his final race before retirement.

Chris Evert swamped Rosmary Casals, 6-0, 6-1 to gain a finals berth in the women's singles at the World Invitational Tennis classic.

Rubin "Hurricane" Carter's attorney filed a petition with New Jersey Governor Brendan Byrne seeking executive clemency for his client.

Boston's Lynn Leads All-Stars

NEW YORK (AP) — Super rookie Fred Lynn of the Boston Red Sox continued his collection of laurels, leading The Associated Press' 5 1975 Major League All-Star baseball team.

The centerfielder who led the American League in runs scored, doubles and slugging percentage, also picked up the most votes from a nationwide panel of sports writers and broadcasters.

Lynn, who batted .331, second highest in the AL, and was third in the league in runs batted in with 105, polled 389 votes. The closest to the Red Sox slugger was second baseman Joe Morgan of the Cincinnati Reds, who received 320.

Joining Lynn in the outfield were Greg Luzinski of the Philadelphia Phillies, the National League's RBI champion, and Reggie Jackson of the Oakland A's.

Besides Morgan, the infield is composed of first baseman George Scott of the Milwaukee Brewers, third baseman Bill Madlock of the Chicago Cubs and shortstop Larry Bowa of the Philadelphia Phillies

Baltimore's Jim Palmer was named the team's right-handed pitcher, outdueling Tom Seaver of the New York Mets, 179 votes to 157. Catfish Hunter of the New York Yankees finished a distant third.

Randy Jones of the San Diego Padres polled 163 votes to grab the left-handed pitching spot, beating out Vida Blue of Oakland, who finished with 103.

Cincinnati's Johnny Bench easily captured the catching spot, getting 265 votes to 87 for runner-up Ted Simmons of the St. Louis Cardinals.

Only Bench and Jackson are repeaters from last year.

Bowa had the second closest fight, beating out Dave Concepcion of Cincinnati 165-134. Bowa batted .305 and scored 79 runs.

Besides the pitchers, only three members of The AP team batted under .300—Jackson, Scott and Bench. But Jackson and Scott tied for the AL home run champion with 36 apiece, while Bench was second to Luzinski in RBIs in the NL with 110. Luzinski drove in 121 runs and hit 34 homers.

Scott also paced the junior circuit in total bases with 318 and in RBIs with 109. Jackson was second in the AL in doubles with 39, third in total bases and fourth in RBIs. Steve Garvey of Los Angeles, the 1974 National League Most Valuable Player, was runner-up to Scott at first base, some 49 votes behind Scott.

Lynn's greatest day came on June 18 when, against the Detroit Tigers, he collected five hits, including three homers, and knocked in 10 runs. He finished the season leading the league in runs with 103, doubles with 47 and slugging percentage with .566.

Madlock captured the NL batting title with .354 and finished far ahead of Cincinnati's Pete Rose, 320 votes to 93. Morgan, who crushed Rod Carew, the major's leading hitter, 320 to 98 in the balloting, had an outstanding season. He was fourth in the NL in hitting with .327, third in runs scored with 107 and second in stolen bases with 68.

Palmer and Jones held identical distinctions: they both posted the lowest earned run averages in their respective leagues among starting pitchers.

Palmer, 23-11, struck out 193 and threw 10 shutouts while coming up with an ERA of 2.09. His 23 victories tied him with Hunter for the AL high. Jones had a 2.24 ERA en route to a 20-12 season, striking out 103 while walking only 56.

There was no contest in the outfield, either. After Lynn's 389 votes, Luzinski polled 289 and Jackson had 220. The next highest was Dave Parker of the Pittsburgh Pirates with 97. Another Boston rookie, Jim Rice, was fifth with 71 votes.

Record Broken

Lake McConaughy — Dom Contratto of Oshkosh finally brought the Nebraska state striped bass record back to Nebraska Monday with a 25-pound, one ounce striper caught Monday.

Contratto's fish measured 37¾ in length and 24¾ in girth. It topped the former record of 23-4 caught by Coloradoan Les Williams on Oct 5 Contratto was using a chub for bait.

"This was my biggest thrill ever, no doubt about that," said Contratto, who had landed a 30-pound king salmon Aug. 29. "We started to land him and our net looked like one you'd dip minnows with."

It was the fourth time the state striper record had been bettered this fall Contratto was fishing with Jack Jacobs.

Brown Signs Nuggett Pact

DENVER (AP)—Roger Brown, a 6-foot-11 free agent from Kansas, signed a contract with the Denver Nuggets of the American Basketball Association on Tuesday.

A team spokesman said Brown will be on the roster for the Nuggets Friday night.

Trans-Neb. Champion Meets Set

Sports enthusiasts in the Capital City could have a difficult time deciding what to do Wednesday.

Trans-Nebraska championships will be decided in three different sports at three different sites.

Lincoln Northeast will host the Trans volleyball championship with matches beginning at noon.

Top-seeded East High (10-1) faces Hastings (0-10) in the first match with the winner advancing to the 3:30 p.m. semifinals against host Northeast (5-4).

At 12:45 p.m., a rematch of last week's city championship is scheduled with third-seeded Lincoln High (9-3), the defending conference champion, meeting Southeast (4-5).

The Links won the city title last week, 15-10, 15-17 and 15-8 over Southeast after the Knights upset East in the first round.

Grand Island (3-6) and second-seed North Platte (9-2) will end the first session with a 1:30 p.m. match and the winner meeting the Lincoln High-Southeast winner at 4:15 p.m.

The consolation finals are scheduled for 7 p.m. with finals following.

At Lincoln High, boys gymnastics competition is scheduled to begin at 6 p.m. with two events running simultaneously.

North Platte, the defending champion figures as the team favorite with a tight all-around battle expected.

Southeast will host the girls' swimming championships beginning with diving preliminaries at 4 p.m.

The swimming prelims will follow the diving, with finals scheduled for 7 p.m.

East High, the defending champion, is again favored, but outstanding individual performances are expected from Lincoln High's Barb Harris, Grand Island's Melanie Jacobs and East's Kris Funk.

FWAA Names Owens

Cedar Rapids, Ia. — Bob Owens, sports editor of The Lincoln Star, has been named a member of the 1975 All-America selection committee of the Football Writers Association of America.

Gus Schrader, sports editor of The Cedar Rapids-Gazette and preaident of the FWAA, said the committee will meet in Chicago Dec. 1 to make the final selections.

Members of the FWAA will receive a ballot early in November with names of players nominated by the committee, with the assistance of head football coaches in each area of the country.

The committee and the areas they will cover:

East — Joe Concannon, Boston Globe; Atlantic Coast — Jennings Culley, Richmond News-Leader; South — Alf Van Hoose, Birmingham News; Southwest — Orville Henry, Arkansas Gazette; Midlands — Owens; Midwest — John Bansch, Indianapolis Star; Rockies — Regis McAuley, Tucson Daily Citizen; Pacific Coast — Loel Schrader, Long Beach Independent Press-Telegram.

Action shots of the players selected will be assembled for a highlight film which will be shown on national television, sponsored by Chevrolet, which is financing the project for the FWAA.

RATINGS

by Randy York
Prep Sports Editor

In November, the Nebraska School Activities Assn. (NSAA) will select four teams in each of six classes to determine six state championships by playoffs. The Sunday Journal and Star computer has rated the present district leaders and contenders on the NSAA playoff formula.

Class C-1

1—Wahoo Neumann (6-1)	6—Omaha Holy Name (4-2-1)
2—Plainview (7-0)	7—Fremont Bergan (5-2)
3—Centennial (4-1-1)	8—Norfolk Catholic (6-0)
4—Battle Creek (7-0)	9—Gibbon (6-0)
5—Oshkosh (6-1)	10—Bennington (7-0)

Comment — No. 2 Plainview faces a major test Friday night, hosting Class B O'Neill (4-2-1). Fremont Bergan posted division's most impressive win last week, a 35-0 handling of Class B David City Aquinas.

Class C-2

1—Scribner (7-0)	6—Alma (7-0)
2—Grant (6-1)	7—Neb. City Lourdes (6-0-1)
3—Friend (5-0-2)	8—Pleasanton (7-0)
4—Cambridge (7-0)	9—Republican Valley (5-1)
5—Henderson (4-0-3)	10—Walthill (5-2)

Comment — Scribner regains top spot after Grant's 6-0 struggle against North Platte St. Pat's. O'Neill St. Mary's exist from top 10 following lopsided loss to three-time loser Bassett. That creates room for Walthill to make first ratings appearance.

Class D

1—Alliance St. Agnes (7-0)	6—Homer (6-0)
2—Nelson (6-0-1)	7—Fairmont (5-1)
3—Lawrence (6-1)	8—Oxford (5-2)
4—Loomis (7-0)	9—Falls City SH (4-1-1)
5—Callaway (7-0)	10—Wolbach (5-1)

Comment — Alliance St. Agnes enhanced its No. 1 status with 14-5 triumph over five-time Class C winner Hay Springs. No. 6 Homer plays at Class C-2's No. 10 Walthill Wednesday night in key matchup for both teams.

Eight-Man

1—Adams (7-0)	6—Odell (6-0)
2—Elgin (7-0)	7—Davenport (6-1)
3—Ruskin (7-0)	8—Giltner (6-1)
4—Shelby (7-0)	9—Eustis (6-1)
5—Sidney St. Pat's (7-0)	10—Wilsonville (6-0-1)

Comment. — No. 1 Adams plays at No. 6 Odell Wednesday night in Homesteader Conference showdown likely to decide district 1 state playoff qualifier. Thedford (5-0-1), Hayes Center (5-1-1) and Chambers (4-1-1) are possible ratings material.

New Visual System Teaches Deaf To Speak

(EDITOR'S NOTE: Without first hearing a language, it is extremely difficult, sometimes impossible to learn to speak it. Shota Ushio of the Tokyo bureau of McGraw-Hill World News reports on a new system that has made startling progress in teaching the deaf.)

By SHOTA USHIO

Tokyo—It takes years, sometimes decades, to train the deaf to speak. But the whole situation may change in Japan, where a group of experts with government funding has come up with a visual system designed to indicate what went right and what went wrong in the process of the deaf learning Japanese speech.

The group started by breaking down the art of speech into seven elements. Members of the 46-person team then developed seven gadgets, each intended to display success or failure to acquire individual skills, and this in turn led to development of the basic learning system. Despite the relatively modest investment requirement, $3,300 to $6,000 excluding a computer, the system promises to cut the training time drastically to about a year, says Sadao Shibata, a researcher at the National Rehabilitation Center for Speech and Hearing Disorder and a leading member of the group.

Shibata demonstrated recently what kind of progress a deaf child makes by using the system. The before-and-after comparison, recorded by video tape recorder, indicated that the child, after several sessions of practice, learned to say — comprehensively to most — "There was a boy in a place." Uttering these simple words may seem a modest step toward mastering the ability to speak a language, Shibata explained. But, he added, such progress would take years if the conventional, man-to-man method were employed without help of machine.

One apparatus shows the basic thinking behind the system: reliance on visual display for demonstrating to both the instructor, who needs no special training, and the trainee what went right and wrong. A plastic mouthpiece (palate), order-made to the specifications of the individual trainee, has about 60 holes where tiny electrodes are installed. As the tongue touches specific spots on the artificial mouthpiece in order to utter specific words, this is indicated by flashes on the screen, with weak and safe electric current (on the volt) connecting the plastic plate and the screen. The deaf trainee can then see his or her accomplishment.

A computer is involved in this step to cope with saliva, which is blamed for sending false signals even when the tongue is not contacting the right spots on the palate. Studies now include attempts to replace an expensive large-capacity computer with an inexpensive mini-computer designed solely for teaching the deaf.

Other gadgets that are mostly readily available include: A fiberscope, connected to another screen, for showing mastering nasal sounds; x-ray equipment, (designed for limited use) for checking the tongue's movement; and still another screen to indicate levels of both pitch accent and loudness. One training session involves only one of the seven speech elements. In the palate-tongue training, over 20 sessions, each 45 minutes or so, are required for the deaf to master this particular skill, according to the center.

Altogether, Shibata estimates a year will be required with the system to help the deaf with most serious speech difficulties. Training can start when the patient is four years old.

Current efforts are designed to improve hardware, including development of easy-to-handle, completely fail-safe gadgets so laymen can benefit from the system, and wider applications for, among others, adults losing speech ability due to stroke. An estimated 200,000 Japanese have hearing difficulties while another 500,000 are estimated to have speech problems.

POSTCARD by Stan Delaplane

San Francisco — "Let us crown ourselves with rosebuds before they be withered." That was said by the wise Solomon, a chap who had sense enough to come in out of the rain.

When the first rains mark the end of our endless summer, the first thing we do is check the ceiling for leaks. If it is not (God bless the house!) we're good for another year.

This scatter is OK. I rent it, that's why. If I owned it, it would be Sieve City. When I was buying a house, we practically had to carry umbrellas inside the place. We put pans at strategic places. During the night we could hear the plop, plop, plop of raindrops coming through the roof.

That was another reason I went back to renting. I looked forward to the ceremony of "burning of the mortgage." With all the carrot Vitamin A, I could see forever. But I could not see the end of the payments.

If we had ever reached the end, I would bet the mortgage was fire proof.

☆ ☆ ☆

When I put the down payment on that little home on the prairie, the real estate man congratulated me.

"This is one of the best buys on today's market," he said.

When I wanted to sell it a few years later, he said: "I've never seen such a depressed market. You may be asking too much. Doesn't the roof leak?"

Didn't the roof leak? It surely did — and it had been leaking when I made the down payment. I made it on a dry day.

When it began leaking during the rainy winter, I got in a roof man. He puttered around pouring on tar and gravel. This only stopped off the water at one point. It ran over to the other side of the roof and burst through there.

☆ ☆ ☆

The roof man said: "It must have something to do with the way the contractor built this house."

I said: "Roof man, you mean he built it with holes on top? That's ridiculous."

He said: "You have no idea what some contractors will do until you've been in the roofing business as long as I have."

We finally got the leak cornered and put a permanent pan under it. It was in the room I had turned into an office.

But everybody said: "It's only in his office. He doesn't spend all the time in there. Besides it only rains in the winter."

☆ ☆ ☆

I had that house for eight years and never got the leak fixed. I even bought a book on home repairs. I climbed up on a shaky ladder and took a look at the roof.

The children invited their friends over. "Our father is going to climb up on the roof and fall off and break his neck."

Not everybody has such an entertaining father. And me up there like one of the Flying Wallendas. Without a net.

☆ ☆ ☆

As soon as I sold that place — I sold it in the dry summer — raindrops stopped falling on my head.

I live in a rented condominium apartment built over Snug Harbor. At night I can hear the harbor underneath — swish, swish. But when it rains, not a drop comes through. Suddenly I am waterproof.

Kids Tag Tough Tony 'Our Friend' After Visit

By JIM CUNNINGHAM

The way he slashes and crashes and bolts and jolts his way around a football field, it's no wonder that Tony Davis has been the subject of some unique descriptions.

During his slam-bang grid career, he's been variously referred to as "Tony the Terror", "The Tecumseh Tornado" and, most famously no doubt, "Tough Tony."

Last Friday, prior to departing for Stillwater, Okla. and a confrontation with some hostile Oklahoma State Cowboys, "Tough Tony" received another title. This one was the result of activity away from the gridiron.

The title was bestowed by the 70 students who attend Lincoln's Hayward School. The NU Star entered the school as Tony Davis, football player. He left an hour later as Tony Davis, "Our Friend."

Hayward School, located a short distance from Memorial Stadium, is the home of Training for Occupational Proficiency, a program for mentally retarded young people, ages 13-18. Friday was Tony Davis Day at the school and the Husker's visit marked a special occasion out of which a special relationship grew.

At a full school assembly, Davis patiently and explicitly answered questions for perhaps 20 minutes before the effect of Tough Tony's presence was suddenly but clearly expressed.

He's My Friend

A young, mongoloid girl, 14-year old Jill, spontaneously jumped up among her schoolmates and chirped: "Tony Davis is the best football player and he's my friend."

With that, the entire group clapped and cheered in agreement.

Davis' visit also included an autograph session. Every student wanted one. Some got two. Davis signed the school's two footballs. He even autographed the underside of a pet turtle.

Posters had been prepared, saluting the Big Red fullback and Nebraska football in general. Most of the signs were mounted on the gymnasium walls but one received special attention. It was made by 15-year old Mark.

Mark was on the building's second floor when Davis arrived but spotted the gridder from the stairway.

"Hey Tough Tony," he yelled charging down the steps. "I've got something for you."

He presented Davis with his poster and recited its message: "Tony Davis, I trust you to win for Nebraska."

Remarkable Ability

Davis earned the new friendship tag. He took charge of the affair and showed a remarkable ability to understand the gist of the many questions asked of him. In turn, his questioners showed a keen knowledge of football.

"Are you going to play pro football," one youngster asked.

"I sure would like to," Davis replied.

"How come you don't wear stripes anymore?"

"We changed uniforms this year," Davis explained. "We now wear what are called mesh jerseys. They're cooler. The other jerseys were just too hot."

"Which is the best football team in the whole United States?"

"I think Nebraska is."

That answer brought a round of cheers.

Hayward students are trained in vocational skills so it wasn't unusual for one youngster to ask: "Tony Davis, do you have a boss?"

Tony's Boss

"Oh yes, I sure do. His name is Tom Osborne and he's over at that big stadium, not too far from here."

"What position do you play?"

"I play fullback. Do you know what a fullback is?"

Some nodded affirmatively. Others weren't so sure.

"A fullback runs with the ball, but he also does more blocking. Do you know what blocking is?"

Again the reactions varied.

"Blocking is when you run into someone real hard."

Not all responses came in the form of questions. Another student had a more personal observation.

"I bet Tony Davis is embarrassed to have all of those muscles under his shirt," the young man whispered to his teacher. "I bet he never takes his shirt off."

Davis, whose sister Jeannine teaches special education in New Jersey, exhibited a special sensitivity, different from the physical toughness he shows on the field.

"This is the kind of situation that makes you realize just how many gifts you have and that you have to use those gifts in the best possible way," he said after signing his name over and over.

"These kids really have a lot of love to share and they want to spread it around. I think it's important to show them that you care."

While Davis has become famous for the impact he can create on the playing field, he can also make an impact off the field.

Twenty minutes after the assembly had ended and Tony had gone, it was discovered that 14-year old Julie, a sensitive mongoloid lass, was not in her classroom.

She was quickly located, when found she was clutching her Tony Davis autograph and crying. An instructor asked her why.

"I'm just so happy, I can't stop," she replied.

That's what having a friend can mean.

Nebraska Defense Stumbles

Mission, Kan. — Nebraska slipped a bit in the football statistics for this week. Previously second in total defense, Nebraska's meeting with Oklahoma State dropped the Huskers to fourth.

Navy and Alabama moved ahead of Nebraska in the total defensive statistics.

Still in the No. 1 spot is Texas A&M, which is also on the top of the rushing defense list. According to charts from the NCAA Statistics Service, the College Station, Tex. crew has been consistently in the lead in defensive figures.

This is the fifth time in six weeks A&M has been the total defense leader and the fourth straight week coach Emory Bellard's team has been No. 1 in rushing defense.

The Aggies are yielding 169.0 total yards a game and only 62.8 rushing yards an outing.

Most of Texas A&M's defensive unit has been together for a long time, some as long as four years — since 1972, the first year of the freshman-eligible rule.

Georgia Tech retained its lead in rushing offense (395.2) and took over the top spot in total offense (442.5).

Texas stayed on top in scoring, averaging 36.3 points a game. The Longhorns have scored 218 points in six games, one more than Alabama and two more than Ohio State.

San Diego State stayed atop the passing offense category for the fifth straight week. The Aztecs are averaging 291.0 aerial yards a game.

East's Watters Wins Award

By RANDY YORK
Prep Sports Editor

Lincoln East quarterback Dave Watters' mastery of the two-minute drill earns the Spartan senior co-captain the Sunday Journal and Star's prep Player of the Week award.

With East trailing Lincoln Southeast 7-6 last week, Watters got his last offensive opportunity on his own seven-yard line with 1:37 remaining in the game.

Watters promptly hit seven of eight passes for 91 yards, including a 26-yard touchdown strike with 23 seconds remaining, to give third-ranked East a 12-7 victory.

Watters finished with 16 completions in 27 attempts for 169 yards and a touchdown. He rushed 17 times for 40 yards and scored East's other touchdown.

Others who will receive Player of the Week cards for outstanding performances last week include:

Don Miller, Minden — He caught a 34-yard touchdown pass with only four seconds remaining to transform a 14-13 deficit into a gigantic 20-14 upset win over previously unbeaten Ogallala. Miller also sprinted 23 yards for a first quarter touchdown to get things started for the Whippets, who had won only once in its previous six starts.

Dave Watters

Jeff Krejci, Schuyler — Quarterback hit 12 of 18 passes, including touchdown strikes of 21 and 28 yards, ran for a third touchdown and threw a two-point conversion pass in team's 20-14 victory over Crete.

Tom Doggett, Lincoln Pius X — Senior I-back rushed for 180 yards and scored on runs of 11, 12, 54 and 57 yards in top-ranked Class B Thunderbolts' homecoming cruise past Council Bluffs St Albert's.

Tim Wurth, Omaha Burke — Despite his team's one-point loss to powerful Omaha Westside, the state's leading Class A rusher accumulated 219 yards on 21 carries and scored two touchdowns.

Don Coleman, Gordon — Junior rushed for 116 yards on only 12 carries and scored three touchdowns — on a 70-yard run, a 33-yard pass and a 95-yard kickoff return — to give the Broncos a 28-27 Western Conference triumph over Sidney.

Bob Janda, St. Edward — Senior halfback, only 5-8 and 140 pounds, has rushed for 450 yards and scored seven touchdowns in team's last two games. Last week's touchdowns against Cedar Rapids came on runs of 18, 25 and 62 yards and an 85-yard punt return.

Lonnie Damme, Nemaha Valley — In a 34-14 homecoming win over Elmwood, this senior fullback converted from end rushed for 195 yards on nine carries, scored two touchdowns and had tackles totaling 23 yards in losses.

Ed Kohmetscher, Lawrence — In the first 15 minutes, he threw four scoring passes covering 11, 15, 16 and 50 yards as Class D-rated team dispatched Exeter, 27-0.

Pat Lierley, Ledgepole — Junior halfback (5-9, 147) rushed 28 times for 245 yards and scored five touchdowns on runs of 19, 29, 28, 45 and 6 yards in team's first win in seven games, 24-2, over Dix. He also participated in 11 tackles.

Mike Lee, Wheatland — Caught scoring passes of 38, 50 and 60 yards and tallied another touchdown on a three-yard run in team's lopsided win over Paxton.

Scott Freburg, Bertrand — Junior middle linebacker was credited with 14 solo tackles and two assists, intercepted a pass and ran for a touchdown against Beaver City.

Gary Ernst, Hastings St. Cecilia — Junior fullback rushed for 178 yards on 26 carries and scored three touchdowns (one on an 85-yard run) as Blue Hawks handled Geneva in surprisingly easy 33-8 fashion.

Bill Bruhn, Dawson-Verdon — Senior halfback rushed for 272 yards and six touchdowns (on runs of 40, 32, 50, 25, 8 and 4 yards) in eight-man team's 43-20 win at Table Rock.

Korey Brill, Bayard — Scored all three of team's touchdowns, one on an 83-yard fumble recovery, in Tigers' sixth straight win, 18-13 over Mitchell.

Rod Thayer, Wallace — Senior four-year starter was in on 20 tackles, knocked down two passes and caught a 40-yard pass to set up team's only touchdown in 6-6 tie against Maywood, assuring Wallace (4-1-1) its first winning season in more than a decade.

Greg Ericksen, Hampton — Senior end scored four touchdowns, three on passes of 30, 37 and 37 yards and one on a fumble recovery in the end zone, as Hawks downed Monroe, 50-22.

New F32 All Winter Radial

For A Firm Grip On Winter Without Studs

This is The Ice Radial Goodyear advertises on network TV. The Ice Radial that handles snow and slush, sleet and ice — without metal studs. One reason is a tread compound so flexible it keeps right on working when the weather hits zero. Another reason is Flexten cord — pound for pound, five times stronger than steel. Double Flexten cord belts and radial construction help keep the tread in firm, shoulder-to-shoulder contact on winter roads. For dependable performance in all kinds of weather, all season long, get the "F32 All Winter" Radial. Act now and save.

U.S. Sweeps Pool Events, Four Golds In Wrestling

MEXICO CITY (UPI) — The United States won all six pools events Tuesday, scoring sweeps in three, as Rick Colella and Kathy Heddy became double gold medalists at the Pan American Games.

Over at the wrestling arena, with the freestyle finals coming to a conclusion, the United States had picked up four gold medals midway through the contest through Lloyd Keaser of Annapolis, Md., in the 149-pound division; Gregory Hicks of Santa Ana, Calif., in the 191-pound class; Ben Peterson of Comstock, Wisc., at 198 pounds and Michael McCready of Dubuque, Iowa, in the 202 pounds and over division.

The big event at the pool was the defeat of Ecuador's Jorge Delgado in the men's 200 meters butterfly by Greg Jagenburg of West Chester, Pa., in 2:03.42, with Steve Gregg of Wilmington, Del., taking the silver in 2:04.06.

Delgado, who won the event at the world championships in Cali, Colombia, three months ago, predicted after his 100 meter freestyle victory Sunday he would win the 200 butterfly, "because it is my best event." But Jagenburg, 19, swept to the front at the first turn and that was it for the University of Southern Illinois student. Delgado faded over the final lap to be passed by Gregg and the American team went wild.

Miss Heddy, 17, added the 400 meter individual medley title to the 200 individual medley she won earlier at the Games by coming from behind with a storming final freestyle leg to win by about a half length from Canada's Cheryl Gibson in 5:06.05.

Of the nine Americans who won world titles in Cali, Miss Heddy, of Summit, N.J., is one of just two to join the Games team. Jenni Franks of Wilmington, Del., won the bronze medal.

Colella, at 23 one of the old men on the team, added the 200 meters breaststroke title to the 100 he won Sunday, when he led from start to finish to win by four lengths from Canada's Dave Neinbach and Gustavo Lozano of Mexico.

Apart from the 200 butterfly, the U.S. also scored sweeps in the men's 400 meter freestyle and the women's 100 meter butterfly.

Dough Northway of Tucson, Ariz., won the freestyle from teammate Bobby Hackett, the pre race favorite, by about 2½ lengths in 4:00.51, while Cathy Wright of New Albany, Ind., won the butterfly by threequarters of a length from Peggy Tosdal of Dana Point, Calif., in 1:02.71.

In the men's 200 meter backstroke, Dan Harrigan of Mishawaka, Ind., led all the way to defeat Canada's Mike Scartg and teammate Robert Jackson of San Jose by three lengths in 2:06.69.

With six of the seven races completed in the yachting events, the U.S. was assured of victory in the Lightning and Snipe classes, while a pair of Brazilian sailors won the Flying Dutchman series.

Bruce and Pam Goldsmith of Chicago, with Paul Adams as crew, were the Lightning winners, while the team of Jeff Lenhart of San Diego and Dave Ullman of Laguna Beach, Calif., took the Snipe series.

Midland Takes Offense Lead

Wayne and Kearney — the state's best defensive teams met at Wayne and both team's averages rose. Midland had a runaway with Dana and vaulted into first place in the offense race. The Warriors had a total of more than 650 yards in the contest.

Kearney's Antelopes won the NCC title with a 3-0 mark. Midland has a 3-0 record in the NIAC with Doane and Concordia with 2-1 marks. Concordia goes to Midland Saturday.

In individual races, Rod Schultz, Hastings and Bob Squires, Hastings are leaders in passing and pass receiving respectively. Schultz has a wide margin in total offense while Dave Burke, Kearney remains as rushing leader and Duane Fritz, Chadron as punter champion.

Miller Unhurt By Recession

New York (UPI) — You think the recession hurt you?

How about golfer Johnny Millers?

Miller, who pocketed $346,302 last year in PGA tour events, not counting a few extra bucks picked up in Pro-Arms, won "only" $226,118 on the 1975 tournament trail, some $120,184 less than in 1974.

That total left him in second place on the final money-won list to Jack Nicklaus, who cleared $298,149, according to the final PGA list released Tuesday.

In 1974, 276 players won money on the tour, with the low man pocketing $25. In 1975, the PGA coped with unemployment and inflation by having 296 players participate in tour events, with the low man winning $63.

'All's Fair . . .' Says Tackle

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — A Birmingham defensive tackle, Dick Trower, almost got by with dropping a penalty flag against Memphis in Birmingham's 21-0 World Fottball League victory Sunday.

Quarterback Danny White of Memphis was near the scrimmage line when he threw a long pass to Jim Kiick. An official was standing near White.

"I saw him go for the flag in his back pocket," Trower said, "but he didn't throw it. I was right beside him so I took it out of his pocket and looked around. I didn't think anyone was looking so I threw the flag myself."

Meanwhile, Kiick caught the ball on Birmingham's 8-yard line, and the confusion began.

Officials ran back upfield to find out why the flag had been dropped. The official whose flag was involved, rather than be embarrassed, started stating his case.

"Two or three Memphis players saw me get the flao out of the official's pocket, and they were ranting and raving," Trower said. "I told them we would do anything to win."

The confused official was overruled, Birmingham halted Memphis anyway and preserved the shutout.

Sooner Backs Sore

Oklahoma

Oklahoma had a better-than-usual Tuesday practice in its preparations for Saturday's Big Eight clash with Iowa State, according to head Coach Barry Switzer.

Switzer welcomed the return of No. 1 fullback Jim Littrell Tuesday, the first time Littrell had been back at full speed in two weeks.

Littrell returned just in time: Horace Ivory, who had been running in Littrell's place, was sidelined Tuesday and is not expected to play Saturday.

All-American halfback Joe Washington also is sidelined from practice with a bruised instep. He has been hampered for three weeks and has not been able to practice at full speed.

Offensive guard Terry Webb returned to practice Tuesday and is scheduled to start against the Cyclones.

Kansas State

With four starting offensive linemen out with injuries, it was back to basics Tuesday for Kansas State's football offense.

"We did a lot of fundamental work because of our young, and I mean young, and inexperienced offensive linemen," Coach Ellis Rainsberger said.

He elevated three freshmen and one sophomore to the offensive line to replace the four injured starters who may not make it to Missouri. And he had planned to redshirt the sophomore until next season, the coach said.

Also nursing bruises and soreness were quarterbacks Joe Hatcher and Tom Merrifield. Freshman Bob Suarez was moved up to the varsity behind them and may see action Saturday, Rainsberger said.

Missouri

Tony Galbreath's ankle acted up again Tuesday and the Missouri tailback missed the Tigers' football practice.

"Sunday his ankle was good, then he worked out Monday and it was sore Tuesday," Onofrio said. "It's still pretty much a day-to-day thing."

Iowa State

Iowa State football Coach Earle Bruce Tuesday elevated his two top freshmen running backs to the varsity as the Cyclones staged a two-hour drill.

They are preparing to face No. 2 rated Oklahoma Saturday at Norman.

Dexter Green, Woodbridge, Va., and Jeff Curry, Cincinati, Ohio, were brought up for trial shots and Bruce said both will make the trip Friday to Oklahoma City.

The two were impressive Monday as Iowa State's junior varsity romped to a 41-8 win against University of Nebraska at Omaha reserves. Green gained 219 yards rushing in nine carries while Curry carried the ball 13 times for 86 yards.

Sophomore quarterback Buddy Hardeman was held out of contact work for the second straight day and Bruce said his availability for the game against the Sooners is still uncertain.

Kansas

"We can't afford a mid-season slump," Kansas Coach Bud Moore said after Tuesday's football practice.

"We didn't look to sharp today though and we did not have a very good practice."

Moore said he wasn't worried about being last in the nation in passing offense.

"It's how effectively we throw and catch the ball that counts. Not how the other teams defend and how often we throw," he said. "We just need to make it count when we do throw."

Oklahoma State

Stillwater, Okla. (AP) — There were two new faces in the Oklahoma State starting lineups Tuesday as the Cowboys went through a two-hour practice in preparation for Saturday's Big Eight Conference game at Kansas.

Halfback Skip Taylor worked along side halfback Terry Miller, fullback Robert Turner and quarterback Scott Burk as the Pokes functioned out of the wishbone offense.

Taylor was given the promotion earlier in the week on the basis of his performance against Nebraska.

Defensively, linebacker Donnie Edwards was promoted to work with senior Brent Robinson.

Quarterback Charlie Weatherbie was dressed out in full pads, but took no part in the few drills held under full speed conditions.

"We're awfully beat up," said coach Jim Stanley. "We had four or five players having trouble practicing today."

"We're going to work like heck on the I formation this week," he said, "I think Kansas might use it more than the wishbone.

"As far as Nolan Cromwell is concerned, it doesn't make any difference what formation you run. He's probably the most dangerous option man in the league."

Stanley was concerned about his squad's physical condition, adding, "I hope we heal in a hurry. With the silly 48-man travel limit, we might have to practice people early in the week who won't even make the trip."

G&P Sets Friday Agenda

Possible effects of the upcoming special legislative session on operations of the Game and Parks Commission is among items slated for discussion by the Commissioners at their Friday meeting.

The meeting will begin at 8:30 a.m. on the third floor of the agency's headquarters in Lincoln.

Other items on the agenda include discussion of the fire hazard associated with upcoming hunting seasons. The Commissioners will also deal with proposed land acquisitions, including Gifford Tract Land near Bellevue, and a tract along the Niobrara River in Cherry County.

The agenda includes the Commission's legislative program for 1976, discussion of a special bicentennial issue of NEBRASKAland Magazine, and the approval of names for several new wildlife areas in Deuel, Keith, Lincoln, Dawson, and Hall counties.

Abductors Threaten To Slay Industrialist

MONASTEREVIN, Ireland (AP) — Heavily armed soldiers and police set up flood lights Tuesday night for their vigil at the house where kidnapers held a Dutch industrialist threatening to "blow his head off."

Three policemen on the ground floor of the house in this sleepy market town pleaded with the kidnapers on the second floor to release Tiede Herrema but they received curses and abuse, authorities said.

An official spokesman said the kidnapers had made no new demands since police and troopers stormed the house early Tuesday. "They have simply refused to give up Dr. Herrema and come out," he said. "There have been no further moves."

The kidnapers, believed to be Irish Republican Army guerrillas Eddie Gallagher and Marion Coyle, seized Herrema 18 days ago, demanding that the Irish government release three other IRA members from jail.

A squad of troopers smashed down the front door of the two-story house 40 miles west of Dublin and police officers led by Supt. John Fleming of Dublin's special branch force charged in, a police spokesman said.

The kidnapers fired five shots at the assault group but no one was hit, police reported. The assault team did not fire back.

The kidnapers retreated to an upstairs bedroom holding a gun to Herrema's head.

A short while later, a man who appeared to be the 26-year-old Gallagher shoved Herrema up to a window of the house and jammed a pistol against his head and yelled: "He's a dead man if you try anything!"

Police officers at the scene said Gallagher later shouted that he had tied explosives to himself and would blow up the house if security forces tried to rescue the 53-year-old Herrema.

"We're negotiating with the kidnapers for Herrema's release, but it's very touchy," a police spokesman reported.

Demo Sanford Said Qualified For U.S. Funds

Raleigh, N.C. (UPI) — Democratic presidential hopeful Terry Sanford said he has qualified for federal matching funds, hired a new campaign manager and "reached a turning point" in his campaign.

Sanford, president of Duke University, said he qualified for the matching campaign funds sometime between mid-September and Oct. 10 by raising $5,000 in contributions of $250 or less in at least 20 separate states.

He said he had not previously announced his qualification for the funds — available Jan. 1 — because "it's not really important because anybody can qualify" if they're willing to direct their campaign in that direction.

3 Of 4 To Be Small

Detroit (AP) — General Motors Chairman Thomas A. Murphy predicts nearly three of every four cars the giant auto company sells by 1980 will be in the weight class of today's compact.

Marina Bought By Restaurateur For $200,000

William Hagerty, Lincoln developer and restaurateur, has bought the Guy Dean Lakeshore Marina for $200,000.

Hagerty, who has been leasing the Yacht Club lounge and dining room at the marina, said he plans to refurbish the club and keep the marina boat shop open all year. A major boat show is planned in February, he said.

Earlier this month Hagerty sold 50 acres in northwest Lincoln to developer Marv Copple for $831,500.

Hagerty also owns and operates Arrow Inn Restaurant and Lounge at 1339 West O St.

Banquet Slated For U.N. Day

The United Nations Association of Lincoln will hoid its annual U.N. Day banquet at 6:30 p.m. Friday in the Nebraska Center, 33rd and Holdrege.

The banquet is held every year to commemorate the ratification of the U.N. charter on Oct. 24, 1945.

This year's speaker will be Jack M. Smith, executive director of the Stanley Foundation, an organization which promotes study and research into foreign affairs, said Sheryl Edwards, the association's publicity chairwoman. He will speak on current issues before the U.N.

Foreign students attending local universities, and Lt. Gov. and Mrs. Gerald Whelan are among those expected to attend the banquet, she said.

Tampa Grandma Jailed For Sale Of Pornography

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — A Tampa grandmother was sentenced Tuesday to 90 days in jail and was fined $1,000 for selling a pornographic magazine to an undercover policeman.

Ruth Burns, 59, was convicted by a six-member jury last week of selling the publication to a Tampa vice squad detective while she worked as a cashier at an adult book store.

In handing down sentence, Hillsborough County Judge Morton Hanlon noted that it was Mrs. Burns' third conviction for selling obscene material.

ADC Or 'Prostitution'? Hearing Set

By WES ALBERS
Star Staff Writer

A U.S. District Court judge Tuesday declined to order Lincoln County authorities to begin aid to dependent children (ADC) payments to a 17-year-old girl who contends the director of public welfare has declared her eligible for them.

But Judge Robert Van Pelt set the matter for further hearing Oct. 31, saying there are "great social reasons" why welfare authorities should have resolved the girl's case earlier.

"Nothing pushes a mother into prostitution more easily than a delinquency in ADC payments," he said. "That's a great but brutal truth."

Van Pelt denied requests by the girl's attorneys that he issue a restraining order preventing a meeting between the girl and welfare authorities Wednesday and that he order ADC payments to begin Nov. 1.

The 17-year-old North Platte girl applied to the Lincoln County welfare board for ADC benefits, was declared ineligible and appealed her case to state welfare officials.

Alan Ihms, public welfare director, declared the girl eligible Sept. 8, but ADC payments were not begun.

Carroll Lucht, a Legal Aid Society lawyer representing the girl, told the court 43 days have passed since she was declared eligible, "a long delay sufficient to support a restraining order."

County authorities did not appeal Ihms' decision within the 30-day limit, thus depriving the girl of benefits without due process, he contended.

Lucht said $210 per month payments should have started Aug. 1 and payments for "substantial medical, hospital and doctor bills" incurred when she gave birth in September also were withheld.

He asked the court to order payments to be started by Nov. 1.

Ewald Warnsholz, Public Welfare Dept. general counsel, argued that county authorities withheld payments because they believed Ihms made his decision "without all the facts."

Warnsholz said the girl has returned from a Lincoln foster home to her parents' home in North Platte and so may not be eligible for payments.

The hearing between the girl and welfare authorities Wednesday will determine her eligibility, he said.

Van Pelt said he will "order payment promptly" if arguments at the Oct. 31 hearing indicate the girl still is being deprived of payments for which she is eligible.

Texas-Sized Tale Of Toad

Eastland, Tex. (UPI) — One of the more colorful tales of west Texas concerns a horned toad and the county courthouse built in 1897.

According to the tale, many citizens watched a young boy slip the toad into a box which was placed into the cornerstone of the courthouse when it was built. In 1928, 31 years later, the building was torn down and the box removed; and allegedly the toad was still alive enough to hop.

The frog became so famous it paid a visit to then-President Calvin Coolidge at the White House, but died a few months later of what was diagnosed as pneumonia. Its casket still remains in the new county courthouse.

Deer Jaw Cut Corn

New York (UPI) — Genuine Indian succotash was made with corn plus beans, peas or pumpkin, flavored with bear meat or peaches and squash or maple sugar. A recipe attributed to the Iroquois and published in Ottawa, Can., in 1916 directed the cook to cut the corn from the cob with half of a deer's jaw.

Perfect Garden's Crop Less Than Bountiful

By JANE BRYANT QUINN

Jane Bryant Quinn

Chappaqua, N.Y — Last spring, I planted a vegetable garden to save money on food That really was my plan — to save us some money. I was moved by the romance of fresh vegetables spilling onto the plates of eager children Beautiful vegetables, bursting with flavor, fragance and vitamins

Never having grown vegetables before, I decided to plant everything just to see what it looked like Corn, carrots, cucumbers, peas, beans, squash, brocooli, cauliflower, lettuce, cabbage, spinach, radishes, eggplant, peppers, scallions, tomatoes, celery and melons The works

Columbus discovered America with less planning than went into that garden Planting dates, heights in relation to sun, days to maturity succession plantings, yields early and late lettuce, squash under the corn the way the Indians did it The perfect garden — foolproof and failsafe

All I can say is that I'm glad the Plymouth Colony wasn't depending on my garden, or the Pilgrims never would have made it through the first winter Here are some of the ways I failed to save money

—Ripeness Dates. It says on the back of the seed packets how long it takes for the vegetables to mature Those dates are about as reliable as the maturity dates of New York City notes. Everything took a week or two longer than the packet said. This wiped out a lot of my cleverly planted succession plantings. Crop loss one fifth.

—Germination. Just because you fertilize a seed, water it and talk nicely to it doesn't mean it will return your friendship. The broccoli and cauliflower never came up, although I planted them twice Melons arose like teenagers — midseason — and too late to do anything The fall lettuce slept right through. In my neighbor's garden, however, all these things grew nicely. Crop loss one tenth. Most valuable lesson learned· Don't plant a garden right next to your neighbor s

—Freshness. One of the really great things about vegeatble gardens is that whatever grows can come fresh from soil to table Unless, of course, 50 squashes ripen at once The first are terrific The next few tolerable and the rest rot For rotting in the crisper it s cheaper to buy vegetables at a store Crop loss. one twentieth

—Bugs. My partner in gardening believes in organic methods Nothing but unadulterated poisons for our crop. When maggots got the first radishes, he discovered that wood ash would kill them. I, the skeptic, had more faith in Diazinon So we ran a test Another row of radishes went in — planted partly with wood-ash, partly with Diazinon and partly with no protection at all

The results which I hope will settle this question once and for all nothing works The maggots got everything On the advance of a sympathetic reader, I tried radishes again this fall, with no luck But it really don t matter — my corner store carries good radishes

The slugs also did pretty well for themselves Organic gardeners fight them with beer But after two weeks of running down to the garden every morning to give the slugs their daily belt, you begin to wonder if that is a suitable occupation for a grown-up. Let's hear it for slug pellets Crop loss from bugs: one twentieth

—Teasers. Some crops sprout, blossom, start to fruit, then change their minds at the last minute. Our corn, for example, was all failed promise; carrots, splendid tops over misshapen bottoms; peppers, big leaves and underdeveloped fruit. The spinach bolted almost immediately. The celery was tough. All traitorous plants — having their fun, then cutting you out. Crop loss from betrayal: one fifth

—Results. So what came of my foolproof garden? Tomatoes and squash, and beans and squash, and lettuce and squash, and cucumbers and squash

Of course, all that produce wasn't free There were expenses — gardening books, tools, fences, fertilizer, mulch and seed. And my Saturdays, spent in honest toil.

I estimate that I got about $20 worth of produce from my garden this summer — about two fifths of what I had originally expected For that bounteous harvest, I spent only $64 45. Salads ran about $2 a plate, beans, $1 a helping

So now we're down to the bottom-line question Will I do it again next year? Of course, I will That's because next year I won't make any of this year's mistakes. My garden will at last be foolproof

Stop in around mid-August, and I'll give you some of my extra squash

Encouraging Signs Boost Stock Prices

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market, encouraged by signs of easier money and an improving economy, pushed ahead Tuesday in the heaviest trading in more than a month.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials added 4.57 to its 10.07 gain Monday to close at 846.82.

Standard & Poor's 500-stock index rose .74 to 90.56, and the New York Stock Exchange composite index was up .39 at 47.91.

Gainers outpaced losers 971 to 454 among the 1,854 issues traded on the NYSE.

Big Board volume came to 20 80 million shares, up from 13 25 million Monday and the heaviest total since Sept 19, when 20 83 million changed hands.

Some key short term interest rates declined markedly during the day following Federal Reserve transactions which were interpreted as another step by the Fed to loosen up its credit policy.

The decline added to hopes that a downswing in the bank prime lending rate might be in the offing

Most major banks are currently posting an 8 per cent rate on the basic charge for business loans, although a small St. Louis bank recently cut its prime to 7¾

Analysts also noted continuing enthusiasm over the government's report Monday of the biggest quarterly jump in the Gross National Product in 20 years

And Wall Street seemed generally optimistic about the consumer price index for September, which is due to be issued Wednesday morning

Despite those pluses, it was evident that the market was meeting with some profit taking pressure after its rise to a three-month closing high on Monday.

Bank Reports Reflect Rise In Assets

By United Press International

Officials of a group of 10 affiliated banks located in seven Nebraska communities with main offices located in Lincoln Tuesday released financial reports on six of the banks.

The reports, reflecting increases in total assets and accounts as well as decreases in outstanding loans in three cases, were issued for the Kearney First National Bank, Fremont First State Bank, the Overland National Bank of Grand Island, Hastings City National Co , the Fremont First National Bank and the North Platte State Bank

Net earnings for North Platte were pegged at $172,265 for the first nine months of this year, up 28% from a year ago

Assets totaled $17,798,512, compared to $17,282,425 a year ago and deposits were up 4% at $14,975,560 Loans of $9,239,523 outstanding represented a decline of 10%

Fremont First National Co announced a dividend of 20 cents per share based on net earnings for the first nine months of 1975 of $557,623 compared to $479,694 a year ago

Assets increased from $56,-057,285 to $59,274,705 while deposits increased 9 4% to $51,-558,062 Loans increased 8% to $31,994,231.

Because Hastings City National Co acquired the City National Bank of Hastings during the second quarter of 1974, there are no comparative three quarter earnings figures available. Net earnings for the three quarters of this year were pegged at $289,606 and assets were $63,388,567 for the period.

Deposits for the bank increased 6 7% to $53,873,045 while outstanding loans showed an increase to $29,496,043

Grand Island Overland earnings for the first nine months were up 23% to $319,608 Total assets were up from $50,651,594 to $52,402,020. Deposits increased 8 5% to $43,561,931 while loans decreased 5% to $33,164,867.

Fremont First State Co. net earnings were $121,999 compared to $125,841 for the first nine months of last year. Assets totaled $14,312,253, compared to $13,730,552 a year ago. Deposits were up 4% to $12,230,914 while loans were down about $500,000 to $7,215,026

Kearney First National Co. assets increased 15% to $51,012,-021 while deposits were up 20% to $44,899,662. Loans increased 14% to $32,514,618 and net earnings were up to $364,459 compared to $302,767 a year ago.

Fandangle Has 30-Year-Long Run

Albany, Tex. (UPI) — The Ft. Griffin Fandangle has been staged by local residents the last two weekends in June for the past 30 years

The play depicts life in early west Texas, and the cast includes longhorn steers, buffalo and stagecoaches.

Grains Tumble To Limit Losses

Chicago (AP) — Grain futures tumbled for limit losses on the Chicago Board of Trade Tuesday despite the signing of a five year deal with Russia to buy grain from the United States.

Soybeans lost 20 cents a bushel and soybean oil 100 points, or 1 cent a pound Both were limit declines Corn touched the limit of 10 cents a bushel lower but closed 8¼ lower. Wheat lost 17 cents, 3 short of a limit and oats were down 4½. Soybean meal declined $4 a ton Iced broilers lost 1 cent a pound, on selling linked with red meat futures.

Domestic gold futures showed, some independent strength early but it dissipated and prices closed about $1 an ounce lower

New Visual System Teaches Deaf To Speak

(EDITOR'S NOTE: Without first hearing a language, it is extremely difficult, sometimes impossible to learn to speak it. Shota Ushio of the Tokyo bureau of McGraw-Hill World News reports on a new system that has made startling progress in teaching the deaf.)

By SHOTA USHIO

Tokyo—It takes years, sometimes decades, to train the deaf to speak. But the whole situation may change in Japan, where a group of experts with government funding has come up with a visual system designed to indicate what went right and what went wrong in the process of the deaf learning Japanese speech.

The group started by breaking down the art of speech into seven elements. Members of the 46-person team then developed seven gadgets, each intended to display success or failure to acquire individual skills, and this in turn led to development of the basic learning system. Despite the relatively modest investment requirement, $3,300 to $6,000 excluding a computer, the system promises to cut the training time drastically to about a year, says Sadao Shibata, a researcher at the National Rehabilitation Center for Speech and Hearing Disorder and a leading member of the group.

Shibata demonstrated recently what kind of progress a deaf child makes by using the system. The before-and-after comparison, recorded by video tape recorder, indicated that the child, after several sessions of practice, learned to say — comprehensively to most — "There was a boy in a place." Uttering these simple words may seem a modest step toward mastering the ability to speak a language, Shibata explained. But, he added, such progress would take years if the conventional, man-to-man method were employed without help of machine.

One apparatus shows the basic thinking behind the system: reliance on visual display for demonstrating to both the instructor, who needs no special training, and the trainee what went right and wrong. A plastic mouthpiece (palate), ordermade to the specifications of the individual trainee, has about 60 holes where tiny electrodes are installed. As the tongue touches specific spots on the artificial mouthpiece in order to utter specific words, this is indicated by flashes on the screen, with weak and safe electric current (on the volt) connecting the plastic plate and the screen. The deaf trainee can then see his or her accomplishment.

A computer is involved in this step to cope with saliva, which is blamed for sending false signals even when the tongue is not contacting the right spots on the palate. Studies now include attempts to replace an expensive large-capacity computer with an inexpensive mini-computer designed solely for teaching the deaf.

Other gadgets that are mostly readily available include: A fiberscope, connected to another screen, for showing mastering nasal sounds; x-ray equipment, (designed for limited use) for checking the tongue's movement; and still another screen to indicate levels of both pitch accent and loudness. One training session involves only one of the seven speech elements. In the palate-tongue training, over 20 sessions, each 45 minutes or so, are required for the deaf to master this particular skill, according to the center.

Altogether, Shibata estimates a year will be required with the system to help the deaf with most serious speech difficulties. Training can start when the patient is four years old.

Current efforts are designed to improve hardware, including development of easy-to-handle, completely fail-safe gadgets so laymen can benefit from the system, and wider applications for, among others, adults losing speech ability due to stroke. An estimated 200,000 Japanese have hearing difficulties while another 500,000 are estimated to have speech problems.

DALE CARNEGIE COURSE

Presented by Peter Behnes & Assoc. 1213 M Lincoln, Nebraska

POSTCARD by Stan Delaplane

San Francisco — "Let us crown ourselves with rosebuds before they be withered." That was said by the wise Solomon, a chap who had sense enough to come in out of the rain

When the first rains mark the end of our endless summer, the first thing we do is check the ceiling for leaks If it is not (God bless the house!) we're good for another year

This scatter is OK I rent it, that's why If I owned it, it would be Sieve City. When I was buying a house, we practically had to carry umbrellas inside the place We put pans at strategic places During the night we could hear the plop, plop, plop of raindrops coming through the roof

That was another reason I went back to renting I looked forward to the ceremony of burning of the mortgage " With all the carrot Vitamin A, I could see forever But I could not see the end of the payments

If we had ever reached the end, I would bet the mortgage was fire proof

☆ ☆ ☆

When I put the down payment on that little home on the prairie, the real estate man congratulated me

"This is one of the best buys on today's market," he said

When I wanted to sell it a few years later, he said "I've never seen such a depressed market You may be asking too much Doesn't the roof leak?"

Didn't the roof leak? It surely did — and it had been leaking when I made the down payment. I made it on a dry day

When it began leaking during the rainy winter, I got in a roof man He puttered around pouring on tar and gravel This only stopped off the water at one point It ran over to the other side of the roof and burst through there

☆ ☆ ☆

The roof man said "It must have something to do with the way the contractor built this house."

I said "Roof man, you mean he built it with holes on top? That's ridiculous "

He said "You have no idea what some contractors will do until you've been in the roofing business as long as I have "

We finally got the leak cornered and put a permanent pan under it It was in the room I had turned into an office

But everybody said "It's only in his office He doesn't spend all the time in there Besides it only rains in the winter "

☆ ☆ ☆

I had that house for eight years and never got the leak fixed I even bought a book on home repairs I climbed up on a shaky ladder and took a look at the roof

The children invited their friends over "Our father is going to climb up on the roof and fall off and break his neck "

Not everybody has such an entertaining father And me up there like one of the Flying Wallendas. Without a net.

☆ ☆ ☆

As soon as I sold that place — I sold it in the dry summer — raindrops stopped falling on my head

I live in a rented condominium apartment built over Snug Harbor At night I can hear the harbor underneath — swish, swish But when it rains, not a drop comes through Suddenly I am waterproof

Abductors Threaten To Slay Industrialist

MONASTEREVIN, Ireland (AP) — Heavily armed soldiers and police set up flood lights Tuesday night for their vigil at the house where kidnapers held a Dutch industrialist threatening to "blow his head off."

Three policemen on the ground floor of the house in this sleepy market town pleaded with the kidnapers on the second floor to release Tiede Herrema but they received curses and abuse, authorities said.

An official spokesman said the kidnapers had made no new demands since police and troopers stormed the house early Tuesday. "They have simply refused to give up Dr. Herrema and come out," he said. "There have been no further moves."

The kidnapers, believed to be Irish Republican Army guerrillas Eddie Gallagher and Marion Coyle, seized Herrema 18 days ago, demanding that the Irish government release three other IRA members from jail.

A squad of troopers smashed down the front door of the two-story house 40 miles west of Dublin and police officers led by Supt. John Fleming of Dublin's special branch force charged in, a police spokesman said.

The kidnapers fired five shots at the assault group but no one was hit, police reported. The assault team did not fire back.

The kidnapers retreated to an upstairs bedroom holding a gun to Herrema's head.

A short while later, a man who appeared to be the 26-year-old Gallagher shoved Herrema up to a window of the house and jammed a pistol against his head and yelled: "He's a dead man if you try anything!"

Police officers at the scene said Gallagher later shouted that he had tied explosives to himself and would blow up the house if security forces tried to rescue the 53-year-old Herrema.

"We're negotiating with the kidnapers for Herrema's release, but it's very touchy," a police spokesman reported.

Demo Sanford Said Qualified For U.S. Funds

Raleigh, N.C. (UPI) — Democratic presidential hopeful Terry Sanford said he has qualified for federal matching funds, hired a new campaign manager and "reached a turning point" in his campaign.

Sanford, president of Duke University, said he qualified for the matching campaign funds sometime between mid-September and Oct. 10 by raising $5,000 in contributions of $250 or less in at least 20 separate states.

He said he had not previously announced his qualification for the funds — available Jan. 1 — because "it's not really important because anybody can qualify" if they're willing to direct their campaign in that direction.

3 Of 4 To Be Small

Detroit (AP) — General Motors Chairman Thomas A. Murphy predicts nearly three of every four cars the giant auto company sells by 1980 will be in the weight class of today's compact.

Marina Bought By Restaurateur For $200,000

William Hagerty, Lincoln developer and restaurateur, has bought the Guy Dean Lakeshore Marina for $200,000.

Hagerty, who has been leasing the Yacht Club lounge and dining room at the marina, said he plans to refurbish the club and keep the marina boat shop open all year. A major boat show is planned in February, he said.

Earlier this month Hagerty sold 50 acres in northwest Lincoln to developer Marv Copple for $831,500.

Hagerty also owns and operates Arrow Inn Restaurant and Lounge at 1339 West O St.

Banquet Slated For U.N. Day

The United Nations Association of Lincoln will hold its annual U.N. Day banquet at 6:30 p.m. Friday in the Nebraska Center, 33rd and Holdrege.

The banquet is held every year to commemorate the ratification of the U.N. charter on Oct. 24, 1945.

This year's speaker will be Jack M. Smith, executive director of the Stanley Foundation, an organization which promotes study and research into foreign affairs, said Sheryl Edwards, the association's publicity chairwoman. He will speak on current issues before the U.N.

Foreign students attending local universities, and Lt. Gov. and Mrs. Gerald Whelan are among those expected to attend the banquet, she said.

Tampa Grandma Jailed For Sale Of Pornography

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — A Tampa grandmother was sentenced Tuesday to 90 days in jail and was fined $1,000 for selling a pornographic magazine to an undercover policeman.

Ruth Burns, 59, was convicted by a six-member jury last week of selling the publication to a Tampa vice squad detective while she worked as a cashier at an adult book store.

In handing down sentence, Hillsborough County Judge Morton Hanlon noted that it was Mrs. Burns' third conviction for selling obscene material.

DAILY CRYPTOQUOTE – Here's how to work it:

A X Y D L B A A X R
is L O N G F E L L O W

One letter simply stands for another. In this sample A is used for the three L's, X for the two O's, etc. Single letters, apostrophes, the length and formation of the words are all hints. Each day the code letters are different.

ASTROLOGICAL FORECAST

☆ By SIDNEY OMARR ☆

Forecast For Wednesday

At The Track: The Taurus jockey finds room, gets racing luck. The Aries rider comes in on the favorites, while long-short players will be delighted with the Capricorn jockey. Aries spectators should stick with number 9. Virgo could win with 6. Leo might show a profit by persisting with number 5. If you cannot make it to the track, check with your daily newspaper sports page for results. You might be amazed at how astrology can make the "sport of kings" more interesting, entertaining and, perhaps, more profitable.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): You get means which enable you to be more original, independent, forthright and forceful. Leo, Aquarius persons could be in picture. Accent is on what you own, how to profit by it and protect it. Don't be too trusting!

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): What seems an unnecessary delay actually will work to your advantage. Know it and time your moves. Realize that you can actually learn through teaching process. Aquarian who aided in past could make reappearance.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): The more you ask, the more answers you are likely to obtain. Give full play to intellectual curiosity. Keep diet resolutions. If careless, you lose. You can get backing from special organization if you present blueprint of goals, aspirations.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): If realistic, wish is fulfilled. If childish, you will be doing lots of talking while accomplishing little or nothing. The choice is your own. Aquarius, Leo, Scorpio persons figure in picture. Be specific. Deal with facts and figures, not fantasies.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Open lines of communication with professional superior. Make known feelings, views. Be positive, analytical and direct. You have right to explain position — and perhaps even a duty. Gemini, Virgo and Taurus persons could figure prominently.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Family member who travels, studies may seek your counsel. Be diplomatic. Avoid any tendency to be arrogant. Domestic adjustment is in picture. Taurus, Libra individuals could be features. Your ability to sense potentisl is highlighted. Trust your ESP.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Accent continues on occult, hidden affairs, money that affects partner or mate. See as is, not in light of wishful thinking. Avoid tendency toward self-deception. You get unusual opportunity to perfect techniques. Pisces, Virgo could be involved.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Accent on closing legal transaction. You get down to business. Game playing is over — it is now the real thing, and stakes are substantial. Nothing is apt to be tepid; it is hot or cold, all or nothing. Capricorn figures pominently.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Work that seemed never-ending does reach a conclusion. You will be congratulated on job well done. Aries, Libra individuals cold be very much in picture. Find ways to enhance visibility of product, talent. You are due to attract larger audience.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Get to core — express and create. Your style, impressions attract more persons. Personal magnetism flows. You could be more popular — and controversial. Member of opposite sex confides, confesses and asks for your understanding.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Basic issues dominate, especially where residence and family are concerned. Don't play games with security. Obtain legal green light, guarantee. Older individual might share valuable experience. Be adult enough to accept help if you need it.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Travel, decisions, calls, ideas and messages seem to converge simultaneously. Obviously, the need is to be flexible, versatile. You expand base of operations. Life becomes more interesting due to social contact. Gain indicated through written word.

IF TODAY IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you are dynamic, stubborn, were on your own early, have original concepts and find that Scorpio persons play important roles in your life. You are entering a new phase, a fresh cycle — many past disappointments fade as you have chance at real happiness. You're going to get more authority and will prove your principles are valid.

Here is a pleasant little game that will give you a message every day. It's a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner of the rectangle and check every one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.

An Open Door To Better Health

The blood test. That was the worst part.

Just ask Spencer Robinson or any of the other approximately 160 Lincoln elementary school students who received free physical examinations at the Open Door Health Center earlier this month.

Having your finger pricked is nobody's idea of a good time. But doctors, nurses and other grown-ups seem to think it's the thing to do — or have done. And so it was.

They also think it's a good idea to wrap a strange looking bandage around your arm, pump it full of air and listen to your—arm? Blood pressure check, they call it.

From a child's point of view, the Open Door physicals — which are offered annually to children attending Title I (low income) schools — are an eye-widening experience.

In addition to the usual tests associated with a physical examination, the children are given a dental examination (including instruction in toothbrushing), and vision, hearing and speech screening.

This year, the fourth for the physicals, it took four weekday evenings to squeeze in all 160 youngsters scheduled to participate.

According to Open Door Director Leslie Rutherford, about 90 people volunteered their time to help with the exams. Most of the volunteers were professionals — doctors, nurses, lab technicians, dentists, dental hygienists, medical technologists, optometrists and members of the University of Nebraska-Lincoln department of speech and hearing.

All of the supplies used during the examinations were also donated, Ms. Rutherford said.

As a follow-up to the screenings, Open Door staff members will go to each of the youngster's homes to explain the results of the tests, she continued.

If a problem has been detected, Open Door staff members will then help parents locate the appropriate professional assistance, Ms. Rutherford said.

In addition, to ensure that the examination findings "stay with the child," the results are recorded on the youngster's public schools medical record.

Funded by the United Fund and the Lincoln Foundation, Open Door conducts the annual physical screenings in cooperation with the Lincoln public schools.

Sunday Journal and Star

ACTION LINE

DIAL 477-2121

Or Write P.O. Box 81689, Lincoln, NE 68501

We have a contract signed by Martin Roofing saying that an Orville Martin would install a roof on our house March 1 or when weather permitted. We gave him a check for $255, which was cashed immediately. We have not been able to contact him since then. We are trying to live on a pension and can't afford to just give money away. Can you help?

—C. R. Rasmussen, Lincoln

ACTION LINE: Your problem apparently is not an uncommon one. Jerry Fennell, head of the state attorney general's office consumer protection division, said his office currently is investigating complaints against several roofing companies in the Lincoln area. At least one man being investigated has used several aliases in taking payment for roofing work that is never completed. Fennell suggests that you write or call his office to report your complaint.

The Lincoln Better Business Bureau has an unresolved complaint against Orville Martin, who listed the address of Martin Roofing as 5736 Judson. A spokesman for the bureau says they have been unable to contact Martin at that address and understand that he has moved or left town. You could also file your complaint with the Better Business Bureau.

The spokesman reminded customers that they can always call or write the bureau before they contract for such work to see whether there have been complaints against the firm or individual.

We had a discussion about the "Big Dipper." Do the people in Germany, France and the rest of the world ever get to see it?

—P.H., Swanton

ACTION LINE: The group of stars commonly known as the Big Dipper is visible in most inhabited areas of the world, according to Don Taylor, associate professor of physics and astronomy at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln. Persons in Europe on about the same longitude as Nebraska see it just as you do. Its position in the sky changes as the seasons change. Persons in the southern hemisphere, such as in South America and Africa, also see the Big Dipper but it appears much closer to the horizon there. The only location from which the Big Dipper cannot be seen is near the South Pole.

Are there any laws in Lincoln regarding the age at which a minor child can be left at home without a babysitter?

—A.G., Lincoln

ACTION LINE: There are no Lincoln city ordinances or state laws on leaving minor children alone in the home, according to Diana Bloss, deputy county attorney. If the county attorney's office receives a complaint that minor children are being left alone frequently, the complaint would be investigated and the parents might be charged with neglect of a child, she said.

I bought a new Gibson guitar from Dietze Music in Lincoln. While it was still under warranty, the paint started migrating. I was told it would have to be sent to the factory and would be returned in eight or nine weeks. That was May 10, and I still haven't got my guitar. Would you please see what you can do for me?

—Roy W. Williams, Waverly

ACTION LINE: Doug Fenton Jr., guitar department manager for Dietze Music House, 1208 O St., says he's as frustrated by the delay as you are. Fenton said he has contacted the Gibson Co. about the repairs each time you have inquired. He contacted Gibson's repair foreman again Oct. 21 and was promised that the guitar would be returned by Oct. 28. Fenton asks that you check with him on that date. Please contact ACTION LINE again if the problem isn't resolved.

I have a National Defense Student Loan with Oklahoma State University. I mailed in several payments without receiving a statement from them. They mistakenly applied the payments to the principal and considered the regular due interest payments delinquent. Now I have been billed for the total balance of the loan plus $18 in late fees. I've written them twice but can't get any satisfaction.

—Harold Williams Jr., Sterling, Colo.

ACTION LINE: The Oklahoma State University Office of Student Financial Aid understandably was reluctant to give any information about your loan to anyone but you. Mrs. Betty Hazelbaker, assistant director of financial aid for administrative services, suggested that you send a registered letter to her personally explaining your problem. Her mailing address is Oklahoma State University, Dept. of Student Financial Aid, Room 102 Hanner Hall, Stillwater, Okla. 74074.

I would like to know the address of the Robert Blake fan club. Thank you.

—Laurie Umbulls, Lincoln

ACTION LINE: Margo Boettiger, Robert Blake's secretary for ABC televison's "Baretta," said a fan club recently has been organized. You can get information by writing Robert Blake Fan Club, P.O. Box 36371, Los Angeles, Calif. 90036.

On Nov. 19, 1974, I sent an order for three gift subscriptions and one renewal for myself for the magazine "Women's Circle Home Cooking" published by Tower Press, Inc., of Seabrook, N.H. My check was canceled but none of us have received even one copy. I wrote the company and was assured we could begin receiving our magazines in July. Can you help me, please?

—Mrs. Clarence E. Boo, Geneva

ACTION LINE: Your magazines are on the way. A spokesman for Tower Press said your order inadvertently was never added to their mailing list. She apologized and promised to send you a letter this week telling you when to expect your first issues.

DAILY CRYPTOQUOTE – Here's how to work it:

A X Y D L B A A X R
is L O N G F E L L O W

One letter simply stands for another. In this sample A is used for the three L's, X for the two O's, etc. Single letters, apostrophes, the length and formation of the words are all hints. Each day the code letters are different.

ASTROLOGICAL FORECAST

☆ By SIDNEY OMARR ☆

Forecast For Wednesday

At The Track: The Taurus jockey finds room, gets racing luck. The Aries rider comes in on the favorites, while long-short players will be delighted with the Capricorn jockey. Aries spectators should stick with number 9. Virgo could win with 6. Leo might show a profit by persisting with number 5. If you cannot make it to the track, check with your daily newspaper sports page for results. You might be amazed at how astrology can make the "sport of kings" more interesting, entertaining and, perhaps, more profitable.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): You get means which enable you to be more original, independent, forthright and forceful. Leo, Aquarius persons could be in picture. Accent is on what you own, how to profit by it and protect it. Don't be too trusting!

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): What seems an unnecessary delay actually will work to your advantage. Know it and time your moves. Realize that you can actually learn through teaching process. Aquarian who aided in past could make reappearance.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): The more you ask, the more answers you are likely to obtain. Give full play to intellectual curiosity. Keep diet resolutions. If careless, you lose. You can get backing from special organization if you present blueprint of goals, aspirations.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): If realistic, wish is fulfilled. If childish, you will be doing lots of talking while accomplishing little or nothing. The choice is your own. Aquarius, Leo, Scorpio persons figure in picture. Be specific. Deal with facts and figures, not fantasies.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Open lines of communication with professional superior. Make known feelings, views. Be positive, analytical and direct. You have right to explain position — and perhaps even a duty. Gemini, Virgo and Taurus persons could figure prominently.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Family member who travels, studies may seek your counsel. Be diplomatic. Avoid any tendency to be arrogant. Domestic adjustment is in picture. Taurus, Libra individuals could be features. Your ability to sense potential is highlighted. Trust your ESP.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Accent continues on occult, hidden affairs, money that affects partner or mate. See as is, not in light of wishful thinking. Avoid tendency toward self-deception. You get unusual opportunity to perfect techniques. Pisces, Virgo could be involved.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Accent on closing legal transaction. You get down to business. Game playing is over — it is now the real thing, and stakes are substantial. Nothing is apt to be tepid; it is hot or cold, all or nothing. Capricorn figures prominently.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Work that seemed never-ending does reach a conclusion. You will be congratulated on job well done. Aries, Libra individuals cold be very much in picture. Find ways to enhance visibility of product, talent. You are due to attract larger audience.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Get to core — express and create. Your style, impressions attract more persons. Personal magnetism flows. You could be more popular — and controversial. Member of opposite sex confides, confesses and asks for your understanding.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Basic issues dominate, especially where residence and family are concerned. Don't play games with security. Obtain legal green light, guarantee. Older individual might share valuable experience. Be adult enough to accept help if you need it.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Travel, decisions, calls, ideas and messages seem to converge simultaneously. Obviously, the need is to be flexible, versatile. You expand base of operations. Life becomes more interesting due to social contact. Gain indicated through written word.

IF TODAY IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you are dynamic, stubborn, were on your own early, have original concepts and find that Scorpio persons play important roles in your life. You are entering a new phase, a fresh cycle — many past disappointments fade as you have chance at real happiness. You're going to get more authority and will prove your principles are valid.

Here is a pleasant little game that will give you a message every day. It's a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner of the rectangle and check every one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.

An Open Door To Better Health

The blood test. That was the worst part.

Just ask Spencer Robinson or any of the other approximately 160 Lincoln elementary school students who received free physical examinations at the Open Door Health Center earlier this month.

Having your finger pricked is nobody's idea of a good time. But doctors, nurses and other grown-ups seem to think it's the thing to do — or have done. And so it was.

They also think it's a good idea to wrap a strange looking bandage around your arm, pump it full of air and listen to your—arm? Blood pressure check, they call it.

From a child's point of view, the Open Door physicals — which are offered annually to children attending Title I (low income) schools — are an eye-widening experience.

In addition to the usual tests associated with a physical examination, the children are given a dental examination (including instruction in toothbrushing), and vision, hearing and speech screening.

This year, the fourth for the physicals, it took four weekday evenings to squeeze in all 160 youngsters scheduled to participate.

According to Open Door Director Leslie Rutherford, about 90 people volunteered their time to help with the exams. Most of the volunteers were professionals — doctors, nurses, lab technicians, dentists, dental hygienists, medical technologists, optometrists and members of the University of Nebraska-Lincoln department of speech and hearing.

All of the supplies used during the examinations were also donated, Ms. Rutherford said.

As a follow-up to the screenings, Open Door staff members will go to each of the youngster's homes to explain the results of the tests, she continued.

If a problem has been detected, Open Door staff members will then help parents locate the appropriate professional assistance, Ms. Rutherford said.

In addition, to ensure that the examination findings "stay with the child," the results are recorded on the youngster's public schools medical record.

Funded by the United Fund and the Lincoln Foundation, Open Door conducts the annual physical screenings in cooperation with the Lincoln public schools.

ACTION LINE

DIAL 477-2121

Or Write P.O. Box 81689, Lincoln, NE 68501

We have a contract signed by Martin Roofing saying that an Orville Martin would install a roof on our house March 1 or when weather permitted. We gave him a check for $255, which was cashed immediately. We have not been able to contact him since then. We are trying to live on a pension and can't afford to just give money away. Can you help?

—C. R. Rasmussen, Lincoln

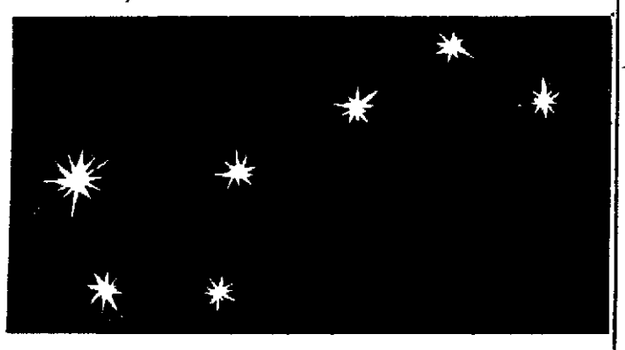
ACTION LINE: Your problem apparently is not an uncommon one. Jerry Fennell, head of the state attorney general's office consumer protection division, said his office currently is investigating complaints against several roofing companies in the Lincoln area. At least one man being investigated has used several aliases in taking payment for roofing work that is never completed. Fennell suggests that you write or call his office to report your complaint.

The Lincoln Better Business Bureau has an unresolved complaint against Orville Martin, who listed the address of Martin Roofing as 5736 Judson. A spokesman for the bureau says they have been unable to contact Martin at that address and understand that he has moved or left town. You could also file your complaint with the Better Business Bureau.

The spokesman reminded customers that they can always call or write the bureau before they contract for such work to see whether there have been complaints against the firm or individual.

We had a discussion about the "Big Dipper." Do the people in Germany, France and the rest of the world ever get to see it?

—P.H., Swanton



ACTION LINE: The group of stars commonly known as the Big Dipper is visible in most inhabited areas of the world, according to Don Taylor, associate professor of physics and astronomy at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln. Persons in Europe on about the same longitude as Nebraska see it just as you do. Its position in the sky changes as the seasons change. Persons in the southern hemisphere, such as in South America and Africa, also see the Big Dipper but it appears much closer to the horizon there. The only location from which the Big Dipper cannot be seen is near the South Pole.

Are there any laws in Lincoln regarding the age at which a minor child can be left at home without a babysitter?

—A.G., Lincoln

ACTION LINE: There are no Lincoln city ordinances or state laws on leaving minor children alone in the home, according to Diana Bloss, deputy county attorney. If the county attorney's office receives a complaint that minor children are being left alone frequently, the complaint would be investigated and the parents might be charged with neglect of a child, she said.

I bought a new Gibson guitar from Dietze Music in Lincoln. While it was still under warranty, the paint started migrating. I was told it would have to be sent to the factory and would be returned in eight or nine weeks. That was May 10, and I still haven't got my guitar. Would you please see what you can do for me?

—Roy W. Williams, Waverly

ACTION LINE: Doug Fenton Jr., guitar department manager for Dietze Music House, 1208 O St., says he's as frustrated by the delay as you are. Fenton said he has contacted the Gibson Co. about the repairs each time you have inquired. He contacted Gibson's repair foreman again Oct. 21 and was promised that the guitar would be returned by Oct. 28. Fenton asks that you check with him on that date. Please contact ACTION LINE again if the problem isn't resolved.

I have a National Defense Student Loan with Oklahoma State University. I mailed in several payments without receiving a statement from them. They mistakenly applied the payments to the principal and considered the regular due interest payments delinquent. Now I have been billed for the total balance of the loan plus $18 in late fees. I've written them twice but can't get any satisfaction.

—Harold Williams Jr., Sterling, Colo.

ACTION LINE: The Oklahoma State University Office of Student Financial Aid understandably was reluctant to give any information about your loan to anyone but you. Mrs. Betty Hazelbaker, assistant director of financial aid for administrative services, suggested that you send a registered letter to her personally explaining your problem. Her mailing address is Oklahoma State University, Dept. of Student Financial Aid, Room 102 Hanner Hall, Stillwater, Okla. 74074.

I would like to know the address of the Robert Blake fan club. Thank you.

—Laurie Umbulls, Lincoln

ACTION LINE: Margo Boettiger, Robert Blake's secretary for ABC televison's "Baretta," said a fan club recently has been organized. You can get information by writing Robert Blake Fan Club, P.O. Box 36371, Los Angeles, Calif. 90036.

On Nov. 19, 1974, I sent an order for three gift subscriptions and one renewal for myself for the magazine "Women's Circle Home Cooking" published by Tower Press, Inc., of Seabrook, N.H. My check was canceled but none of us have received even one copy. I wrote the company and was assured we could begin receiving our magazines in July. Can you help me, please?

—Mrs. Clarence E. Boo, Geneva

ACTION LINE: Your magazines are on the way. A spokesman for Tower Press said your order inadvertently was never added to their shipping list. She apologized and promised to send you a letter this week telling you when to expect your first issues.
